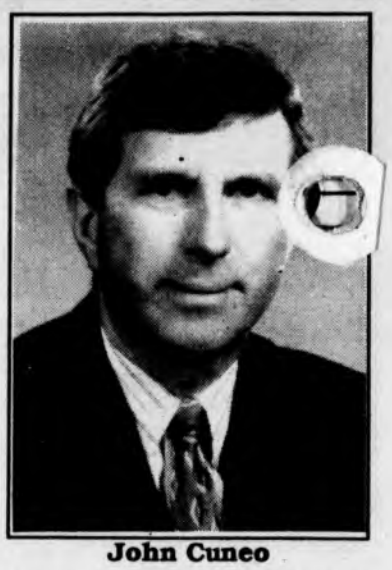
Cohasset resident John Cuneo has been elected president of the New England Broadcasting Association. He will oversee the 48-year-old non-profit organization, comprised of more than 1,000 professionals in the electronic media industry from throughout the region.



John Cuneo

Cuneo will manage and direct the board of directors and the executive committee to create and execute meaningful events to further the educational mission of NEBA.

Cuneo is a graduate of Boston College with an MBA from the University of Pittsburgh.

Siros Restaurant on Marina Bay in Quincy, owned by Cohasset resident Kristie Henriksen, is leading a group of local area restaurants in the newly formed Quincy Restaurants Against Hunger organization in providing meals for the hungry of the Quincy Crisis Center.

The program, which began Feb. 21, will continue on every third Tuesday of this year and on additional dates when needed during the colder months and the holiday season.

Henriksen, who will assist in the entire operation, has offered her own vehicle for use in the pick-up and transportation of the food. Esther Sanger, founder of the Quincy Crisis Center, will supervise the distribution along with Henriksen.

The food is distributed to the Covenant Congregational Church in Quincy, where the Crisis Center provides meals for the needy.

The Hollow, Varsity Club, La Paloma, Raffael's, Pat Flanagan's and Finnian's restaurants are also participating in the endeavor.

Emotional debate nearly derails train meeting

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

What was supposed to have been a question and answer session on the return of the Old Colony Railroad erupted into a shouting match several times Tuesday night as opponents of the project accused the MBTA representative running the meeting of being ill-prepared and condescending.

While train foes did most the talking, the audience appeared to be evenly divided, since those speaking in favor of the train periodically received enthusiastic applause.

Andrew Brennan, Manager of Environmental Affairs for the MBTA, conducted the session, which lasted nearly 90 minutes. discussed financing, safety, pollution and transportation policy with the 75 people in the Cohasset High School cafeteria.

HORNS WON'T BE A BLAST

Calling street crossings "the most critical issue," Brennan explained that the T will conduct safety seminars for police and in the schools.

The warning system will consist of gates which will descend as the gain approaches and horns.

Single winter school vacation week adopted

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

To bring more continuity to the school year, the school department will eliminate nearly all early-release days starting in 1995-96, Supt. Stephen Hart said.

There will also be a single vacation week in March instead of the February and April vacation weeks.

"There's been support from parents for a change and what was done will increase educational continuity," Hart said.

All students will still have 180 instructional days as state law requires, but the year will not be as broken up as it was previously.

This year there are 16 early release days for elementary students and nine at the secondary level. There will be 27 weeks of five-day instruction in 1995-96. This year because of early-release days and holidays, students only had 13 weeks when they went to school all day Monday through Friday.

At the elementary level there will still be two early-release days for teacher-parent conferences — this year there are four for conferences. Hart said the extra parent-teacher conferences will be scheduled in non school time.

In keeping with the school department's commitment to teacher training, next year teachers will have a full day for professional development, Hart said. The

Pay raises approved

Town meeting approved funding three-year contract settlements with three of the four town unions last month.

The police, fire and library contracts will cost the town $20,038, $32,446 and $5,047 respectively out of next year's fiscal year budget.

Police will get a two percent raise in July and two percent more halfway through fiscal year 1996, Personnel Committee Chairman Peter Pacetti said.

Then over the next two fiscal years, police will get two percent in July and one percent increases six months later.

Pacetti said police agreed to reduce overtime by $10,000; agreed to supervise the E-9-1-1 civilian dispatchers; and agreed to accept a bi-weekly pay system.

Firefighters and members of the library union will receive 2-1/2 percent in FY'96 & FY'97 and 3 percent in FY'98. They also accepted a $300 up-front signing bonus, Pacetti said. Firefighters agreed accept bi-weekly pay to drop any bargaining issues over the new E-9-1-1 civilian dispatchers.

Selectmen and a majority of the advisory board recommended approval of the contracts.

Pacetti said the police received slightly more but did not get a signing bonus and gave up some overtime requirements.

He explained that most of the collective bargaining was conducted without "use of an attorney to any great degree" which saved the town money.

License your dog by May 1

The deadline for licensing dogs in Cohasset is May 1. A $25 fine will be due after that date. Town Clerk office hours are Monday through Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

If unable to go to the Town Clerk's office, a check for $8 (neutered and spayed animals) or $15 (male and female animals) may be mailed to: Town Clerk, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025 along with a note listing type of animal, owner's name, address and telephone number, breed, color, dog's name and a copy of the dog's rabies certificate.

Register for override election

The last day to register for the Override Election, May 13, is Friday, April 21 from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Town Clerk's office.

Music Circus tent update

Last Wednesday, the planning board unanimously agreed to recommend that the board of appeals allow the South Shore Music Circus to set up a secondary tent at the facility.

The tent has been used a few times each season since 1952, but a complaint from abutters brought the issue to the attention of local authorities.

Children's birthday parties and receptions are held in the tent. It will not be used for additional seating.

The ZBA will make the final decision in the case and took the matter under advisement last Thursday.

Shawmut sign opposed

In keeping with their traditional aversion to excessive signage, planning board members last week voted to oppose giving the Shawmut Bank permission to display its Indian logo on a separate sign.

The bank wanted to hoist the Indian up on the building at 380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

However, planners felt that to allow the Indian would have been unfair, since they had already denied additional signs to other businesses, in particular Appleseed's clothing store in Cohasset Plaza.

The planning board recommendation will be forwarded to the appeals board, which has final authority.

Bank plans recommended

A small expansion to the BayBank building, 780 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, was supported last week by the planning board, with the condition that a parking plan be devised for Tedeschi Plaza.

The final fate of the addition rests with the appeals board, which will receive the planning board recommendation.

Five parking spaces will be lost to the addition to the front of the building, will include space for an automatic teller machine.

Liquor license is issued

Selectmen approved issuing an all alcoholic beverage license to DiNero's, Inc., a new restaurant which will open at the former With Richards restaurant/lounge site at 235 Hull Street.

DiNero's, which will seat 85, will offer a full-service menu.

The new owner Richard W. Stilphen, who also owns Isaac's in Plymouth and the Bay Club in Hingham, owned With Richards from 1976 until 1988 when he sold it to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Doucette. After Mr. Doucette died, his wife was unable to make a viable go thereafter, Stilphen's attorney Gregory Sullivan said.

"Mr. Stilphen recently "reacquired" the property," attorney Sullivan said.

The site has undergone extensive renovations including the addition of a wheelchair ramp. The restaurant will be managed by Robert Infusino who was an assistant manager at With Richards from 1984-88 and is currently assistant manager at Isaac's in Plymouth.

Because the wheelchair ramp rests on town property, before opening Stilphen must also obtain a license to utilize the land from the town and sign a contract indemnifying the town from any liability from use of that town land.

School board reorganizes

Ralph Kidder took over the reins as school committee chairman last week. Nancy Sandell will serve as vice chairman and Jim Kirk will continue as secretary.

Survey results mailed

This week the school committee mailed a two-page summary of the findings of the school survey to all Cohasset households. The survey, mailed to all eligible voters in town, had a response rate of 18 percent or 846. Half the respondents had school-age children. On average, those who completed the survey have lived in town 15 years; say they frequently or sometimes attend town meeting; and always vote in town elections, the school committee said.

Board member named

This week, selectmen appointed H. Edward Brennock as the George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 designee to the Veteran Memorial Overseers Committee.

Exhaust bid is awarded

At $26,029, Hanover-based Air Cleaning Specialists, Inc. was sole bidder to install a "source capture" exhaust removal system for the fire department. Fire Chief Roger Lincoln recommended that the company be awarded the contract because its proposal met the specifications for the job.

Historical society's fans have a language all their own

By Laura Ricketson Doherty
Mariner correspondent

Not too long ago, I happened to meet a returned Peace Corps volunteer who had spent two years in the Fiji Islands. He had in his possession an enormous straw fan which, I remarked, almost seemed too cumbersome to use. Among Fijians, he explained, the size of the fan is an indication of the status of its owner — the one he possessed had actually belonged to a princess of the royal family, now living in Wellesley.

Although there are no fans belonging to Fijian princesses in the exhibit in the window of Goodale Insurance Company at 3 South Main St., the romance and wide variety of the objects displayed there are difficult to resist. They are a part of the extensive collection of fans belonging to the Cohasset Historical Society, which member Martha Hurtig is pleased to bring to public attention. This is the second fan display which Hurtig and her committee members have arranged.

Hurtig says that she assumes most of the fans were donated by Cohasset people but is not sure.

"Most of the collection, perhaps as much as 90 percent, is not documented," she says.

It's only been in the last 10 years that the society has developed the capability of keeping accurate records. Guidelines for the society to follow in accepting acquisitions are now available as is a special computer program to record them.

In an attempt to document the fans, an amateur collector was contacted. Although she was unable to provide the necessary information, it was learned that at one time, there were actually two fan factories in Weymouth.

Research indicates that Edmund Soper Hunt, owner of one of the factories, was also the inventor of the lifesaving buoy and owner of a company of fireworks which won him gold medals in world competitions. The fact that one of his fans is held by the subject of a portrait by William Morris Hunt now owned by the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston demonstrates the esteem in which his fans were held.

Of the many fans in the society's display, my favorite is the one in the front left which is made up of silk violets on painted stem sticks and seems particularly appropriate to the present season. Also included is a 1924 signed paper fan advertising the Aux Galeries Lafayette as a shop selling the best millinery in all Paris. The black feather fan on wooden sticks with silver and gold design is also impressive as is a large paper fan with a bullfight scene on one side and Spanish ladies and gentlemen on the other.

Twirling it in the right hand signaled love of another but drawing it across one's cheek meant, I love you. Fanning slowly indicated the user was married—fast, engaged. Closing it indicated a desire to speak to someone but a shut fan meant the "fanee" had changed her mind.

One had to be very careful in how one used the fan, according to the explanation of the language of the fan provided as part of the display. If, by chance, it was carried in the right hand in front of the face, it was an invitation to the observer to follow. Twirling it in the right hand signaled love of another but drawing it across one's cheek meant, I love you. Fanning slowly indicated the user was married — fast, engaged. Closing it indicated a desire to speak to someone but a shut fan meant the "fanee" had changed her mind.

Although the window area available is small, Hurtig is enthusiastic about the exhibit. One of the society's major problems is lack of space.

In June, some of the remarkable gowns from its collections will be exhibited at the Wilson House across from Cohasset Hardware on Elm St. As to the window at 3 South Main St., Hurtig suggests that townspeople keep watching for changes.

Historical society's fans have a language all their own

By Laura Ricketson Doherty
Mariner correspondent

Not too long ago, I happened to meet a returned Peace Corps volunteer who had spent two years in the Fiji Islands. He had in his possession an enormous straw fan which, I remarked, almost seemed too cumbersome to use. Among Fijians, he explained, the size of the fan is an indication of the status of its owner — the one he possessed had actually belonged to a princess of the royal family, now living in Wellesley.

Although there are no fans belonging to Fijian princesses in the exhibit in the window of Goodale Insurance Company at 3 South Main St., the romance and wide variety of the objects displayed there are difficult to resist. They are a part of the extensive collection of fans belonging to the Cohasset Historical Society, which member Martha Hurtig is pleased to bring to public attention. This is the second fan display which Hurtig and her committee members have arranged.

Hurtig says that she assumes most of the fans were donated by Cohasset people but is not sure.

"Most of the collection, perhaps as much as 90 percent, is not documented," she says.

It's only been in the last 10 years that the society has developed the capability of keeping accurate records. Guidelines for the society to follow in accepting acquisitions are now available as is a special computer program to record them.

In an attempt to document the fans, an amateur collector was contacted. Although she was unable to provide the necessary information, it was learned that at one time, there were actually two fan factories in Weymouth.

Research indicates that Edmund Soper Hunt, owner of one of the factories, was also the inventor of the lifesaving buoy and owner of a company of fireworks which won him gold medals in world competitions. The fact that one of his fans is held by the subject of a portrait by William Morris Hunt now owned by the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston demonstrates the esteem in which his fans were held.

Of the many fans in the society's display, my favorite is the one in the front left which is made up of silk violets on painted stem sticks and seems particularly appropriate to the present season. Also included is a 1924 signed paper fan advertising the Aux Galeries Lafayette as a shop selling the best millinery in all Paris. The black feather fan on wooden sticks with silver and gold design is also impressive as is a large paper fan with a bullfight scene on one side and Spanish ladies and gentlemen on the other.

Twirling it in the right hand signaled love of another but drawing it across one's cheek meant, I love you. Fanning slowly indicated the user was married—fast, engaged. Closing it indicated a desire to speak to someone but a shut fan meant the "fanee" had changed her mind.

One had to be very careful in how one used the fan, according to the explanation of the language of the fan provided as part of the display. If, by chance, it was carried in the right hand in front of the face, it was an invitation to the observer to follow. Twirling it in the right hand signaled love of another but drawing it across one's cheek meant, I love you. Fanning slowly indicated the user was married — fast, engaged. Closing it indicated a desire to speak to someone but a shut fan meant the "fanee" had changed her mind.

Although the window area available is small, Hurtig is enthusiastic about the exhibit. One of the society's major problems is lack of space.

In June, some of the remarkable gowns from its collections will be exhibited at the Wilson House across from Cohasset Hardware on Elm St. As to the window at 3 South Main St., Hurtig suggests that townspeople keep watching for changes.

At Charter School

'Practical' approach appeals to Cohasset parent

By Alice C. Coyle
Journal & Mariner Staff

The application process is over and the South Shore Charter school has a full 150 student enrollment and a waiting list for its first year in business.

Students from 12 South Shore communities, including five from Hingham and 13 from Cohasset will attend the innovative new public school in September and and now that recruiting is complete, South Shore Charter School founder headmaster Timothy Anderson is hard at work on the schools curriculum development.

The backbone of the program is project-based learning that integrates learning and helps students grasp all academic disciplines and career competencies - skills that prepare them for college, the work place and life. Life skills joins math and science and humanities in a challenging curriculum that students and parents help to shape.

Anderson said that the school will encourage heavy parental involvement and offer curriculum that allows students to learn at their own pace.

All grades, test results, student work and teacher comments are accessible via computer in what Anderson calls an "interrelational" data base. Parents can tune into their student's education by switching on the home computer and make comments of their own.

The Charter School's progressive curriculum is of particular interest to Cohasset resident Catherine Davis, who intends to send her daughter Molly to the new public school this fall.

Davis, said she had heard about the charter school concept long before the Hull school was given its charter and noted that she has always been interested in an alternative education for her daughter.

Competency-based learning in which life skills are taught as well as math, science and the humanities makes good sense, Davis said.

"I've been looking for that kind of practical approach," said Davis, who pointed out that she wants her daughter to be challenged and to come out of school prepared for life..

Davis also favors the personalized learning plans at the Charter School that allows students to move along at their own pace, moving ahead as soon as they master the subject.

Heavy parental involvement is also a plus, she said.

"Parents will have an active involvement in how the school runs and that appeals to me," she said.

And it appeals to Molly as well, said Davis, adding "she's ready and willing to go."

Davis said her daughter has no social qualms about the switch.

"She can make friends anywhere," Davis said, noting "we live in a transient society."

And Davis is optimistic about the school's success.

"So far, so good," she says of the curriculum and parent information sessions.

But she is also willing to be patient.

"It takes time to build a good school. I'd like to see it done right," she said.

Davis feels the same way about her only child's education.

"I only have one chance to do this right."

And if it works out, Davis said she knows several other residents who are considering the school.

"We're the litmus test for a lot of people in Cohasset," she said.

As for the controversial funding of the school, the state requires that the tuition money follows the student, Davis said she has no problems with it.

"It's a public school and where I spend money should be my choice."

Greenbush hearing April 20 in Hingham

The MBTA has announced the release of the Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Statement/Report for Transportation Improvements in the Greenbush Line Corridor. The document is being printed and will be available at the State Transportation Library in Boston and at public libraries in Greenbush corridor towns by March 22.

Three public hearings have been scheduled at which comments and testimony will be taken. A formal transcript will be made of the proceedings. The MBTA will not answer questions about the project or respond to comments at the public hearings because the public information meetings were designed for this purpose. Public hearings are scheduled as follows:

State Transportation Building, 10 Park Plaza, Boston, Wednesday, April 12, 1 p.m.; Scituate High School Auditorium, 606 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Rt. 3A at First Parish Road), Wednesday, April 12, 7 p.m.; Hingham High School Auditorium, 41 Pleasant St., Thursday, April 20, 7 p.m.

Written comments will be accepted at the public hearings or may be sent to the Federal Transit Administration regional office in Cambridge or to the Massachusetts Secretary of Environmental Affairs in Boston. Comments are due by Monday, May 22, 1995. Anyone with questions about the meetings or hearings, reviewing a copy of the SDEIS/R or about submitting comments may contact Joseph Connor, MBTA Project Manager, at (617) 722-3422.

Ambulance billing update

The town billed for 21 ambulance transports last month and collected $6,347.03 out of a possible $7,269.96. So far this fiscal year, which ends June 30, the fire department has collected $71,379.52 in ambulance bills out of a possible $75,538.47.

day will be staggered by grade-level and substitute teachers will be called to fill in. Under the current system, early release days are used for professional development.

Although changes in vacation and early release days are not required under the Education Reform Act passed in 1993 — they are in keeping with the spirit of the law, Hart said.

Students will receive about 1,020 hours of instruction at the secondary level next year which is more than the 990 hours mandated under the law. This is being accomplished by lengthening the secondary school day by about 12 minutes.

Also every day, secondary school students will have one 70-minute period which will rotate among the subject areas so all teachers can take advantage of the extended class over the seven- or eight-day cycle. The other periods are 45 minutes long.

Hart said the school department is continuing its commitment toward teacher training by providing of professional development time during the year.

paper family," said William R. Elfers, CNC chairman and chief executive officer. "This is an important franchise covering the South Shore, an area where we have no current circulation. With this transaction, we will now be able to offer advertisers the opportunity to reach over two million readers in the suburban Boston market through the Community Newspaper advertising network."

Mariner/Pennysaver publisher Margaret Smoragiewicz stated that the Community Newspaper Company focuses on total quality management.

"I have every reason to believe that the Mariner and Pennysaver will grow and flourish as part of Community Newspapers," she said.

Recycling grant offered

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) will award Cohasset two paint cabinets and one shed valued at $3,472.

Cohasset was selected because its application demonstrated a commitment and resources to offer a comprehensive paint recycling program. To receive the grant award, Cohasset's program must be a approved as a surplus paint collection center under the regulations of the state Division of Hazardous Materials. The town must complete the application for approval and return it to the DEP.

March 21 was a special day for the Chase family of Jerusalem Rd., that was the date that Christine Rose Chase was born! Mom and dad, Laura and Mark, thrilled of course, and can expect a lot of help with Christine — siblings Mac, Jacqueline and Tommy will all be there to "help."

Christine can also call her grandparents, Edward and Claire Chase of Nichols Rd., or Estelle and Gerard Kimmett of Winter Park, Fla. Boy, won't the Easter Bunny have fun hiding goodies at the Chases' house this year! Congratulations to you all.

Belated birthday greetings go out to two special people this week. Janet Malloy's birthday was March 31, we sure hope that the day was a happy one!

And, April 5 was the day for Mark Rattenbury to celebrate the beginning of another year — here's to a great one, Mark!

Kristin K. Martin, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John D. Martin Jr., received her Bachelor of Arts degree from Middlebury College after completing academic requirements at the 194-year-old Vermont liberal arts institution. She is one of 81 February graduates that make up the "Class of 1994 and a Half." Since February graduates have to wait until spring for the formal commencement, the College invites them to create their own mid-year ceremony. This year, most of the students who had completed all of their academic requirements chose the College's Snow Bowl for the festivities.

After skiing down the mountain in caps and gowns, the graduates were met at the bottom of the slopes by deans and president John M. McCardell Jr. who gave them certificates of achievement and an invitation to return in May to receive their diplomas.

What a super way to end a college career in Vermont. And surely a memorable one. Congratulations Kristin.

Sondra Rose Hart, who is a big five-year-old, is pleased to announce the birth of her brand new baby sister, Giselle Maris Hart.

Giselle was born March 6 at Boston Regional Medical Center (formerly New England Memorial Hospital). Mom and dad, Mark and Jean Marie (Willwerth) Hart are so happy too. As are Giselle's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Willwerth Jr. of 381 Jerusalem Rd. and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Hart of 18 Donnell St., Cambridge.

Sondra and Giselle and their parents l[illegible] in Siasconset, hopefully we will be seeing them "around town."

We want everyone to give Sarah Bertovich a round of applause, she was a competitor in the National Geographic Society National Geography Bee finals at Clark University April 7. What an honor! We know that you did well Sarah, in fact we could have sworn that we spotted you on television when they showed the contest on the news — congratulations.

Students at Gould Academy took their learning out of the classroom during the first week of March. Senior Melinda Johansen, the daughter of Frederick and Marnie Johansen and the late Pamela MacLean Johansen, and other members of the senior class, worked on service projects at various locations around New England. Melinda's group helped in the construction of a boardwalk at the Saco Health Preserve in Saco, Maine. This experience is part of Gould's annual Four Points Program which provides students with the opportunity to learn through experience and to apply their education in problem-solving outside the classroom.

Even though the weather was really cold, all of the kiddos had an "eggsellant" time at the Easter Egg Hunt sponsored by the Cohasset Recreation Commission. There were goodies for everyone, and seeing Mr. and Mrs. Easter Bunny arrive on the fire truck was great fun (Mrs. Bunny looked splendid in her yellow frock)! 'Bleak House'

There's real division on the board of selectmen about how to corral the rising cost of special legal counsel handling issues surrounding Cohasset Heights Landfill.

The board backed off its promise this week to issue a Request for Proposal (RFP) to shop the market and see if the town is getting the best value for the dollar.

This seemed like a logical step in light of the fact the town could spend upwards of $80,000 in engineering costs and legal fees for the remainder of this fiscal year — the lion's share to defend a lawsuit CHL has launched against the town. That figure goes on top of several hundred thousand dollars spent over the last decade to fight CHL's proposed expansion.

But the majority of the board of selectmen now feel that issuing an RFP would be a mistake at this time. Pressure from the board of health and conservation commission appears to have swayed Selectman Jane Goedecke who changed her position and voted with Selectmen Merle Brown and Michael Sullivan not to proceed with the RFP this week.

There are several issues here which are confusing because they're all muddled up.

First of all, selectmen did say at town meeting they would issue an RFP for special counsel when recommending voters support the board of health article asking for money to pay legal fees for the remainder of this fiscal year. Board members disagree on the clarity of that promise — and while its rescission is not illegal — it is a breach of faith.

Secondly, proponents of an RFP say it doesn't necessarily mean the town will change special legal counsel anytime soon, if at all. Warner & Stackpole and its attorney Michael Leon have represented the town for nearly a decade and may be the cheapest and best around. A law firm of the stature of Warner & Stackpole should be able to compete and continue to represent the town well during the RFP process. Yet there's fear among some selectmen and other town board members that the firm's legal efforts might be affected by such an action.

Thirdly, there's a communication gap among town boards that are dealing with CHL issues. It appears that the conservation commission and board of health were taken aback by the selectmen's potential activism on the issue of seeking an RFP for special legal counsel.

On the progressive side, selectmen did decide this week to have town counsel Richard Henderson be a liaison between the town boards and Warner & Stackpole. This may help save money and discourage board members from calling W&S directly and running up costs that way.

As Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said: Henderson "can get more from special counsel in 1/2 hour than I can in two or three hours."

The famous lawsuit Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce, which Charles Dickens described in his novel "Bleak House" outlasted generations of lawyers, the lawsuit had gone on for so long, no one could remember what had started it.

In a landfill story last week, Kevin O'Donnell of Fair Oaks Lane remarked that that lawsuit ended when the litigants finally exhausted their resources and had no money left to pay for more court battles.

The town and the landfill, by contrast, still have money.

"The dump is still open and making money," O'Donnell said. "And the town is still collecting taxes."

Let's hope the selectmen and boards of health and conservation remember who's working for whom and whose paying the bills.

Return of railroad is supported

letters

To the Editor:

As a Cohasset native and lifetime resident, I think it only right that I should add my two-cents-worth about the train.

I lived with the train less than 30 feet from my house for over 50 years, and it never caused me a bit of trouble.

I remember when the round house was in Cohasset and heavy freights would be switched just opposite my barn. The barn is still standing today. There is no record of the age of my house at the Cohasset Town Hall, so it must be as historical as any house in Hingham.

I have kept most of the recent letters that have been published concerning the train and have never read such a crack-pot collection of ideas. Apparently these criminals who will stop off in town will do their thing and then wait at the platform for the next train back.

I sincerely hope that I will live long enough to hear the sound of the train approaching my house again.

Senior citizen favors train

To the Editor:

I favor restoration of railroad commuter service to Greenbush. Many South Shore residents who work in or, for other reasons, travel to Boston will benefit. The elderly without a car, no access to a car, or who can't drive because of health or other handicaps will especially benefit. They need to have accessible the amenities of the city including medical services and hospitals. It is personally selfish and automobile elitist when railroad abutters think only of their self-interest and fail to address the needs of all the members of our South Shore communities, including us seniors.

Police detail duty is defended

To the Editor:

This is in response to a recent letter and public scrutiny regarding off duty "Detail" pay.

As I'm sure you are aware, I am second on the list of "Scofflaws" who benefited from off duty detail pay in fiscal year 1994. This extra income went towards such extravagances as continuing my education and saving for a down payment on a house. In the course of my extra duties, I have rendered first aid, arrested outstanding warrant holders, and given countless directions to lost motorists.

It is naive to think that utilities will pass along savings to the rate payer. Utilities will absorb the savings and leave the public with poorly trained flagmen who are not familiar with the towns and cities we serve on a 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-a-week basis.

Stop cop-bashing and making a tough, demanding, potentially life-threatening profession more difficult than it already has become.

RFP for landfill legal costs supported

To the Editor:

I am writing to voice my concern over the reversal Monday night by the Selectmen on the intent to issue an RFP (request for proposal) for legal assistance for the board of health. I find this decision ill-advised on several points.

1) An RFP demonstrates fiscal responsibility — it will provide a basis of comparison. How can we know we are paying a fair rate for representation unless we establish what is the market rate? The RFP is simply shopping the market to determine the best value for the town.

2) There is a strong probability an RFP may confirm the present situation as the most efficient use of resources. In this case the Selectmen can evidence this procedure as a validation of our present path.

3) The RFP process could provide a point of negotiation with our present Counsel which could result in a better hourly rate for the town.

4) The execution of the RFP will fulfill the promise of the Board of Selectmen to the Townspeople at Town Meeting in response to questions about an additional $80,000+ to supplement unbudgeted legal fees for the Board of Health.

I am acutely concerned with the future implications of maintaining our present arrangement without review. If we continue to run legal costs at an unusually high ($200+/hr.), we will quickly see costs escalate beyond what the electorate will support. We will need all possible public support to continue a successful fight to prevent the Cohasset Heights LTD expansion in 1996. By backing out of this promised review the Town leadership has lost a way to validate our expenses and decisions. We will have little evidence to defend the radically higher legal costs looming in the near future.

If the town support waivers at the 11th hour: we can be assured of a new Mt. Trashmore (with an oceanview) and some 3A widening for a turning lane onto Crocker Lane for those out-of-state trash haulers.

Health board explains reasons for sticking with legal counsel

(Editor's note: the following letter was sent to selectmen)

Subject: Special legal counsel for Cohasset Heights landfill

Dear Chairman Brown:

As an elected official and an informed and very concerned citizen of the Town of Cohasset, I am respectfully requesting that the board of selectmen reconsider its decision to solicit proposals for special counsel services dealing with Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) legal issues. I believe that issuing a Request For Proposal (RFP) and changing special counsel at this point in time is not in the best interest of the Town of Cohasset for the following reasons:

1) Warner & Stackpole, specifically Mr. Michael Leon, has provided all legal services and only those legal services requested by the board of health. Mr. Leon has on numerous occasions offered recommendations pertaining to various CHL issues. During the last three years, the board of health has pursued courses of action recommended by Mr. Leon related to financial assurances and the permitting process for the Area V Expansion. Unfortunately, these two issues expended all of the board of health's energies and approved budgets for special counsel services. Addressing these two issues did not allow the board of health to pursue other courses of action recommended by Mr. Leon including enforcement of CHL site assignment violations with respect to operating hours and enforcement of the Water Resource District bylaw. In fact, litigation initiated by CHL against the conservation commission for actions taken by the conservation commission related to wetlands violations, and litigation initiated by CHL against the town related to the Water Resource District depleted all of the approved special counsel budget for Fiscal Year 1995 and required additional appropriations at the special town meetings held in October, 1994 and March, 1995. In addition, Mr. Leon has provided legal advice during the last eight (8) months, which has been followed by the conservation commission with regard to the wetlands issues. Money has not been available for the board of health to actively pursue enforcement of the CHL site assignment.

2) Camp, Dresser & McKee Inc. (CDM), the board of health's engineering consultant for all matters related to CHL, has consistently agreed with the courses of action recommended by Warner & Stackpole. The

E-9-1-1 stalls move to five-town fire district

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

Four years after a study was begun, a regionalized fire and rescue district is still a distant idea, with no concrete plan for implementation any time soon.

In 1991, the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate embarked on a study to determine the feasibility of such a regionalized service. Consultants were hired with $30,000 received as a grant from the state Executive Office of Community Development, with the towns contributing 10 percent ($600 each) toward the study.

The final report was due at the end of 1994, but now officials say it will be submitted in late May.

Hingham executive secretary Charles Cristello said this week that the report was delayed when the towns were sidetracked by preparations for "Enhanced 911" service, which will go into effect on May 10.

In addition, officials also faced preparations of their budgets for reviews by their respective town boards, he said.

Officials contacted this week all believe the regional fire district is the best solution for the towns, both economically and from the standpoint of better service to residents.

"The whole purpose of regionalization is to improve service," Cohasset selectman Jane Goedecke said. With five towns working together, the services would improve without increases in costs.

Cohasset fire chief Roger Lincoln said response times would be the same, and there would be more firefighters on the first piece of apparatus to arrive at a call. There would also be more manpower available from other apparatus arriving later.

Where each town now has its own ladder truck, a regional fire district could have three, shared among the towns, Lincoln said. The ladder is usually the most expensive piece of apparatus, costly approximately $500,000.

Goedecke also said that a regional fire district "makes sense from a management standpoint." Personnel would also have greater opportunity for advancement, there would be "less redundancy," and better training available.

But Cristello said the regionalized fire district study might also be suffering from waning enthusiasm on the part of those involved in it.

"There's been a lots of work without tangible benefits," Cristello said. He added the last meeting the group had in the fall was "rather negative."

While a regional fire district would ultimately save the towns money, there would be initial "start-up" expenses, Cristello said.

"It's hard to sell people on a plan when the economies are long-term," he said.

Richard Wehter, fire chief in Hingham, also supports the proposal for a regional fire district, noting especially the greater opportunity for training. But he is not optimistic. This week he said, "It's a good idea but the bottom line is it's not do-able because no one wants to do it."

"The politicians don't want to let go," he added.

Cristello said the imminent adoption of the E911 not only turned attention away from the regional study but also complicates it.

He explained that all five towns are now combining police and fire dispatching within those communities. Creation of a regional fire dispatching system would defeat the purpose of consolidating the dispatch services within the towns.

"E911 made it more difficult to go forward," he said.

For example, in Hingham all emergency calls will be received at the police station. Civilian dispatchers will direct calls for the necessary response: police, fire, or ambulance. If dispatching was handled from a regional center, there could be occasions when there is no one at the police station, if all officers in Hingham are responding to calls.

To consolidate dispatching regionally would require "large capital costs," said Cristello.

But Cohasset selectman Peter Pratt believes any initial expenses would be worth it in the long run and should not stop regionalizing this service.

A regional dispatch system would have worked to moved along the regional fire district, Pratt said. All emergency calls are handled by trained professionals: dispatchers, fire personnel, and police. The dispatchers can work effectively and more economically from one location serving all five towns.

Pratt said when E911 becomes operative next month, the five towns will have a total of seven dispatchers: one each in Hingham, Cohasset, and Norwell, and two each in Hull and Scituate, where police and fire departments will have their own dispatchers. Regional dispatching would require half that number, reducing costs to the towns.

"I'm getting rather annoyed hearing why things can't be done," he said. "We have to stop listening to these excuses."

Pratt said the selectmen in the five towns support the regional fire district, and they should now take a leadership role to move toward that goal. He would like the see the task force comprised of one selectman from each town.

"We should be on the implementation path now," said Pratt.

One stumbling block, he conceded, is how the costs would be apportioned. Variables among the towns include population, valuation of real estate, and area. Further, there are demographics, he said, that a town with more elderly residents, for example, is likely to have a greater need for emergency medical services. In addition, the populations in some towns vary seasonally, with increases in Scituate and Hull during the summer months.

"But that's something that can be figured out," Pratt said, once the towns decide to move forward with a regional district.

Health board explains reasons. . .

board of health, CDM, and Warner & Stackpole have all agreed that actions against CHL, which are not based on factual evidence, would be difficult to defend in court. Indefensible actions could result in excessive and unnecessary legal expenses to the town.

3) Warner & Stackpole successfully defended all litigation, about six (6) cases, initiated by CHL against the town in the mid-1980s. CHL has initiated only two lawsuits against the town since about 1987. These two lawsuits were initiated by CHL during the last eight (8) months. The conservation commission litigation is very close to a very favorable settlement for the town. Mr. Leon and I believe that the Water Resource District bylaw has a very high probability of being upheld by a judgment in land court without a trial.

4) Warner & Stackpole and Mr. Michael Leon have a very good reputation in the area of environmental law dealing with landfills. I would like to suggest that the board of selectmen obtain from town counsel, and from other persons familiar with environmental law, an opinion on Warner & Stackpole's qualifications to adequately advise the Town of Cohasset on matters related to CHL.

5) Changing special counsel will result in unnecessary legal expenditures for the town associated with:

a) review of the complete CHL legal files to obtain a full understanding of the history of CHL and CHL's attitude with respect to litigation against the town;

b) review of the conservation commission litigation files in sufficient detail to allow the settlement, which is currently agreed upon between CHL's attorney and the town's special counsel, to reach conclusion in the near future;

c) review of the Water Resource District litigation files to allow uninterrupted defense of the town with the same high probability of upholding the bylaw as currently expected by the board of health.

6) Changing special counsel will not necessarily result in a change in the board of health's and the town's strategy for dealing with CHL issues. A new special counsel will not prevent litigation initiated by CHL against the town. The board of health requests budgets and implements strategies, which are considered in the best interest of the town. Approved budgets limit changes in strategy during any given fiscal year.

7) During the last three (3) years, the selectmen as a board have never approached the board of health to discuss concerns about the board of health's strategies on CHL issues, or to suggest changes in the board of health's strategy. Two informational meetings have been held during the last three years, one in early 1994 and April 4, 1995. At these two meetings, the board of selectmen did not provide any recommendations to the board of health related to specific CHL issues. If the board of selectmen, as an elected board, is not satisfied with the board of health's strategy for addressing CHL issues, then the selectmen as a board should discuss revising strategies with the board of health. However, the board of selectmen should become fully informed of the board of health's strategies and should consider all consequences associated with changing strategies prior to suggesting changes. In addition, the selectmen should also investigate sources of funding for implementing strategy changes prior to requesting such changes.

In conclusion, Warner & Stackpole has provided the legal services requested by the board of health, has successfully defended all litigation against the town, and has a good reputation in environmental law. CDM and the board of health have consistently agreed upon the course of actions for dealing with CHL issues. Changing special counsel will result in unnecessary legal expenditures to the town. For these reasons, I urge you to reconsider your decision to solicit proposals to change special counsel and to continue with Warner & Stackpole as special counsel in dealing with CHL matters.

The board of selectmen's decision to solicit proposals for special counsel will be discussed at the board of health's next two meetings to be held April 11 and April 25, 1995. Your input on the specific reasons why the selectmen believe the town needs a new special counsel would be valuable to the board of health for discussions at these meetings.

Chairman, Cohasset Board of Health

ConCom says don't switch legal firms

(Editor's note: the following letter was sent to selectmen).

Dear Merle and Members of the Board:

I am writing to you today to express my continued confidence in the choice of Michael Leon, Esq. of Warner & Stackpole as Special Environmental Counsel to the town with regard to Cohasset Heights Landfill related issues. I believe that our own Town Counsel, Richard Henderson, should receive the enthusiastic support of our town boards in his decision to retain such a well respected and highly regarded attorney to represent the interests of our town in this matter.

The thought of spending hundreds of thousands of taxpayers' dollars on legal and engineering costs associated with regulating the activity of a private landfill is, of course, disturbing to all of us. We must, however, keep in mind that as a community we have agreed that the operation of a landfill on Scituate Hill poses an environmental threat. There is documented evidence of contamination of the groundwater, alteration of the wetlands, and persistent odor problems.

As the responsible town boards, we have acted to protect our community, particularly our valuable water resources. The owners of CHL have responded by instituting litigation against the town, and by continuing to press for expansion of their operation. We are in the unfortunate position of having to spend our scarce resources in response to these actions. Our only other recourse, in my opinion, is to accept the expansion and the environmental damage to our town.

I urge you all to reconsider your decision to question our counsel at this time. While we are all deeply concerned about the financial costs to our community, I believe that the best course, at present, would be to exhibit tighter management controls on all legal activities through the Office of Town Counsel. As Chairman of the Cohasset Conservation Commission, I would be willing to work with all of you in establishing such a system.

Thank you for your consideration, and if I can be of any assistance, please let me know.

Roseanne McMorris

Cellucci to speak at dinner

The South Shore Annual Spring Republican Dinner, to be held Wednesday, April 26, at 6:30 p.m. at the historic Unitarian Parish House on Cohasset Common, will be highlighted by remarks by Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci concerning State House legislation.

Other invited state leaders include state minority leader Brian Lees, Ed Teague of Yarmouth, Sen. Robert Hedlund, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Sheriff Peter Forman of Plymouth, Commissioner Robert Stone and Rep. Michael Sullivan.

The following will be recruiting gourmet cooks: Mark Baker, R. Murray Campbell, William Grimm, Jean Muir, Jil O'Donnell, Samuel Pease, Pat Buckley, Lillian Curley, Beth Marsen-Gilman, Barbara Meehan, Matt Steele, Martha Gjesteby, Peter Guild, Kevin O'Donnell, Dr. Ed Woods, Judith Volungis, George Watts, Janet Fogarty, Ann Collins, Carolyn Van Tine, Susan Thayer, Shawnie Littlehale and Ann Hilbert.

All residents of the South Shore are invited, but reservations are required. A $15 donation is requested. For reservations and information call Jean Muir (383-1850), Polly Logan (383-0031), Carl Harris (749-7115), Ethel Wheatley (545-7997), Rita Strong (508/934-0880), Rick Coughlin (335-0717), Tom Barry (508/834-6763), Otis Carney (617/834-9867) or Jean Robinson (925-2826).

Selectmen plan scope of Greenbush study response

By David Johnson
Mariner staff

At a hearing held by selectmen last week, a number of residents said they are worried that if the Old Colony railroad is restored, it will create traffic jams, noise pollution and endanger wetlands.

There was also considerable sentiment among those at the meeting that if the train does return, it should stop in Cohasset Village.

About 20 people attended the hearing, which was held so residents could tell consultants Camp Dresser & McKee their worries about the train. For $15,000 the consultants will study certain issues, in particular the train's impact on traffic and wetlands.

Their report will be forwarded to the MBTA as part of the town's response to the recently released environmental impact study on the restoration of the train.

Although the vast majority of those speaking at the meeting were against the restoration of the train, one former town official said he feared the process would simply provide opponents of the train with a chance to come up with more ammunition to sabotage the project.

Lou Eaton of Beach St. was chairman of the committee to save the railroad in 1957 when the Old Colony Line announced that it might shut down service to the South Shore.

"There was nobody in town that wanted to get rid of it," he said, charging that the study was going to be one-sided.

"This isn't going to do anything for the other (pro-train) side," Eaton stated. "I'm concerned that the whole focus of this report is to document unjustified reasons to oppose the train."

In 1985 and again in 1991, Cohasset residents voted heavily in favor of restoring railroad service from Boston's South Station to Greenbush in Scituate.

Several selectmen replied that the town needs to respond to the voluminous environmental report released by the MBTA, in order to point out things the T study might have overlooked or to mention conclusions with which the town disagreed.

"If the report generated no questions, then there would be no reason to respond," said selectman Jane Goedecke. "There is no need to respond to positive elements."

In her opening remarks (Goedecke ran the meeting in the absence of selectmen chairman Merle Brown), she said, "We are not paying anyone $15,000 to tell us how wonderful the train will be. . . This is not a debate."

She also stated, "This is a Cohasset job, paid for with Cohasset money. Only Cohasset residents will be allowed to speak tonight."

Eaton also urged the town to get a good financial deal, reminding the group that the town paid $106,000 for the railroad bed when service stopped.

"We should get a pretty fair amount when they take it back," Eaton said.

Stage Coach Way resident Jerome Feiffer urged the town to push for a train station in Cohasset Village. He said that Cohasset would be underserved unless a station is located near the greatest population concentration.

Unless a station is opened in the center of town, Cohasset would be the only Old Colony community with no station near its population center.

The only Cohasset stop is now slated for Rte. 3A, near the Hingham line. The only other nearby stop would be in North Scituate.

Feiffer said the train would most effective if it eliminated car travel for some people. He also said the business district would be revitalized if commuters were congregated there twice a day.

Wellesley's business district got such a boost when commuter rail was restored to that wealthy suburb, he said.

The MBTA decided not to locate a stop in Cohasset Village because there is inadequate parking.

However, Selectman Peter Pratt, an ardent opponent of the train, nonetheless agreed with Feiffer. He pointed out that there are no federal or state parking requirements, instead the T is following its own requirements, which can easily be waived.

He said that he worked on the extension of the Red Line to Davis Square, which has no parking. The subway system simply waived its own requirements to build the station, he stated.

Kay Mosby of Beechwood Street, urged the consultants to examine noise pollution, which she claimed could cause "rises in blood pressure, heart attacks and suicide."

Conservation commission member Jeff Wall said that board was concerned about the apparent need to fill in some 4,000 feet of wetlands to build the Cohasset station near Rte. 3A.

"They (MBTA) say they don't have to follow it (law)," he said.

Another "key issue" for the commission is the use of herbicides and pesticides along the tracks. He pointed out that Cohasset mandates a 50-foot buffer zone between the use of such chemicals and wetlands.

Chris Bearce, 189 South Main St., pointed out that most of the track will be open and wondered if chain link fencing along the entire length would be possible. He also asked about the sound of trains passing through town.

Ann Musto, 15 Lantern Lane, said that the train will dramatically affect the Osgood Elementary School, which lies near the proposed route.

She said the school's science area, including wetlands, is behind the school and will need to be recreated in to another spot because of the train.

She said the noise will reduce the children's attempts to learn. The train's horns "will blast right at the school," Musto maintained. "Traveling at 59 mph, [illegible] times by the school during the school day" will result in "hearing loss" and "frazzled children."

She said the T studied the noise impact from inside the school, but not outside, where children often are.

Julie Hassan of 497 Beechwood St. said that only nine miles of the 17-mile track will be fenced, causing safety hazards for children.

If even one child is killed by the train, it will be too many she stated. "One life is one too many."

She also questioned the double track section from Forest Ave. to Smith Place and said the town will pay for the electricity used at the crossings.

In a two-page memo, selectmen have asked Camp Dresser & McKee to examine air quality, noise at crossings, clearing of vegetation, especially in wetlands areas, alternatives to the proposed right of way and lost opportunity cost for use of the town-owned right of way.

In addition, traffic at train crossings at Route 3A, King and North Main Streets, Sohier St., Pleasant St., Spring and Pond Streets and Beechwood St.

Also, the impact on school pedestrian traffic and vehicle circulation on Depot Court and Ripley Road, Pleasant St. and Smith Place.

The loss of parking for downtown businesses , financing, the impact on the Sohier and Elm Street wells and the affect on emergency services are also items for the consultant to consider.

The consultants have been asked to submit their draft report by April 21 and a final copy May 15. The deadline for commenting on the MBTA report is May 22. Residents are also welcome to comment and should contact the selectmen's office.

Brennan and consultant Barry Faulkner of Sverdrup Civil, Inc., explained that the horns will be mounted on poles at the crossing, not on the trains as in the past. The horns will sound for 15 to 22 seconds at a sound of 93 decibels 50 feet away. At 25 feet away, the horns will register at about 99 decibels.

The system is in use in communities in Nebraska and at the commuter rail system in Los Angeles.

The pole-mounted horn will eliminate the need to blast a horn from an oncoming train starting at one-quarter of a mile away, according to the officials.

Several people in the audience vehemently disagreed. One woman claimed that the horn is not yet in use in Southern California and that the system is so experimental, it may not be approved because it is not loud enough to be safe.

Brennan explained that the state Department of Public Utilities has no comment on the horn, but that he is confident that it will be approved when the T formally proposes it for the Old Colony Railroad.

Other residents were concerned that the train tracks could cut the western half of Cohasset off from police and fire services, which are located in the eastern half of town.

Several speakers said that if the crossing gates are down for an extended period, the western side of town could be imperiled.

In response to questions about fencing, Brennan said that the T automatically erects chain link fencing six-feet high wherever the track passes residential areas or playgrounds. The T will put up fences upon request in other areas if necessary.

When one woman stated that six feet high fences are not tall enough because children could climb up and jump onto the tracks, several people laughed.

Brennan maintained that the T has an excellent safety record and recalled that only three people have been killed on the commuter rail tracks in recent years: a jogger on the tracks, someone walking along them and a teenager writing graffiti in Somerville.

When several people in the audience started to protest that he wasn't answering the question in full, Brennan told them to be silent , stating "I've been as polite as a I could." A number of people in the room applauded him.

FINANCES ARE ON TRACK

The potential financial obligation of Cohasset residents bothered a lot of people in the room, to which Brennan replied that the federal government will likely pick up 80 percent of the cost. The state will finance its 20 percent share with 30-year bonds.

He also said that some 4,000 riders per day could be expected on the Greenbush line, including 3,200 commuters and another 800 during the day.

"That's a very successful train line," he said.

Cohasset's MBTA assessment will not increase because of the train, he said, pointing out that Proposition 2 1/2 limits the town's charges just as property tax increases are controlled.

Cohasset now pays about $146,000 to the MBTA, and receives service on The Ride, a van for handicapped people.

The cheapest alternative, a train at ground level, would cost some $215 million. If tunnels are added to avoid Hingham's business district, the cost could accelerate between 40 and 100 percent, to nearly $430 million.

One woman called the T "a boondoggle," and said that at some level, taxpayers will foot the bill for the train line.

"You can call it that," Brennan replied. "But it drives the economy of Massachusetts, possibly New England."

Federal authorities have been "very, very supportive of the Old Colony Project," so it is highly probable that Washington money will be forthcoming. Some $425 million in federal money is now going to build the Middleboro and Plymouth train lines.

PROPERTY VALUES AT CROSSROADS

Property values can be expected to remain stable over the long term, Brennan claimed.

He said that studies have shown that those who sell quickly in advance of the construction of a road have generally lost money, but that once a road is built, it becomes "background" and property values return to their previous levels.

Highways are more intrusive than trains, he stated, pointing out that property in towns along the Plymouth and Middleboro lines is apparently selling well.

REGIONAL AIR POLLUTION

The train will substantially help the state's serious air pollution problem, according to Brennan.

He said that the Greenbush Line will reduce rush hour vehicle traffic on the Southeast Expressway by six percent.

"It (six percent) is a massive undertaking," the official said.

According to census data, the towns which are expected to provide the bulk of riders on the Greenbush line — Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury — have a higher percentage of commuters than the statewide average.

In addition, these commuters ride by themselves in cars at a higher percentage than the statewide average, thereby disproportionately causing air pollution.

Brennan and Faulkner also reminded the audience that because the Commonwealth is not in compliance with the federal Clean Air Act, it could be forced to take remedial action, as it was with the Boston Harbor cleanup, which was order when the state was found to be in violation with the Clean Water Act.

One woman claimed that the federal government "withdrew" money it had originally offered to pay for the harbor cleanup and suggested that the same thing could happen with the train.

In fact, Washington never "withdrew" money for the cleanup, the administration of then Gov. Michael Dukakis failed to apply for it, attempting to fight the cleanup order instead. When he lost the attempt to overturn the cleanup mandate, the time period for seeking federal aid had passed, forcing MWRA rate payers to pick up most of the tab.

The town parking lot could be rearranged to create additional parking spaces to make up for those that will be lost by the trains return, Brennan said.

However, one woman questioned this, stating that up to 80 cars park each day on the abandoned tracks.

Asked about pesticides and herbicides on wetlands, Brennan admitted that T does use them to keep the tracks clear, but said the use will be discussed with the conservation commission first.

The T is bound by the same wetlands protection laws everyone else is, he said and that other options, such as the planting of vegetation to choke off trees which spread across the tracks.

A FRIENDLY BRIDGE GAME

Not all questioners were hostile.

"When can I buy a ticket?" one woman asked, to applause. She went on to say that she had attended the Osgood (then called Ripley) School when the train went past and that children did not become learning impaired or endangered because of the train.

Construction on the Greenbush Line is not slated to start until 1998, two years alter than originally planned. Asked after the meeting how much the delay has cost, Brennan said that inflation can be expected to increase somewhat each year.

Asked after the meeting why a station was not planned for Cohasset Village, so a large population could walk to the train, Brennan said that insufficient parking was a factor. In addition, he said that to have two stops in Cohasset would slow down travel time. The train is expected to go from Cohasset to South Station in 42 minutes.

There are two stops each in Weymouth, Hingham and Scituate, with one in Cohasset.

Although the meeting was contentious, the first speaker predicted that residents would soon patch up their differences.

1994 Citizen of the Year

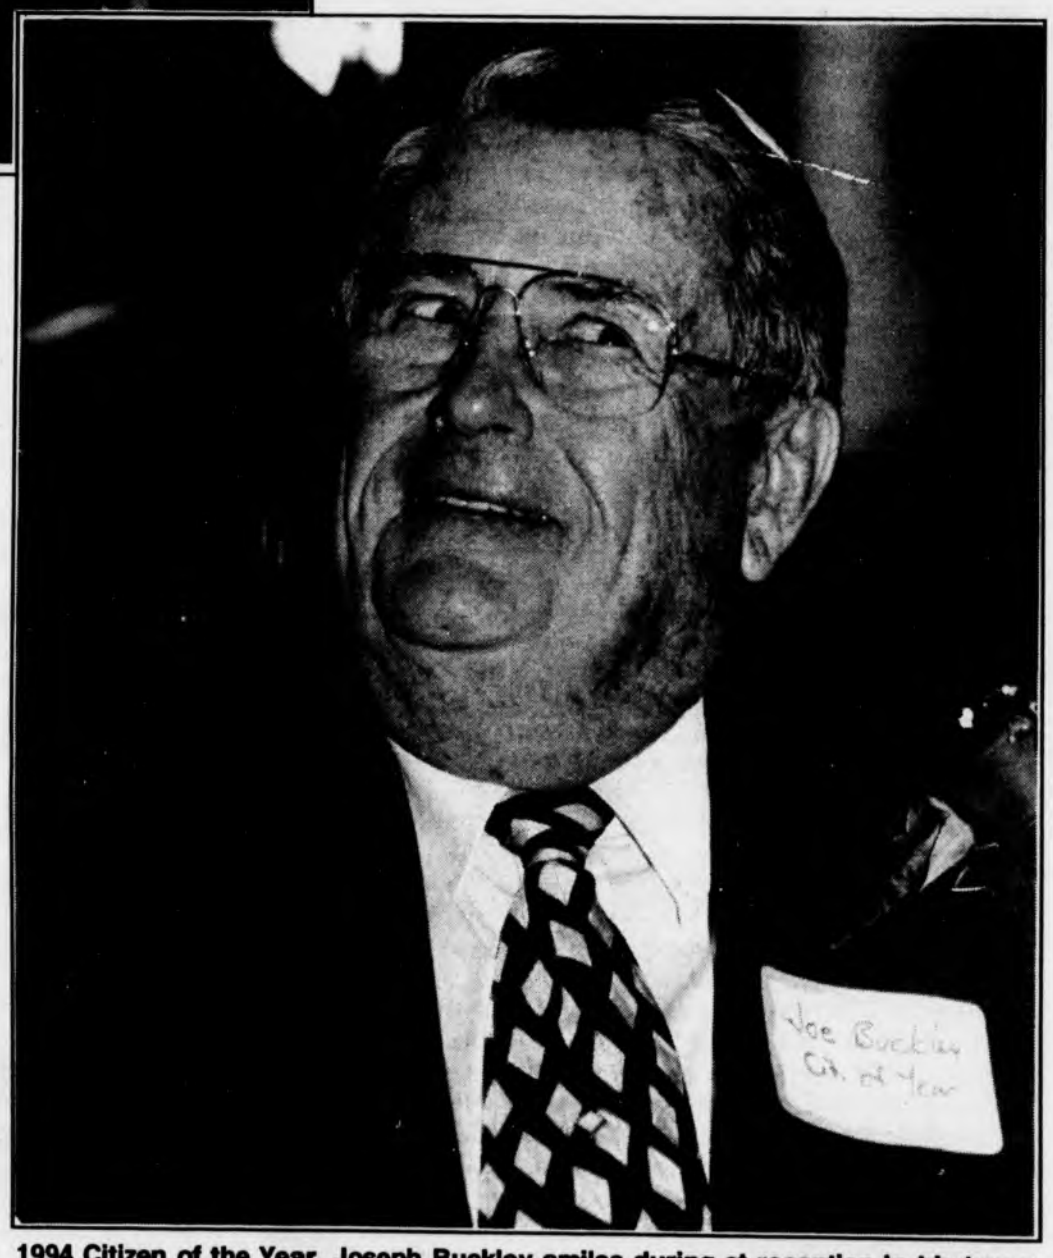
Friends, family gather to fete Joe Buckley

at Kimball's by the Sea

Staff photos/J. Paul MacDonald

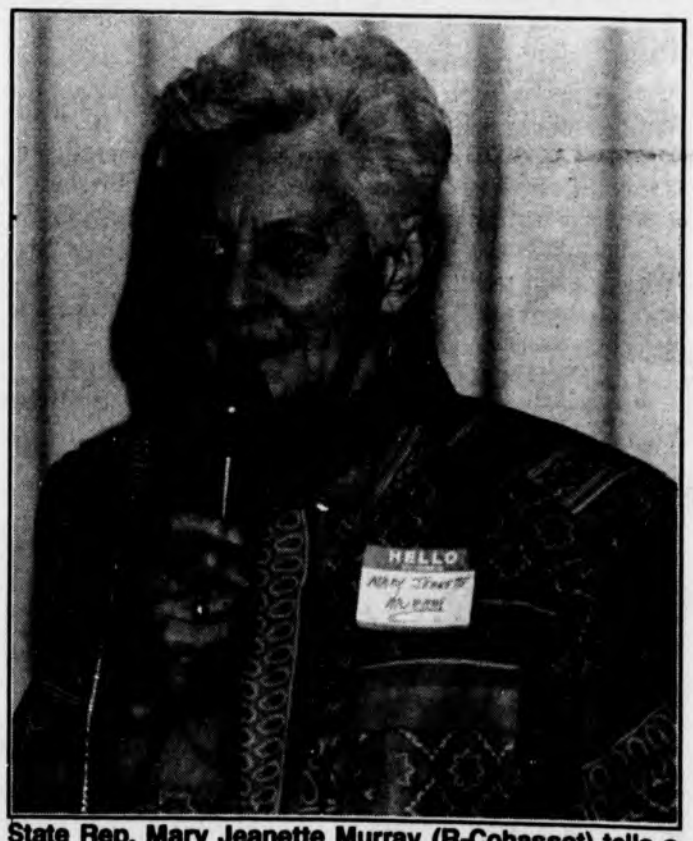
Mariner Newspapers publisher Margaret Smoragiewicz presents Buckley with a framed front page recognizing him as the Cohasset Mariner 1994 Citizen of the Year.

Buckley's brother Al Buckley and his granddaughter Sarah Mavilia were just two of dozens of Buckleys on hand for the occasion.



1994 Citizen of the Year, Joseph Buckley smiles during at reception in his honor Sunday (April 9) at Kimball's by the Sea. More than 100 people attended the event.

Bill O'Brien, Mary O'Brien, and Eileen Tyeryar sample some of the delicious food prepared by the staff at Kimball's by the Sea.



State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) tells a few anecdotes about Buckley's political party affiliation (he's a Democrat) before she presented him with a proclamation from the House of Representatives.

The Cohasset Mariner thanks Kimball's by the Sea and Exotic Flowers & Fine Gifts.

Septic options on table

What are your options if you discover your septic system can't meet tough new standards under Title 5?

• Before this month, you might have had no options.

• Now you do. You may be able to install one of a number of the "Alternative Systems" newly approved by the state.

What are these Alternative Systems? How do they work? Under what conditions can they be used? How much do they cost?

Here to answer all our questions about Alternative Systems is the state's leading authority on the subject: Christos Dimisioris, Environmental Engineer, Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection.

Dimisioris has been running the Innovative/ Alternative Technologies Program for DEP's Division of Water Pollution Control since 1991. Currently he is in the process of evaluating about 20 technologies that have applied for DEP approval under Title 5.

His illustrated presentation on Alternative Systems will be featured at a public meeting sponsored by The Gulf Association Wednesday, April 19, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., at the newly-restored Lightkeepers Residence on Government Island, Cohasset.

Don't miss this chance to learn new ways of solving old problems!

Attendance is free and open to all.

Help plan fall weekend

The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee is looking for citizens and groups who are interested in joining a steering committee to plan a new Fall Drug Free Weekend. The committee hopes to bring back the annual drug and alcohol awareness weekend, which has been very successful in previous years.

The Drug and Alcohol committee will hold an organizational meeting at Cohasset Town Hall on Tuesday, April 25, at 8 p.m. for all those who are interested. For further information or to volunteer if unable to attend the April 25 meeting, call Ted Carroll at 383-2233.

Good Friday Walk slated

On April 14 the annual Good Friday Walk will be held in Hingham. Between 7 and 9 a.m. participants will begin their walk from Hingham Junior High School, continuing for 20 miles through Hingham and Wompatuck State Park, returning to the Junior High. Provisions are made for those unable to walk the entire route, and first aid is available at several rest stops. Everyone is welcome to participate.

Hundreds of people throughout New England will combine their efforts to help Sharing, Inc., whose goal is to make a difference in the lives of children, primarily in the rural South. Sharing's mission is to discover and nurture mankind's common ground by providing pathways that span the divisions of geography, race, religion and class.

Sponsor sheets may be obtained by contacting Kay Doherty at Sharing, Inc., Box 850153, Braintree, MA 02185-0153 or by calling (617) 843-1676.

Candlelight service, April 15

Bishop M. Thomas Shaw, S.S.J.E., Diocesan bishop of Massachusetts, will be at Saint Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave., for the Great Vigil of Easter, a candlelight service Saturday, April 15, at 7 p.m. The worship is dramatic, beginning with the church in darkness. Candles are lit and at the moment when resurrection is proclaimed the lights are turned on signifying that the resurrected Jesus is the light that leads the world out of darkness. Members of the church will be confirmed. An icon of Saint Stephen, a gift to the church rendered by artist Christopher Gosey, will be blessed by Bishop Shaw.

Worship Easter morning, Sunday, April 16, will be at 8 and 10 a.m. with the full choir and choristers at 10 a.m. Both services, Eucharist with sermon, will be in the church.

Prior to Easter, there will be worship in the church Maundy Thursday at 7 p.m. This Eucharist commemorates the last supper and the importance of community for the church's life together in Christ. Following the Eucharist will be a simple meal of foods typical of Jesus' place and time — breads, cheese, olives, nuts, fruits, and milk and honey!

A 24-hour Prayer Watch will begin Maundy Thursday, April 13, at 3 p.m. Parishioners sign up for an hour throughout the day to be in church to read, pray, just to be quiet, or meditate. It recalls the words of Psalm 130: "My soul waits for the LORD more than those who watch for the morning, more than those who watch for the morning." It is a powerful experience of prayer each minute throughout the day bringing the church into Good Friday.

Good Friday worship begins at noon April 14 with an hour of quiet. The Prayer Book liturgy begins at 1 p.m. A service for children takes place at 2 p.m. followed by a half hour of quiet reflection and prayer to end the traditional three hours of worship while Jesus was on the cross. A number of parishioners and the youth group will participate in the 20-mile Good Friday walk raising money to assist economically poor areas of the South, particularly in rural Mississippi. The founder and organizer of the Walk, Kay Doherty, preached at Saint Stephen's on the First Sunday in Lent.

Community Garden Club

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday, April 25, at 9:30 a.m. at the Walton Rodgers Hall in St. Stephen's Parish. Coffee served at 9 a.m.

Members will participate in a mini in-club horticultural competition. Please bring plants to be judged at 8 a.m. Share the fun.

Gypsy spring concert

A Gypsy Spring Concert of light-hearted classical music for coloratura soprano and gypsy violin will be held on Sunday, April 23, at 4 p.m. at Old Ship Church, Main St., Hingham. Admission is $5 at the door.

The concert will feature soprano Joan Jensen of Cohasset, violinist Josef Porteleki of Canton and pianist Carolyn Curtis of Marshfield.

Jensen and Porteleki will perform light-hearted duets from Brahms' "Gypsy Songs" and the Strauss operetta "Die Fledermaus."

Jensen has made solo appearances with choruses in the United States and Europe and teaches voice and piano in her Cohasset studio.

Porteleki emigrated to the United States from Austria and Hungary and studied at the New England Conservatory and Boston University. He was an award-winning member of the Newton Symphony Orchestra.

For further information about the concert call 383-2240.

Garden tour set for May 3

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset field trip to Tower Hill Botanical Garden in Boylston will take place on Wednesday, May 3. The bus will depart from Town Hall at 8:30 a.m.

The $30 ticket price includes the garden tour, lunch and transportation. Reservations must be made by April 15, and Garden Club members may bring a friend. For further information or to make a reservation call Doris Flint at 383-0338 or Monique Mascart at 383-2649.

Shaw's pledges to consider. . .

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Shaw's officials say they are willing to consider alterations to some aspects of the supermarket proposed for Cushing Plaza, but insist that the building itself must be built at the Beechwood Street end of the property.

The supermarket's proximity to their neighborhood appears to be the biggest complaint Beechwood residents have with the plan.

PERMIT QUESTIONED

In addition, Martin Healy, Shaw's attorney, explained that the supermarket is appealing the appeals board decision granting it a special permit.

Healy said they are questioning the way the noise limits mentioned in the permit did not clearly specify where to measure noise.

He also called the limitations on fast food operations "ambiguous." He said, "We didn't feel they intended to eliminate the fast food uses in there now."

Papa Gino's and Bergson Ice Cream currently operate in the plaza. Under the plan, Bergson would continued, Papa Gino's would leave.

The store had to appeal the decision because the next appeals board meeting was after the 20-day appeal period had expired.

Shaw's project manager Brian Leahy said the store had to protect its rights, but suggested that the issues in question could have been clarified with a discussion.

WETLANDS CONCERNS

In response to questions from residents during a planning board hearing last week, Shaw's engineers said they will look at traffic, landscaping and potential drainage problems.

However several consultants for the supermarket chain said that the building cannot be moved elsewhere on the lot because of nearby wetlands.

"This building is as far away from the houses as possible," said Larry Wagner, an engineer who helped design the plan. He pointed out that laws require a 50-foot buffer zone between buildings or parking lots and wetlands.

The conservation commission earlier asked Shaw's to respect the proximity of wetlands in its project design.

Leahy said that the company had also pledged to retain as many tenants as possible.

In order to allow current tenants to operate during construction, he said the buildings in the back of the site would be demolished first and tenants moved to the front of the long building on the left of the plaza. Meanwhile, the structure for the new store and several tenants, would be built. Once tenants could move in, the rest of the original buildings would be knocked down.

Frank Hamilton of Beechwood St., and his attorney, Charles Humphries, both asked several times if the supermarket could be turned or moved, so that its back, with the attendant delivery facilities, would not be so close to Beechwood St. residents.

Humphries asked that the main building be rotated 90-degrees, so the delivery facilities would face south, away from Beechwood Street.

"It can't be done," Wagner replied flatly.

Humphries also stated that the Stop & Shop supermarket, further north on Route 3A, was originally slated to face the street, but was turned, in response to requests, so the side of the store fronted 3A.

In addition, Humphries pointed out that developers can fill in wetlands provided they replicate them at another location on a site.

Hamilton is suing to overturn an appeals board decision allowing Shaw's to use 200 feet of the portion of the property which lies in the residential zone. The supermarket plans to put a truck turnaround in that space.

"We acknowledge that the market will be built," Hamilton stated. "What I'm asking you to consider is the neighborhood. . . get it (store) to blend with the neighborhood."

He feared that the size of the project would generate a lot more traffic and noise.

"This is a business, not a beautification project," he stated. "If you build it, they (customers) will come."

Max Pounder of the design review committee, told the group that the committee spent more than one hour trying to relocate the building on the lot.

Even though there were several engineers on hand to help, Pounder said, "We made an honest attempt to do it. We kept running into wetlands law. We didn't come up with anything too different."

Thomas Cullinane, another Beechwood St. resident, said that the site has already been damaged environmentally.

"Walgreens was a wetlands swamp, so it has already been violated. The dirty deed has already been done," he said.

Other residents were concerned with traffic, drainage and landscaping.

Wayne Sawchuk said that he is for the project, but had some "pet peeves" he wanted the company to investigate.

He urged that the Route 3A exit from the plaza contain a light so people could make left hand turns. He criticized the current plan, which forbids left hand turns onto Route 3A, except when made by delivery vehicles. The delivery trucks would have to drive over a cobble-stone surface one inch higher than the driveway.

Shawchuk questioned the arrangement, suggesting that it would be confusing and ultimately dangerous. Traffic wishing to go north on Chief Justice Cushing Highway would have to use the Beechwood St. exit, creating more traffic on that street.

Steve Mitchell, a traffic consultant, explained that the original Shaw's plan would have allowed left hand turns, but that the ZBA permit proscribed them.

Shawchuk also recommended widening Beechwood St. to create a left-turn lane heading into the plaza. A separate lane would allow through traffic to proceed west along Beechwood St.

Humphries said that another client, the Autohaus, cross Route 3A from the plaza, feared that cars backed up at the light or waiting to turn into Shaw's, would block its entrance.

Seventy percent of Autohaus customers come from the north and therefore need to make a left turn from the south bound lane of Rte. 3A.

The state highway department will have ultimate authority over Route 3A traffic, but Shaw's consultants agreed to review the situation.

They also agreed to try and keep at least one of the large trees along Beechwood St., which had been slated to be cut down. Shawchuk said the trees should be retained if possible.

DRAINAGE WORRIES

Two business owners feared drainage would affect their properties on Rte. 3A south of Cushing Plaza.

Paul Patterson and Linda Hassan said that because the plaza will be elevated in spots, water will run down hill, onto their properties.

The consultants and the planning board said they will review that situation, which currently calls for water runoff to be gathered in pond behind and to the south of the Bergson building.

In addition, Robert Martin of South Main Street said that the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce "enthusiastically supports this." He called the present building "an eyesore" and praised Shaw's willingness to work with current tenants and with the community in general.

HEARING CONTINUED

The hearing was continued to April 26 at 9 p.m., at which time the public comment section will be closed. After that, the planning board will accept questions or comments only from members of town boards.

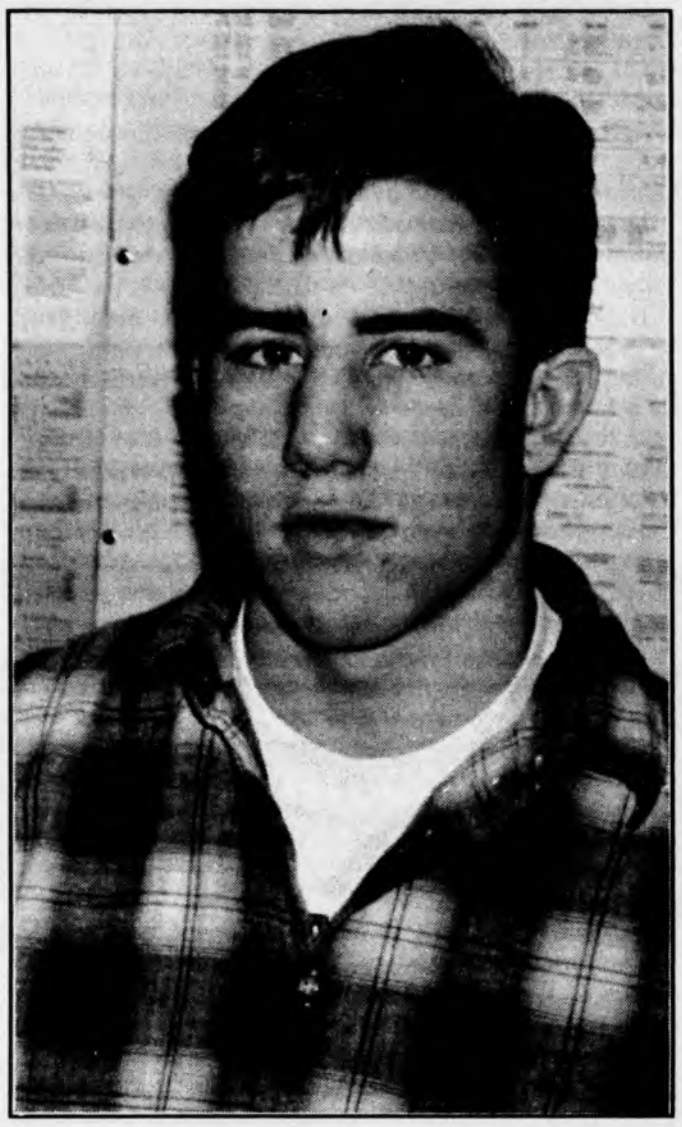
— student of the month—

Ryan Freeman



Ryan demonstrates that quiet quality of a respected leader as president of his senior class. His confident, but firm manner of dealing with issues is a strong asset.

He also demonstrates his strong academic skills with a challenging schedule and excellent grades.

His pleasant manner is appreciated by all.

Ryan also stands out on the wrestling mat. He recently completed his senior year of wrestling finishing with a 34-6 record. He was a three time sectional champion, being voted outstanding wrestler at this year's sectionals.

In his career at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School, he amassed 136 wins.

He was a State finalist three years in a row and was a New England place finisher in 1995.

Ryan is certainly deserving of the Student of the Month honor.

Drama workshop kick-off

The Deer Hill School is beginning a drama workshop, a special project funded by the PSO. Wheelock College's Story Troupers will kick-off this project with a performance for DHS students on April 25. On Thursday, April 27, they will conduct a workshop, as well as on the following two Thursdays, May 4 and 11, with the help of DHS student participants and parents, teachers and Junior and Senior High volunteers.

The volunteers will continue to run the workshops for the students on May 18, 25 and June 1. At this time they will direct students in scenes from "Charlotte's Web." It is hoped that the drama club will continue next year, with the assistance of some of the same, as well as new, volunteers, based on this year's model.

DHS students wishing to attend need to fill out the sign-up sheet being sent home with the Deer Hill menu. Students will be chosen by lottery, since Wheelock's limit per workshop is 20 students. A possible total of 60 students may be involved.

For those participating on the first three Thursdays, transportation home should be arranged at 2:30 p.m. More details will be included with the menu.

Good nutrition at DHS

Deer Hill students are completing a schoolwide Nutrition Project on April 13. They have been learning how advertising influences their decisions about the foods they eat, and each grade has created its own advertisements. Fourth-grade students created print advertisements while fifth-graders did radio spots and sixth-grade students made television commercials. Their products were fruits and vegetables, which they learned are essential to good eating habits.

The advertisements were rated and voted on by each grade for their creative and nutritional messages. Sixth-graders created new products using real fruits and vegetables, including veggie greens and java tropical fruits.

Fifth-grade radio spots included Daryl Strawberry talking about the vitamins and minerals in strawberries and impersonations of Paul Hogan and Sean Connery on the benefits of kiwis.

Many great jingles and sound effects were used.

Fourth-grade students included Tango Mango challenging Lean Beans and Wondermelons competing against Pepsi as healthier food choices.

Advertisements will be posted around the school, and on Thursday, April 13, the students will wear buttons displaying their fruit and vegetable logos or themes. Stop 'n Shop in Cohasset will display some of the advertisements and as a reward for the students' hard work, the store will donate crates of oranges to the Second Congregational Church food pantry in Cohasset.

PSO meeting, April 27

The annual PSO spring meeting will be held on Thursday, April 27, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. All parents of Cohasset public school students are invited to come and meet the new board members for the upcoming school year.

Henry Lague, who has taught several graduate credit courses and workshops for teachers and parents, will give a light-hearted view on parenting today.

Sixth-graders enter bee

Several sixth-graders from Deer Hill School recently took part in a spelling bee, trying to qualify for a regional bee sponsored by the Patriot Ledger. The winner of the Ledger bee would become a contestant in the National Spelling Bee held in Washington, D.C.

About 20 students participated in the DHS spelling bee on Feb. 27, with finalists Karen McMorris from Mrs. Cisneros' homeroom and Megan Whiteley of Mrs. Magnussen's room going into many rounds before continuing the spelling bee until the next day.

In the end Karen McMorris was the winner and went on to participate in the regional bee on March 25, her birthday. There she competed against many sixth-, seventh- and eighth-graders. Although she did not win, she made a good showing and enjoyed the experience. Both girls did an excellent job at the DHS spelling bee.

DHS selects service corps

The faculty of Deer Hill School has announced the second group of participants in a new service opportunity for students, the Deer Hill Service Corps. 22 sixth-grade students were selected for this session by homeroom teachers in consultation with other staff members.

In order to participate, students need to have demonstrated good citizenship, responsible behavior, good communication skills and academic success. There are three service periods per year. New students will be selected for each new service period and some will be replaced.

Students selected for the Service Corps will be given responsibilities around the school such as assisting with gym classes, helping in the library and art room or assisting with the pre-school program.

Parenting workshop, April 26

The elementary school adjustment counselors are offering two Wednesday evening parenting workshops to parents of elementary-age students (K-6).

The workshops will be held on April 26 in the Watermelon Room at St. Stephen's Church from 7 to 9 p.m.

The April 26 workshop will involve a discussion about "Self-Esteem . . . What Can A Parent Do?" and "Teaching Responsibility and Respect to Children."

The workshops are open to any Cohasset parent and will be led by Ed Leonard and Frank Fitzgerald, who have extensive experience consulting with parents.

To register call 383-6115 or 383-6117.

The recent PSO-sponsored workshop on "Values," presented by Frank Fitzgerald and Ed Leonard, will be aired on local cable television channel 3 at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 13 and Thursday, April 20.

Preschool screening slated

The Massachusetts Special Education Law (Chapter 766) provides for the screening of three- and four-year-old children whose parents feel may have a special need which might interfere with their future educational progress. The screening process includes a parent interview as well as a health, vision, hearing, motor and language screening.

Parents who feel that their child might have such a special need should call: Alicia Shea, Director of Student Services, Cohasset Public Schools, phone 383-6104.

If the child will be entering kindergarten in September, he/she will be undergoing a pre-kindergarten screening, and it will not be necessary for parents to call the Office of Student Services.

DHS student enters contest

David Crowley-Buck, a fourth-grade student at Deer Hill School, has submitted an entry to a geography contest sponsored by Delta Airlines. David's teacher, Dorothy MacDonald, read about the contest in "Instructor" magazine and suggested David apply.

The contest, which was open to any fourth-, fifth- or sixth-grader, required a three- to six-page letter, essay or diary entry concerning something in the contestant's town that was stolen by Carmen Sandiego's gang. Applicants were to use travel schedules and maps to describe how they followed the thieves to a chosen city where stolen goods had been transported.

David chose Minot's Light in Cohasset as the stolen item. Using geography skills required by the contest rules, David traced the thieves to Cairo, where the lighthouse was buried in the sand under King Tut's tomb.

A panel of geography professionals from the National Council for Geography Education will serve as judges, choosing both national and international champions. Winners will be selected based on three criteria: use of geography tools, originality and clarity.

The Hearing Center

Have You Heard?

by Nancy Allonen-Allie, M.S., CCC-A
Licensed-Certified Audiologist

CROS CURRENTS

When a person has hearing loss in both ears, it may be determined that it will be most beneficial to use a hearing instrument in each ear (a binaural fitting). However, if there is significant loss in only one ear and good hearing in the other, a CROS (contralateral routing of signals) may be recommended. CROS hearing instruments make use of two earpieces that work as a single unit. A microphone is placed in the weaker ear to pick up sound and then transmit it to the stronger ear, which is encouraged to do most of the hearing. It used to be that sound was transmitted from one side of the head to the other through a wire worn behind the head or built into eyeglasses. Today, the transmission of the signal by means of FM radio frequency renders this cumbersome strategy needless.

There may be several reasons why the popularity of CROS hearing aids has been on the increase. For instance, a more enlightened attitude about hearing loss, more active lifestyles, or because of the tremendous increase in the technology that is available to build more sophisticated and complex hearing aids. Whatever the reason, it certainly is beneficial to people who suffer from hearing loss. At THE HEARING CENTER, we recommend and carry a variety of brands of hearing instruments to enable us to select the one that has the features that best suit your individual needs. Please call us at 1-800-339-9316. We are pleased to announce that we are now located at 62 Derby St. in Hingham. We know you will enjoy the convenient parking and larger location. For your convenience, we are still located at 470 Southern Artery (Rte. 3-A), Quincy.

P.S. A CROS hearing instrument may not provide stereo input, but it does enable its wearer to pick up sounds from around his or her head.

Tennis team is better than record shows

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

They're 1-2 on the season, but Cohasset High tennis coach Chum Steele is convinced his Skipper squad could just as easily be undefeated. The results will show Cohasset lost 4-1 and 3-2 to Norwell though the final scores don't indicate how close the games really were.

No. 1 singles player, Joe Slotnick, lost in three sets against Scituate and Norwell. Steele isn't concerned with Slotnick's record. He said it's just a matter of time before Slotnick is back at the top of his game.

"He's still a little rusty from basketball," Steele said, "but he'll get a lot better as the season goes along.

"Tennis is a game of confidence. If you haven't played a lot you have to hit a'lot of balls."

So far in this young season, Chip Moore has been the standout player for Cohasset. The No. 2 singles player in undefeated on the season with a 3-0 record. In fact, Steele has been so impressed by Moore's play, he can't find any chinks in Moore's game.

"I don't know where he can improve," Steele said.

Cohasset's three singles players and two teams of doubles all won their matches in the 5-0 win over Norton. Slotnick, Moore and freshman Don Steele were victorious, as were the doubles pairings of Tom Greco and Justin Golden, and Connor Mangin and seventh-grader Brain Tracey.

When asked who he thought the strength of league was, Steele singled out Norwell, Scituate and Hanover. He hadn't seen Abington play, but he wouldn't have to wait long. The Skippers had a scheduled match against the Green Wave on April 12.

"It looks like it's going to be a league where there'll be four at the top (of the South Shore League) pretty close," Steele said.

His goal this spring is finishing above the .500 mark and qualifying for the South Sectional tourney. Cohasset went to the playoffs last season and lost to Martha's Vineyard in the opening round.

Cheerleader mascot Alexandra Berger cheers on the Cohasset High basketball team this winter. The Skippers' basketball program was recognized at their recent year-end banquet.

The Masters, golf's first major championship of the season came to a close on Sunday.

And while the New England temperatures are not as warm as those in Augusta, Georgia, it is safe to say that golf season is officially underway.

I'm no Golden Bear, Great White Shark or Tiger, but I have played many of the best South Shore public courses and feel I can offer a unique perspective on the sport.

As for the private courses, well, you'll have to chat with some of the members because I haven't had the pleasure. Anyway, here goes.

Rockland Golf Course ($18 for 18 holes during the week, $20 for weekends.)

This is a lovely par three course and is very challenging. I played my first round of golf there as a sophomore in high school and must have lost nine balls in the trees and another three in the water. (Thank God some of the my friends brought along extras.)

One thing about Rockland, make sure you let the group ahead of you clear off the green before you fire your tee shot. If you're not careful, you'll bean someone with a Top Flite and end up with a lawsuit on your hands.

I also recorded my first birdie on the back nine at Rockland. Taking an old three wood, I screamed a low liner that sliced and hit the fairway at 150 yards. Two long hops and 30 yards later the ball settled eight feet from the cup. I sunk the putt and celebrated like a fool.

Pembroke Country Club ($30 for 18 holes during the week, $25 after 1 p.m. $35 for weekends, $28 after 1 p.m.)

This is a very long and beautiful course with narrow fairways that will challenge just about any golfer.

I've had several poor rounds there over the years and may have killed several squirrels along the way. But I did score two straight birdies and a par on the front nine once and was delirious with joy. You really have to know what you're doing to play well there.

Pembroke is also the site of many charity tournaments. I followed Bruin great Bobby Orr around for 18 holes once while working on a story and had a blast.

Orr asked me for advice on some of the holes and even bought me a few cokes when the beverage cart drove by. By the way, Orr hits the ball a ton off the tee, like most hockey players.

Green Harbor Golf Course in Marshfield ($24 for 18 holes during the week, $25 on the weekend.)

This is long and challenging course that does not allow golf carts.

I like that because I can't stand having some weekend warrior driving around like Mad Max while my group is trying to tee off.

And those who think golf isn't great exercise should carry a bag of clubs around for a full round at Green Harbor. (You feel like you just hiked the Blue Hills.)

I've yet to birdie a hole at Green Har-

Hardwick, Bishop named '95-'96 hoop captains

Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset's boys varsity, JV, ninth-grade, eighth-grade and seventh-grade teams, along with parents, grandparents, coaches, cheerleaders and assorted other contributors to the basketball program gathered Monday evening for a final celebration.

Headlined by a varsity team that won the Division 3 South Sectional championship this year, the banquet was emceed by John Bishop. Bishop introduced the coaches and offered insight into the great season.

Rick Furson, the coach of the seventh-grade team, expressed his happiness with the effort of his team, though they were often outsized by larger teams.

All of Cohasset's squads play with the disadvantage of being from a small school, yet varsity coach Ron Ford managed to transform a two-team doormat program into a five-team basketball hotbed.

Eighth-grade coach, Al Hassell, commented that, in his 10 years of coaching, he has never enjoyed coaching a team as much as this year's edition. The group sailed into the "Final Three" of its league before bowing out. Guard Tim Cullinan led the crowd in applauding Hassell.

Coach Bob Knurek, skipper of the ninth graders couldn't attend the banquet so Ford congratulated the team. Ford commended the team on its championship, noting that every member of the team worked hard to achieve its success.

Cheerleading coach Melissa Barry emphasized her team's work ethic and the time the girls put into perfecting their cheerleading skills. She mentioned that a lot of the girls have been cheering since July. Barry handed out certificates to them.

Mark Hall was the JV coach and "co-coach" of the varsity, as Ford called him. Hall recalled a timeout in one particular game that turned his team's season around. His training has prepared them for the next step, the varsity level.

While Ford could have easily and justly talked all night about his team, he chose to keep his remarks relatively brief and to the point.

Ford cited the way the team committed itself to basketball, playing as a team and working as a team. Without naming specific players, he praised them with pride and admiration.

He also thanked the school's administration, the Boosters Club, the cheerleaders and the parents of the players.

Jared Hardwick and Ryan Bishop were named varsity captains for next year's squad. Hardwick will be a senior while Bishop, a junior. Both are expected to come off solid years and carry the team deep into the tournament next season.

All of the varsity players were presented with caricatures of the team, drawn so that each of them was presented in a way that highlighted a character trait.

The banquet was capped off by two highlight films. While it must have been hard to fit the season into a limited time space, the films did offer highlights from the Skippers' best games.

A class evening, the banquet was bittersweet for all involved. It provided a look at the past, but also offered a glimpse at the future of Cohasset basketball.

Strong practice lifts laxmen's spirits

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset hadn't had a single scrimmage game heading into its season opener against Duxbury last Thursday. And you can bet your lacrosse stick the Green Dragons had payback on their minds after the Skippers pulled off a victory last year in the final minute of play when the two teams met.

The combination of the two proved to be the Skippers' downfall as Duxbury rolled to an 8-2 win over Ken Ekberg's squad.

Ekberg admits the lack of scrimmages during the preseason didn't help matters, but he credited the Green Dragons' play.

"I think that (lack of games) had some impact on our quality of play," Ekberg said. "They were ready."

The Skippers found themselves sporting an 0-2 record after B.C. High edged them, 11-8. Cohasset played far better against the Eagles and received a big day from Chris McKenna, who netted three goals. McKenna is one of the players on the squad Ekberg will be looking to to score more for the Skippers this season. He has a strong shot, but needs to position himself closer to the net to utilize the force behind his shots to his advantage.

Despite the two losses, Ekberg said this Tuesday's practice was among the best of any team he has ever coach and provided a definite lift to his players.

"The kids walked away feeling pretty good about themselves," he said. "I think the kids have realized they'll have to improve their quality of play this year if we're going to be competitive."

Ekberg commended the play of defensemen Doug Cameron and Matt Belson, as well as goalie Eli Kahn.

"He has really done a good job for us," Ekberg said.

Summer baseball camp set for June

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a South Shore Baseball Club Summer Baseball Camp, Monday, June 26 through Friday, June 30.

The half-day program for ages five through 7 will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. The cost is $70.

A full-day program will also be offered for ages seven through 12, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for $120. Registrations are being accepted at the Recreation Office. Call 383-6791 for further information.

Wrestling clinic thru June 19

The Cohasset Recreation Department will hold a 10-week Open Mat Wrestling Clinic for grades six through 12 at the Deer Hill School on Mondays, beginning April 3 and ending June 19.

The clinic will be held from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. with instructor Tom Littauer. The cost is $22. For further information or to register call the Recreation Department at 383-6791.

U.S.C.G.A. safe boating course

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, Flotilla 1208, and the Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a spring, six-session, safe boating course, offering certification by both the Coast Guard and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youth and adults; however, certification in this course is mandatory for 16-year-olds and under, who wish to operate a craft powered by 25 horsepower or more. U.S.C.G.A., Flotilla 1208 instructors will teach the six-session course, scheduled to begin Tuesday evening, May 16, at the Cohasset High School in the audio-visual room. Class will meet each Tuesday and Thursday evening, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., May 16 through June 1.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791, as soon as possible, as class will be limited in size, and participants will be enrolled on a first-call basis. There will be a $15 per person fee for this program, that covers the cost of the text book and class materials. Checks for payment must be made out to U.S.C.G.A. Flotilla 1208. While the class is designed for children/youth and adults, it is suggested that children age 12 and under be accompanied by a participating adult.

Certification cards will be issued, and both the Coast Guard and state recognize the Safe Boating Certificate. Further, for those who may be interested, certification for this course will allow you a discount on your boat insurance premium of 5 percent to 10 percent, depending upon your insurance carrier.

Little League coaches needed

Coaches are needed for the Cohasset Little League Farm League and Senior League programs. Anyone interested in coaching these levels should attend the coaches meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m., at the Deer Hill School.

bor but I do own a few pars as well as many "others."

South Shore Country Club in Hingham ($22 for Hingham residents on weekdays, $29 for non-residents. $25 for residents on weekends and $33 for non-residents.)

This course is actually owned by the town of Hingham and is a big-time cash cow. And most of the money earned is put right back into the course to keep it looking great.

(Memo to area towns looking to generate funds: Call Hingham town officials and ask for their master golf plan.)

South Shore is a long and hilly course and you can end up with some weird angled shots if you aren't careful with your shot placement.

However, I did hit the greatest shot of my life at South Shore as I missed a hole in one by four feet on a par three on the front nine.

I also played a round of 18 with a former girlfriend there and we had a great time as people of all ages hit the links in Hingham.

Over the last six years, South Shore has become of the most popular clubs around and will only continue to grow.

Ridder Country Club in Whitman ($15 for 18 holes. The price may go up later this month.)

Ridder is a fun course that attracts all kinds of golfers in all kinds of outfits.

One of the best things about Ridder is its par-four 260 yard hole on the front nine.

And while I haven't driven the green yet, several duffers I've played with have and now they think they're John Daly or something.

I also saw an Eagle at Ridder (no, not those things that fly in the air and have feathers, but a score two under par.) The lucky player holed a 100-yard second shot chip on the par-four first hole and had a smile on his face the rest of the day.

Ridder is where you go to work on your game in preparation of that big charity event you signed up for later in the summer on the Cape.

Well, that's all for now. I know there are other wonderful public courses in the area (Strawberry Valley in Abington comes to mind) but I haven't had the pleasure of playing so I don't want to mislead the readers.

As I play more courses and lose more golf balls, I chime in with some insight.

See you on the back nine and remember to aim for the stick.

I received a number of phone calls last week from runners who were upset the complete results of the Cohasset Road Race by the Sea 10K were not printed along with the article. I did print the top finishers in the different age categories, but with 875 runners, there was hardly the space to include all the results.

Even if there was space, I learned my lesson last year not to print all the results.

After last Fourth of July's Hingham Road Race I included in the results those runners' results on the South Shore. The problem though is not all the runners included their hometowns when they filled out the entry blanks. When the computer spit out the results, many towns were not included.

I was left with people calling up complaining their names were not included in the final results. It turned out to be a lose-lose situation.

Here's a bit of advice. The results are posted minutes after the race is over. Write down your finishing time and place rather than looking for it between the pages of the Mariner.

If you happen to run a personal best or would like your name mentioned, by all means give me a call and I'll be more than happy to include it in the sports pages. Believe me, I know the effort that goes into running a hard 10K. Your phone calls are more than welcome.

Spring outdoor recreation programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept mail-in registrations for spring recreation programs for children ages four and five and grades K to six. Programs are scheduled to commence during the week of May 1, continuing for six weeks through June 9. Programs are as follows:

Mondays, grade K to 3, T-Ball, Osgood Field, after school to 5 p.m.; age 4 and 5, organized games, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

Tuesdays, grade K to 3, Games and Sports, Osgood Field, after school to 5 p.m.

Wednesdays, grade K to 3, Arts and Crafts, Osgood, after school to 5 p.m.; ages 4 and 5, T-Ball, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

Thursdays, grade K to 3, Kickball, Osgood Field, after school to 5 p.m.; ages 4 and 5, Kickball, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

Fridays, ages 7 to 12, Nature Studies, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

(Osgood students may stay after school Fridays).

Each program meets for two hours weekly for a six-week period. Some programs will have to be postponed because of bad weather and you may call the recreation office at 383-6791 after 1 p.m., if you are in doubt of program status. Children at Osgood and Deer Hill schools will be advised and sent home should programs not meet.

Children may bring snacks/drinks to programs and all children must be picked up either prior to, or promptly at the concluding program times. Osgood and Deer Hill children may stay after school to participate once parental permission is given.

Fee schedules:

One child in any six-week program $23.

Or four-day programs, first child $65, second child $30, third child, free.

Three-day programs, first child $55, second child $25, third child free.

Two-day programs, first child $40, second child $20, third child free.

Preseason baseball clinic for grades 3-6

The Cohasset Recreation Department is currently accepting registrations at 383-6791 for a two-day, preseason baseball clinic, to be held during April vacation, Tuesday and Wednesday, April 18 and 19, for grade 3-6 youngsters.

The clinic will meet at Milliken Field, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m., and will be instructed by CHS baseball coaches Ron Ford and Bob Knurek and CHS varsity players.

The fee for this program, which will include a T-shirt, is $30 per participant. The proceeds will help support both the CHS varsity and Cohasset Little League baseball programs.

To register for this unique, preseason opportunity, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

Baseball clinic set for vacation

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor an April Vacation baseball clinic Tuesday, April 18, and Wednesday, April 19, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Miliken Field for grades 3 through 6. The cost is $30 and includes clinic and T-shirt. Call 383-6791 to register.

Proceeds will help support both the Cohasset High School Varsity and Little League baseball programs.

Instructors will include CHS baseball coaches, Ron Ford and Bob Knurek and CHS Varsity baseball players.

Ben Maitland's baseball talent was recognized in Puerto Rico where he was voted MVP of the squad he played for.

Cohasset youth voted Puerto Rican MVP

Cohasset fifth-grader Ben Maitland was recently selected as MVP at the Humacao Puerto Rico All-Star baseball game in Humacao, Puerto Rico.

Ben, a Cohasset Little Leaguer, is sailing with his family in the Caribbean and stopped in Puerto Rico to play baseball on the Humacao Phillies for the winter season.

Puerto Rico, the land of fielding greats, was a real baseball challenge for Maitland. Players age 11 to 12 have already played eight years of baseball and take a keen interest in aggressive, competitive play. Humacao, a town one hour southwest of San Juan, has an impressive youth baseball program with five fields, 500 players and an alumni that includes 25 Major Leaguers.

Maitland was surprised when he was selected to play shortstop in the All-Star game and even more surprised when he received the MVP honors.

"The other players are so fantastic I can't understand why I was chosen," Ben said. Mr. J. Ortiz, president of the league, said it was Ben's enthusiasm, baseball sense and errorless play that led to their decision.

Mass. Golf association announces '95 schedule

By Jim Horvath
Mariner correspondent

Wollaston Golf Club in Milton, celebrating its centennial, will be in the local golf spotlight this year as the host club for the 1995 MGA Open Championship. The State Open will take place June 19-21.

The Open highlights the annual MGA schedule of nine events. Other championships on the docket this year include the Four-Ball May 1-2 at Stow Acres GC; the Amateur July 10-14 at Concord Country Club; the Junior August 7-9 at Cummaquid Golf Club on Cape Cod; the Father & Son August 16 at Foxborough Country Club; the Public Links August 21-22 at Maplegate Country Club in Bellingham; the Father & Daughter August 31 at Wahconah Golf Club in Dalton; the Senior September 11-12 at Stockbridge Golf Club; and the Mid-Amateur October 16-17 at two Cape courses, the Country Club of New Seabury and the Ridge Club.

Qualifying for the State Open for most South Shore golfers will be at the Country Club of Halifax May 30. The local State Amateur qualifiers will take place at Duxbury Yacht Club June 12. Entries for all MGA events are available at local pro shops or by calling the MGA at (617) 449-3000.

The Francis Ouimet Scholarship Fund will conduct a state-wide net and gross "Booster Tag" Championship for daily fee clubs this year with the finals scheduled for October 11 at Winchester Country Club.

The first stage of the event is local qualifying at participating daily fee courses. The clubs may structure the qualifying in a number of ways, as long as it is completed by September 1. The basic entry fee will be the purchase of a tax-deductible $10 Ouimet Fund Booster Tag. The low gross and low net winners at each course will go on to the state finals at Winchester CC.

Call the Ouimet Fund for details at (617) 891-6400. The Francis Ouimet Scholarship Fund is considered the golf charity of Massachusetts. Since it was founded in 1949 it has awarded more than $6.8 million in need-based college tuition grants to more than 3,0000 individuals.

Word from Titleist is that just six months after its introduction, the Pinnacle Distance golf ball was used to establish a new world record for driving distance. Recently at the Celtic Manor Golf Club in Wales, Mark Glynn and Rick Evans, the United Kingdom's newest Long Drive Team, smashed an unprecedented drive of 372 yards carry, a new record by more than 20 yards.

Protocol for Team Long Drive competitions does not identify which team member actually struck the record drive. Both Glynn and Evans affirm that the record ought to be recognized as a team achievement. The mighty smash met all requisite record-breaking long drive conditions for wind and altitude and is awaiting final ratification from the Guiness Book of World Records. Pinnacle golf balls are manufactured in Fairhaven, MA.

Police update for March

Police Chief Brian Noonan said March turned out to be a busy month for the police department.

The department made a total of 18 arrests: seven for outstanding warrants; three for Operating under the Influence of Alcohol; two for shoplifting; two for Minor in Possession of Alcohol; one for Violation of a 209A (restraining order); and one for domestic assault and battery.

"Again, as in January and February, there were no Breaking and Enterings reported to the police department," Noonan said.

In March, Det. Rick Grassie and the rape investigator, Officer Shellee Peters, attended an advanced course on Rape and Evidence Collection.

P.A.L.S. Officer Lisa Matos attended a two-day course on violence prevention entitled "Get Real about Violence," Noonan said. Matos attended the course along with three Cohasset school teachers.

Noonan said most of the E-9-1-1 system has been installed. He said the equipment will be tested this month and individual training will start April 21.

'Staying at Home' series offered by COA

On April 19 the Council on Aging will sponsor the first of a three-part series called, "Staying at Home." All programs will begin at 10 a.m. Admission is free.

The second and third meetings will be held on May 17 and June 21. The focus of the series is to educate seniors on the South Shore about the option of remaining in their own homes as they grow older as well as other alternatives.

Taxes, abatements, the costs of structural changes in homes, building codes, low-interest rate loans for seniors and home equity will be discussed on April 19.

On May 17 representatives from several area retirement communities will talk about their services and prices.

A panel discussion on June 21 will focus on VNA's, home care, private nursing services, home health services and the MAP program. Local services and programs that provide live-in help, transportation, shopping, respite and light housework will be highlighted. Medicare's reimbursement for these services will also be discussed.

On Thursday, May 4, a day trip is planned. Participants will board a bus at 9:30 a.m. at Appleseed's in Cohasset and head to Wellesley College. The first stop will be the Davis Museum and Cultural Center, followed by lunch at the Wellesley College Club.

After lunch there will be a tour of the Greenhouse, supported by the Friends of Horticulture. The bus will return to Cohasset after 4 p.m. The cost for the bus and lunch is $25. Reservations should be made before April 14 by calling 383-9112.

On Tuesday, May 9, at 1 p.m. "Learning to Survive Financially" will be presented at the Lightkeeper's Hall. An attorney, financial planner and a judge from the Plymouth District Court will speak. The public is invited and admission is free.

Look for senior scene only in your Cohasset Mariner.

ATTENTION COHASSET CITIZENS

Cohasset Heights, Ltd. has requested a meeting with the Chairmen of the Board of Selectmen, the Board of Health, and the Conservation Commission.

The town has agreed to a meeting Wednesday, April 19, 1995 at the Town Hall

THE ISSUE

The representatives of town government and Cohasset Heights, Ltd. will discuss the possibility for mutual settlement of numerous legal issues, financial assurances and the expansion into Area 5.

It is a very important meeting for the citizens of Cohasset to determine the fate of their tax dollars.

PLEASE ATTEND

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 19, 1995 AT 7:30 P.M.
COHASSET TOWN HALL

THANK YOU IN ADVANCE FOR ATTENDING THIS MEETING AND LISTENING TO THE ISSUES.

Wetlands preservation could sink part of Shaw's plan

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

The Shaw's proposal for Cushing Plaza appears caught between a rock and a wet place, as the conservation commission this week asked that some parts of the plan be moved north, away from protected areas or be eliminated entirely. They estimated that the proposal increases the impermeable (buildings and pavement) area 40 percent over the current plaza, and thus would create additional runoff into nearby Bound Brook.

The brook is considered to be a critical environmental resource, stalked with trout and herring, and home to

Dredging money picture murky

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

After nearly 40 years Cohasset is more than due for a full harbor dredging, said Harbormaster Shawn Kelly, who hopes the job will be done this fall.

Last fall Kelly watched a man cross the channel on foot during low tide and mused that without a dredging, foot traffic would have to be contended with along with boat traffic in the harbor.

Concerned with this problem facing several local harbors, State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) and former state Senator Brian McDonald (D-Weymouth) secured $300,000 for Cohasset in state funds last year for dredging. But there have been recent concerns that those state funds could dry up.

With the passage of "Question 8" on last fall's state ballot, gas tax funds diverted to waterway's projects like harbor dredging, (more than $4 million annually) were earmarked for bridge and road repairs instead.

Fortunately for Cohasset, the state's share of dredging costs may be even less than last year's appropriation, said Selectman and dredging coordinator Peter Pratt.

Pratt said the town's policy and interpretation of the state funding is that the entire $300,000 is Cohasset's —unrestricted, with no local match

Pros, cons of rail presented at public hearing

By Rob Rogers
Mariner staff

Proponents and opponents of the MBTA's proposed restoration of the Old Colony Railroad's Greenbush line squared off at an open public hearing last week held as part of the official public comment period on the project.

Despite a vigorous campaign by anti-rail picketers outside the Scituate High School auditorium that was the site of the April 12 hearing, a majority of those who spoke before MBTA officials favored the train.

Forty-five speakers at the public hearing said they supported restoration of the Greenbush line, while 29 said they opposed it.

In Scituate, however, the battle remained an even draw. Twenty residents spoke in favor of the train, while another 20 denounced it.

Many of those who supported Greenbush restoration described themselves as commuters seeking an end to harried, congested, and steadily-worsening drives from the South Shore to Boston.

"I have survived eight years of commuting hell," said Gilson Road resident Eileen Leveckis. "I don't look forward to coming home from work, because I know how stressed and frazzled I'm going to get. I stay at

Village embodies best of small town life

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

The small town, complete with its village green, white church steeple, friendly stores and gossipy residents is a living part of American culture.

And everyone, it seems, has had an opinion: Frenchman Alexis de Toqueville called them bastions of democracy; Sherwood Anderson dissected them; Ernest Hemingway hated them; Norman Rockwell and Walt Disney romanticized them; while today it seems everyone wants to live in them.

Wetlands preservation could sink part of Shaw's plan

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

The Shaw's proposal for Cushing Plaza appears caught between a rock and a wet place, as the conservation commission this week asked that some parts of the plan be moved north, away from protected areas or be eliminated entirely. They estimated that the proposal increases the impermeable (buildings and pavement) area 40 percent over the current plaza, and thus would create additional runoff into nearby Bound Brook.

Dredging money picture murky

After nearly 40 years Cohasset is more than due for a full harbor dredging, said Harbormaster Shawn Kelly, who hopes the job will be done this fall.

Last fall Kelly watched a man cross the channel on foot during low tide and mused that without a dredging, foot traffic would have to be contended with along with boat traffic in the harbor.

Concerned with this problem facing several local harbors, State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) and former state Senator Brian McDonald (D-Weymouth) secured $300,000 for Cohasset in state funds last year for dredging. But there have been recent concerns that those state funds could dry up.

With the passage of "Question 8" on last fall's state ballot, gas tax funds diverted to waterway's projects like harbor dredging, (more than $4 million annually) were earmarked for bridge and road repairs instead.

Fortunately for Cohasset, the state's share of dredging costs may be even less than last year's appropriation, said Selectman and dredging coordinator Peter Pratt.

Pratt said the town's policy and interpretation of the state funding is that the entire $300,000 is Cohasset's —unrestricted, with no local match

Pros, cons of rail presented at public hearing

By Rob Rogers

Proponents and opponents of the MBTA's proposed restoration of the Old Colony Railroad's Greenbush line squared off at an open public hearing last week held as part of the official public comment period on the project.

Despite a vigorous campaign by anti-rail picketers outside the Scituate High School auditorium that was the site of the April 12 hearing, a majority of those who spoke before MBTA officials favored the train.

Forty-five speakers at the public hearing said they supported restoration of the Greenbush line, while 29 said they opposed it.

In Scituate, however, the battle remained an even draw. Twenty residents spoke in favor of the train, while another 20 denounced it.

Many of those who supported Greenbush restoration described themselves as commuters seeking an end to harried, congested, and steadily-worsening drives from the South Shore to Boston.

"I have survived eight years of commuting hell," said Gilson Road resident Eileen Leveckis. "I don't look forward to coming home from work, because I know how stressed and frazzled I'm going to get. I stay at

Cohasset's week

Budget cuts to be detailed

The town advisory committee will meet Tuesday, April 25 at town hall to finalize line items to be cut if the general override May 13 does not pass.

Town meeting passed a $14.6 million budget last month which is $360,000 in the red. Without an override of the Prop 2-1/2 tax cap, advisors said they will recommend $180,000 in cuts from both the school and town sides of the budget.

The following budget cuts will be recommended: police department, $30,000; fire department, $60,000; harbor dept., $15,000; Tree, Park & Cemetery, $8,000; Highway Dept, $5,000; Landfill Dept., $10,000; Library, $8,000; Recreation, $5,000; Council on Aging, $5,000; and Selectmen's budgets (including, secretarial, wire, building inspector, dog, street lights, town hall, legal and unclassified), $35,000.

"We would prefer not to micro-manage town departments, but would like department heads to determine precise line items to cut to reach these amounts, and to forward that information to the advisory committee before April 25," the advisory committee said in a memo to all departments.

Advisors asked that maintenance not form the basis of these cuts because deferral of maintenance does not save the town any money.

School security is topic

Although school officials concede that the problems plaguing larger school districts do occasionally invade Cohasset, they maintain that the local schools are safer than most.

In the past six years there have been two major thefts from Cohasset High School, including the December robbery of three VCRs and two laser disc players. An investigation by school officials and Cohasset police has failed to turn up either the thieves or the equipment, school committee member James Kirk told the committee last week.

Kirk, who has been investigating school security, said that "a great deal was done about it," but that the equipment was not recovered.

Kirk said that the equipment was etched with an anti-crime code, but that the room in which it had been stored was not locked.

School superintendent Stephen Hart noted that Cohasset has little vandalism or theft compared with other school systems. "The (students') attitude is generally good," he said. "It takes just a very few people to cause problems." However, "any type of activity of this type is too much," he added.

Kirk agreed. "It's hard to keep people vigilant when it's so rare," he said.

School committee member Nancy Sandell said she also concerned about petty theft and the attitude students have toward minor crime. She urged assemblies and other forums to discuss the situation with students.

"I think times are changing," she stated.

"There has to be a response that kids respect," said Joanne Chittick, school committee member.

The committee also agreed that many cases of minor theft in the schools probably go unreported. On the other hand, they said that often items what has been reported as stolen turns up in the lost and found or was borrowed by a friend who forgot to mention it.

They agreed to upgrade security at the schools and to discuss particular precautions in executive session at a later date.

License dogs by May 1

The deadline for licensing dogs in Cohasset is May 1. A $25 fine will be due after that date. Town Clerk office hours are Monday through Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

If unable to go to the Town Clerk's office, a check for $8 (neutered and spayed animals) or $15 (male and female animals) may be mailed to: Town Clerk, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025 along with a note listing type of animal, owner's name, address and telephone number, breed, color, dog's name and a copy of the dog's rabies certificate.

Car crash causes injury

Caroline Shek, 34, 134 Woodland Road, Scituate was treated at South Shore Hospital for injuries sustained in a head-on car crash at Route 3A and Pond Street, last week.

Following the 5:57 p.m. April 13 accident, police cited Shek for failure to stay in marked lanes after the Volvo she was driving veered across into the northbound lane and struck the Toyota driven by Carol Perry, 50, 129 Lawson Road, Scituate.

Perry said Shek crossed the center lane and struck her car head on. Perry's account was supported by two witnesses, police said.

School committee suffers through possible budget cuts

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

If the May 16 override fails, bus service will be eliminated for students in grades 7 through 12, an adjustment counselor for the secondary level and an elementary teacher will not be funded, high school athletic fees will rise to $100 and a kindergarten aide will be eliminated.

"There is certainly no joy in presenting this," Superintendent Stephen Hart said during last week's school committee meeting.

He explained that he did not propose cutting items which are politically popular and might cause voters to support the $360,000 Proposition 2 1/2 override. Instead, the superintendent said the school staff has tried to maintain the quality of education.

"We are trying to be straight forward with this," Hart said. "We tried to be as fair as possible."

If voters reject the $360,000 override, then $180,000 will have to be cut from the education budget, with an equal amount from the municipal government.

Eighty percent of the school budget is made up of salaries, most of which are negotiated with the various unions.

Enrollment is expected to climb three percent next year.

School committee chairman Nancy Sandell confidently predicted that the override will pass and that the proposed reductions will not be made.

"There's a lot of pain in these cuts," she said. "Pain that will be felt by a lot of people."

Originally, Hart had presented a budget which increased 8.6 percent over last year's, but after discussions with the school committee and with other departments, a 5.1 percent increase was proposed. Town meeting last month approved the increase.

After some discussion last Thursday, the committee agreed to accept the reductions that Hart proposed, which total $179,000.

The following cuts are made from the budget passed at town meeting:

• $5,000 from the research and development budget for staff development. Hart explained that this item is intended to help professional staff brush up on their skills in compliance with mandates of the Education Reform Act.

• $14,000 which had been slated to hire an adjustment counselor at the secondary level. This would be a new position, hired through contract, if the override passes.

• $26,000 by eliminating an adjustment counselor at the elementary level.

• $2,500 for a new public address system at the Osgood School. The current system is inaudible in parts of the building, according to Hart.

• $12,000 through eliminating a kindergarten aide. There are now two teachers and two aides. The elimination of one aide would force the program to rely more on volunteers and would increase the teacher student ratio, to about 17 students to one staffer. The ratio is now 12 to one.

• $33,000 which had been earmarked to hire a new elementary teacher. Hart said that by not hiring the teacher, class size at one elementary grade would increase to between 28 and 30 students. He was not sure which grade or which school would have the larger class size.

• $10,000 for the purchase of a computers for the Deer Hill School. The purchase would have been the second year of the planned technology update for the school.

• $35,000 spent on busing for junior and senior high school students and by not adding a fifth route for the elementary students. The current four routes operate at over 100 percent capacity, Hart said.

• $22,000 would be saved by increasing the user fee for sports to $100 per sport, and by ending several sports. Swimming, skiing, sailing would be dropped at the high school and basketball and soccer at the junior high would be stopped. The user fee is now $75 for the first two sports a student plays and $50 for the third sport. The increase would mean a student participating in fall, winter and spring sports, he would pay $300 for the year. Currently, he would pay $200.

• $13,000 generated by cutting the budget for supplies by 15 percent throughout the system. Inflation has already pushed up the cost of supplies and that budget had already been reduced before town meeting.

• $6,500 saved through the abolition of system-wide testing.

The school committee members reluctantly agreed to the reductions, which will be voted on if the override fails.

James Kirk suggested trying to keep some money in the budget for the high school adjustment counselor, noting that the high school has listed the counselor as a top priority for the past couple of years.

He wondered if raising the sports fee to $110 would help keep money in the adjustment budget.

However, several other members pointed out that leaving only a few thousand dollars for counseling would not provide much of a program.

They also said that if user fees are too high, some students will drop out of that particular program and avoid paying or parents will seek waivers from the fee. Either way, after a certain point, the fees could become counter-productive, failing to generate the revenue needed.

Permit deadline extended

The Cohasset Board of Health recently voted to extend the purchase deadline for 1995 Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility permits to Wednesday, May 31. They may be purchased through the mail for the first time. The fee is $65.

Cohasset residents qualify for two permits per household for $65 by providing both motor vehicle registrations with the same address at the same time. If information on a second vehicle is provided at a later date, an additional $25 fee will be charged.

The RTF permit fee for a single person household is $33. To qualify the applicant must sign an affadavit available only in the office of the health department. There is no senior citizen discount.

To obtain a 1995 RTF permit by mail send a copy of vehicle registration(s) with current address and a check for $65 payable to the Town of Cohasset. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Mail to: Permits, Board of Health Office, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

*The low introductory discounted rate on the Home Equity Line is valid for the first six months of the loan and is offered to all new credit lines secured by single family and two family, owner occupied homes. The introductory rate and the regular rate are variable and will change if the Wall Street Journal prime rate changes. The introductory interest rate of the loan is calculated by subtracting 1.52% from the prime rate published in the Wall Street Journal on the first day of the billing cycle, thereafter the regular interest rate is calculated by adding 1.00% to the prime rate. The maximum APR is 18%. Property insurance is required. Final approval will be subject to income verification, appraisal, if necessary, and clear title. This offer is subject to change and may be withdrawn at any time.

A discrete hodgepodge of Colonial, Victorian, neo-Classical and modern architecture, Cohasset Village continues to thrive, just as it has for the past 300 years.

"There's always a lot of activity in the village," said Bob Martin of Goodale Insurance and a leading member of the chamber of commerce. "I think it's looking up. The village is busy."

Martin did concede that there a few empty store fronts in the village, but is confident that they will be occupied soon.

He said that new projects, such as the renovated building on Depot Court housing Dramatic Kitchen and Aquarius Sunrooms, always provide a boost to the area.

An informal survey of merchants indicates that business is indeed looking up.

One Cohasset fixture is Flemming's, which has been in operation for some 60 years, and among other things, restores lamps.

According to Claire, (she would not give her last name, perhaps expecting everyone would know her, in the small town tradition) precision-tuned wind chimes are hitting the right note with many shoppers.

She explained that the tubular metal chimes have been tuned to the correct pitch by musicians and that each chime plays slightly different notes.

Frank Smith has owned Flemmings for the past six years.

Business is also on the front burner at the venerable Red Lion Inn continues to dominate the Village.

"It's definitely prospering," stated Judy Keeler, who along with her husband, Paul, leases the restaurant and bar from owner Curtis Smalzel.

Keeler said that business has improved during each of the five years they have run the restaurant, which features traditional American fare.

Last year they opened a patio beside the impressive rock ledge beside the Inn, which accommodates about 50 additional people.

The owner of a different type of food purveyor, Jim Charves, owner of the Village Gourmet, agrees that Cohasset Village is the place to be.

"Things are going wonderfully," he said. "Every year has been busier, for the past five years since we opened."

With 20-seats, the Village Gourmet sells baked goods, coffee, serves lunch and caters parties.

Charves said that although he caters some parties at Christmastime, spring and summer are the big Cohasset party seasons and business is usually pretty heavy until Labor Day.

Jim Watson, owner of Cohasset Hardware, which has been in business since 1857, and owned by his family for 30 years, emphatically states that he would rather run a store in an old-fashioned business district than in a new mall.

"I hate malls," he stated. "they are an eyesore to the American landscape. In Florida there is a mall every 200 feet and half of them are empty."

Spring is the busiest season in hardware, a Cohasset residents, many of whom are ardent gardeners, stock up on fertilizer, tools and paint.

Ed Mulvey at the Pilgrim Co-Operative Bank agreed that business is strong at the Village.

The bank owns the space occupied by Tedeschi's, whose wall contains the latest in the resident's efforts to keep the Village attractive: the four seasons mural.

A group of Cohasset High School art students painted the murals under the direction of art teachers Colleen Lucas and Thomas Sipple.

Winter has yet to be done, but summer, spring and fall grace the wall. The bank recently painted the background of the building a deep burnt sienna.

The murals face a gravel path with benches, courtesy of the Village Renaissance Committee, a group of residents dedicated to keeping Cohasset spiffy.

Beautification activist Ginger Ferenz worked with the students and said she is pleased with the rave reviews the project has received.

"They did it very nicely," she said. "I think the wall looks terrific."

Jacqueline Dormitzer, is also active with the committee, whose first project several years ago was the installation of a copy of the old water pump, in its traditional spot in front of the hardware store. The pump, which was built by Cohasset history expert Charles Buttman.

Headed by Ann Whelan, the renaissance committee also created the walkway, which runs beside the Texaco station to the town parking lot.

Det. Grassie investigates alleged election fraud

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Police Detective Rick Grassie is satisfied that the recent incidents of ballot tampering did not constitute election fraud.

Grassie investigated the matter after Selectman Peter Pratt alerted Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt's office about the defacement of ballot books in the April 1 town election.

In what was the only contested race in the election, Fair Oaks Lane resident Steve Gaumer launched a sticker campaign challenging Robert V. Davenport of Sohier Street for the one-year unexpired term on the board of health. Gaumer lost by 38 votes.

Officials discovered by mid-morning on election day that someone had placed a Gaumer sticker over Davenport's name on a voting booklet, making it possible that some voters may have punched their voting cards thinking they were voting for Gaumer when the vote would have counted for Davenport. The polls were open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Election Warden Domenic Baccari immediately closed the voting booth and three others whose booklets were altered when the discrepancies were discovered.

Grassie said he met with Baccari and Town Clerk Marion Douglas to examine all 41 voting machines and ballot books, which had been locked in the town clerk's safe since the election, and found four were tampered with. Two were defaced with tape or stickers and two booklets were written in, he said.

Grassie said in his opinion, voters understood how to vote for a write-in candidate and use the sticker.

"I don't think any fraud was intended," he said, noting that the tampering attempts were not well orchestrated.

Douglas said the four machines in question are locked in the vault and will be held there until she receives Grassie's final report. By law, voting machines are held for 30 days. Douglas said no one asked for a recount of the April 1 town elections results.

Election workers Ruth Pratt and Fred Koed man the Precinct One table during the annual town election, April 1. Tomorrow (April 21) is the last day to register for the May 13 override election.

Voter registration deadline

The last day to register for the Override Election, May 13, is Friday, April 21 from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Town Clerk's office.

Plantings to be a hit for ball park

Nancy Snowdale of Mill Lane plans to draft a letter to her neighbors asking for money to buy plantings to beautify Beechwood ball park.

Selectmen approved the concept of sprucing up the [illegible] park last week but say the town doesn't have the funds to pay for an estimated $1,300 in new evergreens and other plants suggested by the Tree & Park Department.

Snowdale appealed to the board for money and support to give the old park a face lift.

"I'm here today to borrow or steal and see if you have ideas or are in favor of beautifying that area," Snowdale said.

While Snowdale said the park was looking good following the recent drainage work, installation of a new backstop and painting of the fences — the addition of some landscaping would dress up the area.

She explained that this proposal is in conjunction with the planned beautification of Beechwood Cemetery, a town project. Snowdale said the plantings would create a more attractive appearance and provide some privacy from the ball park for cemetery visitors.

"It wouldn't look like a concrete jungle," Snowdale said about the park.

Tree & Park Supt. Peter Laugelle suggested in a memo to the board that evergreens, box yews, azaleas and rhododendrons be planted at a cost of about $1,300.

Snowdale also suggested the park be named Pratt Memorial Park. She said the area was originally called "Pratts Corners," after those who donated the land to the town, and had never officially been named the Beechwood Ball Park.

Selectmen said more research would have to be done on renaming the park before they would agree to it.

Snowdale also asked if she could pursue an unofficial offer from Shaw's to obtain the plantings at Cushing Plaza. Shaw's, which owns the shopping center at the corner of Rte. 3A and Beechwood Street, plans to raze the plaza to make way for a new supermarket and retail center.

But Shaw's project manager Brian Leahy said the plants would not be available soon because of delays due to a resident's appeal of the zoning board's decision to issue Shaw's a special permit. In a telephone interview Leahy said he would keep Snowdale's request on file but at this point could not pinpoint a date when the demolition might begin and the plants would be declared surplus.

Selectmen had no objections to Snowdale contacting Shaw's to see about obtaining some free landscaping or contacting Beechwood residents for donations.

Snowdale said this week she would set up an account with the town treasurer for the donations and the cost of any plants would come from that.

She explained that the money left over from the now defunct Beechwood Improvement Association can only be used for ball park equipment and not landscaping.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

WHICH IMPROVEMENTS MAKE SENSE?

QUESTION: How prudent do you think it is to make MAJOR improvements to a home that will shortly be put up for sale?

ANSWER: Seldom do such improvements bring more than fifty cents on the dollar. And all bets are off if you overvalue your house in relation to others in the neighborhood. Few buyers will spend $100,000 for a house in a $50,000 neighborhood.

Adding an extra bedroom or in-ground pool will increase the value of your home - but only at a fraction of the cost. The only money you should spend on a house to sell it at a higher price is for repairs that are OBVIOUSLY NEEDED to put your best foot forward.

The Broad Cove Chorale are a busy group, they are preparing for their 20th Anniversary Concert that will be held at the Old South Union Church in So. Weymouth.

Music of Brahms, Debussy, Holst, Randall Thompson and featuring the Chambered Nautilus by Amy Beach (with full orchestra, soloists and chorus of 55 women), it promises to be a sensational night! Cohasset members of the group are: Susan Cameron, Paula Cuneo, Mary Ann Cushing, Janie Forrer, Joni Jensen, Jo-An Kilgore, Lisa Koed, Betts Murray, Anny Newman and Dee Dee Rousseau.

The date is May 6, the time is 8 p.m. Tickets are $8 in advance, $10 at the door, and are available from chorale members, or at Nobles (Hingham Square), or by mail: 66 Lincoln St., Hingham, 02043 or by phone (617) 749-6561.

Thursday, March 16, was a super special day for the Malone family, you see that's the day that Whitney Rowland Malone was born! Whitney was born at 3:35 a.m., and weighed 8 lbs., 1 oz. She was 20-1/2 inches long. Mom and dad, Dale and Emily, are thrilled, of course, to say nothing of Whitney's two big sisters!

Sarah is six, and Charlotte is three — mommy will sure have lots of helpers, and Whitney will certainly receive a bounty of love! Congratulations to you all!

A few days before Whitney was born, another future Cohasset voter was born! Please give a huge Cohasset Welcome to Brendan Paul Tarpey, the son of Lorraine and Paul Tarpey.

Brendan was born March 14 at 8:53 p.m. and weighed 8 lbs. 10 ozs., and joins his big brother Colin Charles Tarpey.

His maternal grandparents are Charles and Lorraine Carroll and his paternal grandparents are Daniel and the late Mary Tarpey of Milton. We'll bet that Rustic Drive was "hopping" last weekend, hope that the Easter Bunny was good to everyone.

Alissa Sexton's name is certainly known throughout the Noble and Greenough School and the wonderful world of skiing! The winter athletic awards were awarded at an all-school assembly March 9, and Alissa was awarded the James H. Bride Ski Bowl for enthusiasm, spirit and sportsmanship in skiing. Alissa was also voted to the All League. Good job!

A recent celebration was held at TGIFridays for three of Cohasset's finest babies, Christopher Carpenter, Camryn Caron and Patrick Lewis, who all celebrated birthday #1 with their moms.

Hats off to the Cohasset Greens Golf Range and Bob O'Neil! Thanks to them we should have an awesome golf team this year, Cohasset Greens is letting the golfers use the driving range to practice their drives. Whether you would like to do some drives of your own, or check out our team, be sure to stop by. In case you didn't know, it's located on 3A across from J.J.'s.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will hold its fourth annual townwide unity breakfast Saturday, April 29, at 8 a.m. It will be in Bancroft Hall, at the Lightkeeper's House on Government Island. The tickets are $10 per person ($2 from each ticket will be donated to the Lightkeepers Association). For reservations please call The Chamber (383-1010), Keith Knowles (383-6266), or Elsa Miller (383-2626).

Laurie Bronstein is spending the 1994-95 academic year in Ireland in the Colby in Cork program. Laurie, daughter of Barry and Judith Bronstein, is majoring in sociology and is a member of Colby College's Class of 1996. Because international study is an important part of the educational philosophy of Colby College, about three-fourths of all Colby students study abroad during their college careers. Colby runs seven academic programs outside the United States. Students may also participate in a variety of international programs offered by other organizations and universities.

Laurie will certainly have a lot of adventures to relate, hopefully she will share some with us upon her return!

Tuesday, April 18, an Easter Seal Society representative was at Thayer Academy's Middle School to receive a check for $3,836.19, the proceeds of the Boston Celtics/Easter Seal Shoot-Out. Sixty-five Thayer middle schoolers shot basketballs from anywhere on the court for three minutes and then collected pledge money from their sponsors. Cohasset's own Matt Verrochi (Class of 99) was the high scorer with 105 baskets — not only did he raise a lot of money, he is one of five students that won a basketball clinic with Celtic stars Dee Brown and Rick Fox. That's something, isn't it?

That's it for this week ! Please give me a call.

Mormon missionaries serving on the South Shore

By Polly Doggett
Special to the Mariner

The words "Mormon missionaries" may conjure for you an image of two clean-cut young men dressed in dark suits, ringing doorbells. But in this instance it is not two young men, instead, two young women. And they are not from Utah, either.

Take Sister Aura Metcalf, age 21. She hails from Williamsburg, Va. She lived about 20 minutes away from Colonial Williamsburg, historic Jamestown and the battlefields of Yorktown. A favorite thing for her was to walk the battlefields, to see the old houses still there, and to hike about Surrender Field where, she will tell you, "The British laid down their guns!"

"I could feel the spirit of what these men fought for, for those freedoms and sacrifices they made for me!" she said. "It makes you feel good about your country and glad to be an American."

No doubt it was this geography that has shaped Sister Metcalf's interest as a history major first at Ricks College in Id., then, more recently at Brigham Young University campus in Hawaii.

Sister Metcalf's companion, Sister "Ellie" Martin, comes from far off Anchorage, Alaska, although when very young she lived in Israel. She feels she gained a diverse perspective on life as the daughter of a Jewish dad and an Alaskan Mormon mom! Her love of the great outdoors and her work for the forestry service in Sitka, Alaska, has given her a special interest in the environment. She will tell you that she feels infinitely more secure surrounded by grizzlies than she does in the city of Boston!

Sisters Metcalf and Martin represent a corps of nearly 200 young men and young women missionaries who are serving in the New England area, voluntarily and without pay. They labor seven days a week, 12 hours a day, for the pure joy of talking with people who might want to learn more about their church, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. They live a very disciplined life, no television or radio, no vacations, and no dating for the full 18 months. They try to live "in the world, but not of the world." Nothing to detract from living close to Christ and feeling His spirit.

They are serving presently in the towns of Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield, Duxbury and Hanover. The church is located in Hingham.

"Since coming here I have developed a great love for others," Sister Martin said. "The exciting part of our work is to help people recognize their spiritual side. You may find people different on the surface, but down under, quite similar."

The sisters gave as an example a man with whom they are now working. At first he didn't believe in God. Now, his life is so much happier, his family relationships are closer, and he is looking forward to baptism.

"That is what the gospel is all about," Sister Metcalf added, "answering questions, changing lives and showing where the true values lie."

Before their mission neither of these young women had known each other. It could be difficult having to spend so much time always with their companion. But Sisters Martin and Metcalf say they love it. You always have someone to "share your burdens and to help." They said you learn to see strengths in the other. We work together or "nothing happens." "When we lose ourselves in the work, everything else falls in place."

What does the future hold for these two young women? They intend to pick up their lives where they left off. Sister Metcalf wants to pursue her education at BYU in Hawaii with fellow students who come from the many Polynesian Islands of the Pacific. Last semester her roommate was Tongan. BYU is a Mormon-sponsored college where most of the students work their way through by singing, dancing, waiting on tables, caring for the grounds, etc. at the famed Polynesian Cultural Center. Marriage and raising a family is surely her primary goal. But first she feels she should "finish herself."

Sister Martin will want to continue her education in Alaska. Then, maybe start a small business combined with marriage and kids. She'd like a big family. In Alaska she loved going berry-picking. The salmonberry, which grows on a bush and looks much like our raspberries, only paler in color, makes good jams, jellies, syrup and pies. These berries grow wild in southeast Alaska. It takes several people, she says "to jam." All get together, knee deep in berry juice. The kitchen gets all red, and it's great fun.

As diverse as these different cultures of Sister Martin and Metcalf back in Alaska or in Hawaii, you will find one thing they have in common, that is their love of the gospel and their Mormon life style. These young women are motivated, excited about their work and spiritual. There's an energy there. Perhaps you may get a chance to meet them if they ring your doorbell sometime.

Blood drive April 21

The South Shore Hospital will hold a Blood Drive on Friday, April 21, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Emerson conference room. To schedule an appointment to donate call the American Red Cross at (617) 461-2067.

Garden Club meeting

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its annual meeting at the Chart House in Cohasset on Tuesday, May 23. A social hour begins at 11 a.m., followed by brunch and the business meeting at 11:30 a.m. New club officers will be introduced, and the Broad Cove Chorale will present a concert. Tickets are $16. For further information or reservations call Mary Sullivan at 383-1295. Members are encouraged to bring a guest. Babysitting will be available at St. Stephen's church.

Derby Academy fair set

Derby Academy will hold its annual Spring Fair, rain or shine, on Saturday, May 13, from noon to 4 p.m. on the school grounds at Burditt Ave., Hingham.

The fair will include past favorites such as pony rides, Moonwalk, High Striker, face painting, cookie decorating, games and prizes.

Lunch will be available at the Fast Food Grille and at Derby's own Gourmet Galley. Music will be provided.

Authors and illustrators Marc and Laurie Brown will autograph copies of their new books, "D.W., The Picky Eater" and two "Rex and Lilly Easy Readers."

Plants for Mother's Day, gently used books and toys, a white elephant table and home-baked goods will all be on sale. Admission and parking are free.

Earth Day—Every Day

It's springtime, ladies and gentlemen, a time of rebirth, renewal, and reawakening. A time when the minds of many Americans turn away from work and toward that most primal, vital, and satisfying of life's activities: baseball.

Yet spring is also a traditional time for cleaning, and there is simply no better time to think about cleaning up one's life and planet than the 25-year-old festival of the earth known, appropriately enough, as Earth Day. Here are 10 quick suggestions from our household to yours to make this Earth Day one to remember.

1. Ban commercial whalers. They were a terrific backup band for Bob Marley, but now that the great singer has left us, it's time to move on with our lives.

2. Adopt an island. This is a wonderful conservation measure, and one that we at the Mariner have supported at every level. While places like Bora-Bora, Maui, and Aruba have already been claimed by members of our editorial staff, there are still a few remaining islands — such as Manhattan — still in need of a good home. Ask not for whom are the belle atolls. The belle atolls are for thee.

3. Renew, reuse, recycle. Most of us simply do not appreciate the vast potential inherent in the products we may use only once before tossing into the garbage. This is because most of us are not MacGyver. We can all work together to solve this deficiency by watching as many old episodes of MacGyver as possible — thereby not only reusing a precious, limited resource, but providing us with a reason to feel superior to those people who spend their time watching old episodes of Three's Company.

4. Plant a tree. A friend of mine in college once made the front page of his hometown paper by planting several small trees across his high school football field the night before homecoming. People are still talking about his act of unselfish environmentalism.

5. Use public transportation. The South Shore has perhaps the best form of public transportation of any community in Massachusetts — the T, which is an abbreviation for "the thumb." Another T, one with rails and locomotives, is scheduled to arrive on the South Shore sometime in the next 30 years. This vehicle is generally considered a safe, reliable source of transportation by those who commute, and a home-destroying, child-killing engine of evil by some who do not. You may draw your own conclusions.

6. Give to public interest organizations. Few organizations are likely to do more for the environment than your local town officials. Conservation commissions, planning boards, and ad-hoc committees will often tie up a development project for months or even years on end without resolution, thus preserving your environment in its current pristine state of pastoral verdure.

7. Become a vegetarian. Not only will you rescue endangered species such as cows and chickens from the brink of extinction, but your steady diet of beans, curds, and colored stringy substances will provide an endless source of amusement to the rest of us at the top of the food chain, making the world a happier place.

8. Wear tie-died hand-woven rugs from Guatemala. The more of these rugs we buy, the more money the people who exploit Guatemalan rug-weavers will make — which will eventually put the people who exploit Guatemalan tree-cutters out of business, thereby preserving the rain forests. Trust us.

9. Don't let your kids play with war toys. Studies have shown that children who play with toy guns, watch violent cartoons, and rent large quantities of slash-and-gore videos stand a much higher chance of growing up to become Republicans.

10. Think globally, act locally. It's great to be concerned about deforestation in the Amazon basin or overfishing in the Norwegian fjords, but the place to get involved is right here at home. Taking shorter showers, bringing a reusable mug to your favorite coffee shop, and using recycling bins at the curbside or the landfill are all good ways to begin. For those who want to do more, there are dozens of active conservation groups in the area desperate for volunteers. Every little bit counts.

There you have it. Remember, every day should be Earth Day. It's cheaper than Christmas, less depressing than Valentine's Day, less obscure than Secretaries' Day (anybody know when that is without looking?) and you can still receive mail. In fact, to prove our commitment to recycling and environmental responsibility, we plan to publish this same column at the same time next year, when we will be off supervising our adopted islands. Aloha.

Egg hunt sponsors thanked

To the Editor:

The Cohasset recreation commission would like to extend its gratitude to the following Cohasset organizations for their financial support of the annual Easter Egg Hunt: Cohasset Police Association, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, George H. Mealy, Post # 118 of the American Legion, Rotary Club of Cohasset and VFW Post # 9146 of Cohasset.

For donations and goods we would like to express our appreciation to Tom O'Brien Toyota of Kingston, Walgreens and Woolworths of Cohasset.

Thanks for their continued effort and support go to the tree and park department, school department, water department, fire department and police department. Very special thanks go to Mrs. Joanne Lehr, Mrs. Judith Ritts and to Mrs. Manuel Salvador. We are extremely indebted to Richard Barrow, Ted Carroll, Katie Carroll, Liz Corcoran, Bobby Healy, Dana Salvador, Mr. Infusino, Eric Worley and Jessie MacDonald.

The Cohasset Teen Center is grateful to the many who helped support the new teen center operations by purchasing baked goods, drinks and hot dogs at the egg hunt. Many thanks to all who donated bake sale items for the teen center sale.

More than 400 youngsters participated in the annual event and more than 60 prizes were awarded. All the children received candy and a balloon.

Train's pluses outweigh minuses

To the Editor:

Eventually the area's population will be such, the roads so clogged with traffic, the parking so limited in Boston, and the environmental stress from automobile pollution so great, that mass transportation of people must be re-established. Over the long term, the capital invested in a railroad will result in the best combination of service and cost per person. Eventually rail service will have to be restored. Better to do it now, before costs escalate further.

Similarly populated areas in Europe, and to some degree in the U.S., are abundantly served by railroads. Why can't we be as pragmatic and far-sighted?

Of course the train has its negative impacts, but they have to be weighed sensibly against its long-term advantages. Environmental impact isn't automatic cause for rejection; it has to be weighed against the environmental impact of automobiles and the "environment" of quality of service to people.

Concerns for cost, tax impact, and property values are legitimate and understandable, but spare us from those who cloak those concerns in confused, uninformed and emotional drivel about environmental impact.

Greenbush restoration opposed

To the Editor:

I've always been for restoring the train. I've been on the Back on Track mailing list since the 1980's, and a train buff since I was a kid. I assumed those opposed to it were writing letters just to protect their property.

There may be people exaggerating on both sides of the issue, but after attending the MBTA information meeting Tuesday, April 11, and questioning Mr. Brennan, I quickly began to realize that much of what I thought was exaggerated is actually true. The train will cross Sohier Street in back of the Osgood School 24 times a day (12 round trips) at 57 mph. The entire Greenbush Line is 17 miles long and has more grade crossings per mile (over 40 in 17 miles, at least 10 in work until 7 p.m. to avoid the rush. My 17-month-old son can't see his grandmother because she lives on the other side of the city and doesn't drive. I want to state my overwhelming support for having the train come here."

Many of those who spoke against the train said they were abutters of the proposed Greenbush right-of-way, and feared the coming railroad would bring noise, pollution, and decreased property values to their homes.

"I want to know what plans the MBTA has to compensate Scituate for the tax revenues it is going to lose when the quality of life in this town goes down because of the train," said Mary's Lane resident Frederic Jewett. "There are 150 homes abutting the train, and 286 altogether within the buffer zone. If all of those homes ask for a 30 to 50 percent tax abatement, Scituate could lose about $238,000.

"I'd also like to know if the T is going to provide extra police, firefighters, fences, and other mitigation measures once the train goes in," Jewett added. "People have decks and pools within 30 feet of where the train is going to be. How will they be taken care of? And why has the estimated cost of the train gone up so much since the project was first announced?"

Greenbush supporters declared that existing modes of transportation are unacceptable for getting to and from Boston, particularly for elderly, handicapped, and student residents.

"I take the Red Line to Boston every day," said Marshfield resident Kevin Jones. "By 7 a.m., the parking lot at the Braintree station is completely full. The Red Line itself is overcrowded and over capacity. The commuter boat is not a real alternative. Boats only go from point A to point B — they don't allow you much flexibility in traveling back and forth, and they aren't convenient for someone who lives in Scituate."

"For senior citizens, the railroad is not an alternative to driving," said Pinebrook Lane resident Virginia "Gigi" Linhart, who is blind. "It's an alternative to staying home. Many of us have had to give up jobs because we could not find a reliable ride to Boston. Young people who are in college and cannot afford to live on campus cannot commute from Scituate, either, because it costs too much. Seniors can't go out of town for medical appointments or cultural events. The railroad will not only improve the physical environment of Scituate, but the mental environment of the people who live here."

Rail opponents, on the other hand, argued that the MBTA had not adequately researched alternative methods of transportation for its supplemental draft environmental impact statement, released on March 22.

"It isn't too late for a 20th century solution to our transportation needs that will not disrupt our town the way the restoration of the Greenbush rail will," said Gannett Road resident Gilman Wilder. "The most viable solution available is a dedicated bus lane, similar to the O-bahn bus system currently in place in Essen, Germany. These buses have a capacity of 90 to 220 passengers, and can be powered either by diesel/electric engines or by natural gas. In Adelaide, Australia, the municipal government was considering installing a light rail system, but changed their minds and switched to a dedicated bus lane. They knew it would be less disruptive."

"The most troublesome aspect of Greenbush is its limited passenger capacity," said Chief Justice Cushing Highway resident Frank Kilduff. "The Naval Air Station in South Weymouth has unlimited capabilities for parking and storage of rapid transit vehicles, and could be converted at a fraction of the cost of the Greenbush line."

"The train is 19th century technology," said Ely Avenue resident Norman Paley. "An elevated monorail would have no grade crossings and would be completely electric, with less hassle or risks than the train. But it hasn't been studied. The T needs to look at the alternatives."

Pro-train speakers dismissed these and other train alternatives as fanciful suggestions incapable of satisfying the needs of commuters.

"I have commuted for 12 years by boat and by car," said Cohasset resident and MBTA advisory board member Louis Eaton. "The railroad is the only way to go. We deserve to be as well-treated as the people in the northern and northwestern suburbs."

"Rail service has a capacity of 5,550 passengers during peak hours, when they would have five trains running with six coaches each," said Marshfield planning board member Greg Guimond. "To move the same amount of people in the same amount of time would require either an eight-lane highway, 18 1/2 boats using 2,556 gallons of fuel, or 126 buses using 705 gallons of fuel. That's in comparison to the 355 gallons of fuel that would be used by the train."

"My husband drove to the Red Line every day to go to work," said Cudworth Road resident Edna Parker. "He got caught in the blizzard of '78, and had to stay in Weymouth for three nights. He was on heavy medication, and didn't have his pills. They sent someone on a snowmobile to get them, but the person got the wrong kind. My husband almost died.

"I know the train can run in bad weather," Parker continued. "I know a boat can't and the Plymouth and Brockton bus can't. Other modes of transportation won't work. I rode the train 37 years ago, and I'd ride it again."

Many of the train's supporters, in fact, described themselves as former rail commuters, either in Scituate or in other communities.

"For six years I took the train from my home to my job in downtown Chicago," said Duxbury resident William Weldey. "I found riding the train to be productive and relaxing. Commuting from my home in Duxbury to Boston has been anything but relaxing. I think trains would improve the quality of life on the South Shore."

Yet anti-rail speakers claimed comparing the proposed rail system either to the former Greenbush line or to commuter trains in other communities is like comparing apples and oranges.

"The Greenbush line cannot be compared with other lines," said Driftway resident Ilana Marks. "Having 43 grade crossings in 17 miles of track is unprecedented in New England. At a time when Transportation Secretary Peña is offering to pay communities to close grade crossings across the country, how dangerous would it be to bring 43 of them into our town?

"Trains will be crossing Beaver Dam and First Parish Road at 60 miles per hour," Marks continued. "At Hollett Street they will be going 50 miles per hour. That is unacceptable. It is unacceptable to have a layover facility with parking for 1,000 cars on the banks of the North River, one that could potentially be under water at high tide. We have special, unique communities here on the South Shore. You can keep your trains. We don't want them!"

Train advocates said the safety concerns of Greenbush naysayers are unfounded, and that the South Shore will have little difficulty re-adapting to the railroad.

"For 100 years the railroad ran through this area on a double track," said Cohasset resident Osborne Ingram. "Those were heavy trains, and yet little or no damage was done to buildings, and the populace was barely bothered by their presence. In fact, most of them enjoyed it. Today, communities to the north and west of Boston would not give up their commuter rail systems for love nor money.

"Safety concerns have been exaggerated with regards to these grade crossings," Ingram added. "With a railroad, you know when and where the train is going to come, and serious accidents are rare. With a road, you never know when a car is going to come around a bend. And yet we are capable of teaching our children to be aware of those random dangers. Surely we could do the same with the train."

Environmental impact is another issue rail foes believe has not been adequately addressed in the MBTA's research.

"One issue that has been overlooked in placing the proposed Greenbush station on the south side of the Driftway is that the Greenbush sector lies on a 50-year flood plain," said Debbie Lenahan, executive director of the North and South Rivers Watershed Association. "Raising the station site above the 100-year flood level would require construction and filling, which could result in an environmental catastrophe.

"The layover station would most likely also serve as a storehouse for diesel fuels, oil, and solvents," Lenahan continued. "We know that it only takes one can of spilled oil to contaminate millions of gallons of water. The site is also on the flood plain of the North River, a protected scenic river. The visual degradation and impact of the light and noise on the enjoyment of that river has not been addressed.

"Trains would have to warm up for 45 minutes every morning before beginning service and 45 minutes in the evening before shutting down," Lenahan said. "In conditions of extreme cold, the train could run all night long. The environmental impact statement says there will be no noise impact from the Driftway station. I disagree. In addition, any nitrogen or carbon monoxide pollution from the station would degrade the habitats of fish and shellfish in the North River."

Train supporters say the environmental cost of continued air pollution from automobiles far outweighs any possible negative impacts of the train.

"I have heard a lot of young parents express their concerns about the risks of train service," said Terry Bloomfield, a member of the Cohasset Committee for Commuter Rail. "The MBTA needs to pay extreme attention to the risks these parents' children will face if the train is not built.

"The United States is the only industrialized state that has not faced the reality of what the unrestricted use of fossil fuels is doing to our air quality, not to mention the long-term risks to the economy," Bloomfield added. "Forty percent of our tremendous deficit is caused by the importation of petroleum from some of the most unstable parts of the world. Our children could end up with another Gulf War on their hands if our sources of petroleum are at risk.

"We have also remained relatively unconcerned about the climatic changes and the danger to our ozone layer largely caused by automobile air conditioners," Bloomfield said. "It's time for this country to wake up and do something. When we reach the point that gasoline is costing us $4 to $5 a gallon, all of you will be begging for rapid transit systems. We have the opportunity today to commit to a train service for which the MBTA cannot by law assess us more than 2 1/2 percent per year. This kind of a good deal may not be available in the future. That's too much of a risk to take."

Greenbush adversaries said that the MBTA will find a way to increase Scituate's rate of assessment as the costs of building the Greenbush line and the state's central artery/third harbor tunnel project continue to climb. The T cannot be trusted, they argue, and its project ought to be nipped in the bud before it becomes a monster.

"Why is it that we can afford a Greenbush line that will cost between $215 and $400 million, but we can't afford a $40 million bus and boat enhancement project?" asked Hollett Street resident Daniel Fitzgerald.

"We know from everything we've heard that the T is not a good neighbor," said Cohasset resident Peter Robb. "But trust and truth have become victims to the interest of some of the town's citizens. We're tired of the vicious attacks on abutters, tired of being dismissed because we're locals. We don't want to be forced to pay for a ride we don't want."

Rail endorsers say that the anti-train lobby is little more than a group of self-interested, hysterical homeowners bent on thwarting the dreams of a large percentage of South Shore residents.

"I lived in another community where I became an abutter of commuter rail," said Ocean Avenue resident Steven Parker. "My property value increased by 25 percent. The commuters here in Scituate have a real need for the train, and their voices have to be heard. We can't let a few squeaky wheels stop us from having decent transportation on the South Shore."

"People seem to forget that every town except one on the South Shore voted overwhelmingly for the train," said Gilson Road resident Algis Leveckis. "We are being held hostage by a small group of people with individual concerns."

"Keep in mind that while 246 Scituate homes may abut the train, there are 6,000 homes in Scituate," said Scituate planning board member Ann Burbine. "I can't believe people would even suggest a boat as an alternative with the possibility of the Coast Guard station in Scituate closing."

Twelve Cohasset residents, five Marshfield residents, four Duxbury residents, and one resident each from Norwell and Hingham spoke in favor of the train at the Scituate hearing. Four Cohasset residents and two Hingham residents opposed it.

The Scituate hearing was the second of three South Shore hearings to be held during the period of public comment on the MBTA's supplemental draft environmental impact statement, which will end May 22. The third and final hearing is scheduled for 7 p.m. Thursday, April 20, at the Hingham High School cafeteria.

The MBTA will continue to accept written comments about the proposed Greenbush project until May 22. Comments can be sent to Andrew Brennan, Manager of Environmental Affairs, MBTA, 10 Park Plaza, Boston 02116, to Trudy Coxe, Secretary of Environmental Affairs, at 100 Cambridge St., Boston 02202, reference EOEA 5840, or to Mary Beth Mello, Deputy Regional Administration, Federal Transit Administration, 55 Broadway, Cambridge 02142.

Cohasset) than any other rail line on the MBTA. When I asked Mr. Brennan, he agreed that was excessive, but said that the MBTA is planning to educate our children about the grade crossings.

The MBTA will be using state of the art equipment, but the original route (right through the heart of Cohasset and Hingham) was not designed for the 1990's.

Restoring the Greenbush Line is a nostalgic but ill-conceived idea. I loved it when I first heard about it, but after hearing Mr. Brennan's April 11 presentation and realizing that there will be no station stop in the village, it occurred to me that the MBTA may just be using Cohasset village as part of a high-speed highway from Marshfield to Boston.

Cohasset Village is unique. A fast-moving train running through it 24 times a day isn't going to add to its charm. If the Greenbush is restored I'll buy a ticket, but thanks to the MBTA information meeting, I've reluctantly changed my mind about wanting a railroad. It would be an irreversible mistake.

Wetlands preservation could sink part of Shaw's plan

a host of animal and plant life.

Although they did not take a formal vote, there was consensus among conservation commissioners that the third building, labeled Retail C, which will house the Rockland Trust Co. and the dental office of Dr. MacArthur, be moved north toward Beechwood Street, or even better, removed.

They also criticized plans for additional parking which intrude on wetlands behind that building. The parking, which may never be used, is nonetheless required to be on the plan according to Cohasset's stringent parking by-law.

In addition, there was some agreement that the main entrance to the shopping center be moved to the north side of the present Bergson's building, further from wetlands than is now proposed.

BEECHWOOD LOCATION OPPOSED

By following its legal mandate to preserve wetlands above all else, the conservation commission could become pitted against neighbors and even the planning board.

The rock, or more specifically ledge, in question lies at the northern end of the parcel, near Beechwood St. and Pine Ridge Lane. Area residents object to the proposed blasting of the ledge which would be necessary to locate a truck turn around and delivery area, which they say is too close to their homes.

They have asked that the project be moved to the south, away from Beechwood St.

"BLOODY RETAIL C!"

Conservation commission member Veneta Roebuck asked Shaw's representatives if Retail C is absolutely necessary. Twenty-four parking spaces would be required for Retail C, which is slated to be built between Bergson's and the frame shop, which is not part of the project.

Brian Leahy, Shaw's real estate manager, started to explain that some tenants now at Cushing Plaza have leases and that selectmen asked that the new project keep as many current tenants as possible, saving as many of the 83 jobs as possible.

"I know all about that," Roebuck replied and repeated her question.

After the briefest of pauses, Leahy said that yes, the third building is necessary.

"We tried to meet the needs of about 1,000 people," to develop the plan, he explained. "It's a nightmare to tell you the truth."

"When you look at the plans, you can't take your eyes off bloody Retail C," snapped Roebuck, who along with other commissioners insisted that the building poses an unnecessary threat to wetlands.

Roseanne McMorris, commission chairman, asked if the tenants could not be relocated elsewhere in Cohasset, such as in vacant space across the street.

Leahy explained that some of the septic systems on Route 3A may not be able to accommodate the heavy water usage the dentist's office would generate.

The commissioners then asked about bank.

"If you find them space that they'll take," Leahy stated.

"What bank is it?" asked Roebuck, as she and McMorris both wrote down the name of the Rockland Trust Company.

PARKING CRITICIZED

But conservation commissioner Thomas Callahan was the most vocal critic of the proposal, lambasting the parking arrangement, which he called "a gross intrusion," into wetlands.

He suggested a meeting with the planning board "to bend the stupid regulations" on parking.

"Protecting the environment is more important than the number of parking spaces," Callahan said.

Shaw's executives noted that they have proposed the absolute minimum number and size of parking spaces required by Cohasset law.

In addition, Callahan suggested that because the zoning and planning boards have already discussed the proposal, the conservation commission will have to relax its rules to suit them.

"Because we go last, we have to be the ones the bend, as usual," he said.

Callahan also asked about last week's Mariner article in which Max Pounder of the design review committee recounted that his board had tried to move or turn the proposed building so it would be further away from Beechwood St., but kept bumping into wetlands.

Martin Healy, Shaw's lawyer, explained that people at the meeting suggested that some 5,000 square feet of wetlands could be filled to accommodate the project.

Some members of the conservation commission looked disgusted at the idea.

"That's typical," Callahan remarked to McMorris in a stage whisper.

Healy went on to say that Shaw's opposes filling wetlands and sticks by its current presentation.

"Your heart is in the right place," replied Callahan. "Your execution needs a little work."

WILDLIFE ABOUNDS

Much of the over two-hour long meeting consisted of a grueling, detailed discussion of the wildlife habitat in and around the wetlands.

Shaw's wildlife consultant Kurt Olson, a Ph.D. with the Daylor Consulting Group, said that the proposal contains 9,650 square feet of pavement, down from the present 12,400 square feet.

In addition, a total of 55,000 square feet of shallow march, deep marsh and upland area will be created.

In enormous detail, he went over the types of vegetation to be planted in each habitat and the type of animal they would benefit.

Several members of the commission however, suggested that Shaw's should concentrate not on wildlife diversity, but on cleaning the water in the pond and drainage system, which will take water from the parking lot and eventually lead it into Bound Brook.

They said that some species with little animal benefit, reed canary grass, for instance, would do a better job of removing impurities from the runoff than the varieties Shaw's proposes.

Olson listed red cedar, white pine, sweet pepper bush, blueberry, red oak, hickory, pine, crab apple and red twig dogwood for various spots of the wild area.

When he visited the site, Olson said he saw evidence of cottontail rabbits, grey squirrels, herring, black and green bill gulls, crows, woodchucks, garter snakes, weasels, partridges, frogs, black birds, song birds and butterflies.

In response to a question from Jeff Waal, he agreed that the habitat is excellent for red tail hawk as well.

Leahy said the proposal "is the best project I've been associated with."

Both he and Healy denied that Shaw's has tried to maximize the economic potential of the site, pointing out that they could have proposed a bigger building under the zoning regulations.

"We're taking extraordinary precautions," Healy maintained.

Conservation commission members said that the rich variety of wildlife and the importance of the wetlands must be preserved to the greatest extent possible.

When someone questioned the bird life in the area, Roebuck quickly said that, until her dog got too old, she used to hunt pheasant and partridge 500 ft. up the brook from the site in question. She also pointed out that since Bound Brook is a herring run, "It needs to be looked at and needs to be evaluated very carefully," since development could have wide-ranging impact.

HEARING CONTINUED

The hearing was continued to May 16 at 8 p.m. Shaw's appears for the third time before the planning board April 26 at 8 p.m.

required. But Pratt conceded there is a difference of opinion on the matching issue and ther e are some state officials that don't see it that way at all.

Generally, the dredging formula calls for a 75 percent contribution by the state and a 25 percent match by the town. But with so much of the harbor under federal control, Cohasset's situation is unique. Pratt said that estimates show that the state and town's share might only cost $130,000 leaving the remaining funds for other harbor related projects or helping out neighboring towns but putting the money back into the state "pot."

"I hope if we don't use all the money, we can help our friends and neighbors. We're all in this together," he said.

According to Pratt the "lion's share" of the dredging costs will fall on the Army Corps of Engineers who have jurisdiction over 90 percent of the harbor and channel. Pratt estimates that the state and town sections to be dredged amount to 6,000 cubic yards, with an area 10 times that size under federal jurisdiction.

Pratt said he is pleased with the tremendous bi-partisan support the town has received at the state and federal level, but said there is some urgency to complete this dredging. According to U.S. Congressman Gerry Studds, by 1997 all federal monies for small harbor dredgings will be wiped out, Pratt said.

Pratt described a multi-step process underway in anticipation of an early winter dredging. In addition to financing the project, the area of federal jurisdiction must be defined and agreed upon and then approved by Congress. State budgeting and contracting, followed by environmental permitting at the local, (conservation commission) state, (Coastal Zone Management) and federal level (Environmental Protection Agency and Army Corps of Engineers) must then be done.

It's a complicated process and it changes by the day, Pratt said.

The town has diverted $25,000 for the project from its waterways account, which is funded through Cohasset's portion of the boat excise tax, to contribute to the project.

Currently consultants Nucci & Vine Associates of Newburyport are working on the regulatory paperwork, filing permits and assessing the final costs and the amount of silt material in cubic yards that will have to be dredged. Pratt said the need for this project in the outer harbor and channel is great.

There is a tremendous problem at low tide for our commercial fishing fleet and recreational boaters, Pratt said.

"This problem hits everybody and it is severe," he added.

Just Tuesday morning, Kelly reported that a fisherman sat aground in his boat for an hour and a half, waiting for the tide and trying to get out of the harbor to fish.

And while most of Cohasset's commercial fisherman have become used to the situation and have learned how to time the tides, Kelly says the shallow water in the channel catches many visiting boaters unaware.

"Deeper draft sail boats have to wait for the tide and if there is any kind of swell they just bounce across the harbor," Kelly said.

In addition to the problems faced by mariners trying to get in or out of the harbor, Kelly said the gradual filling in of the harbor has cut down on the number of moorings available to boaters and translates into lost income for the town.

The harbor was filling in for a while, but when the channel started to fill in too, the need for dredging became more urgent, he said.

"We're going to have a lake here soon," said Kelly, who noted that during the low tide, the Coast Guard buoys in the federal channel lie on their sides.

"The Coast Guard kept moving the buoys making the channel narrower and finally said we can't move them any more," Kelly said.

Several boats went aground last year and Kelly said he expects more of the same this year.

But even more disturbing is the Coast Guard prohibition on its boats entering the harbor within three hours on either side of low tide, which could leave a boater in distress, high and dry.

Kelly hopes that with an autumn dredging the harbor will be more navigable for 1996 sailing season.

"We plan to re-align the mooring field to get more boats in and to cut down on the waiting list," he said, noting that the list has more than 300 mariners waiting for a mooring.

obituaries

Timothy J. Myers

Timothy J. "Tim" Myers, 25, of Cohasset, a 1990 graduate of Cohasset High School and a gold medal winner in Special Olympics, died Sunday (April 16) of a brain tumor in Medi-Plex Nursing Home, Weymouth.

He was employed by Road to Responsibility Inc. in Hingham and was a member of the Cohasset Strikers Bowling League and the South Shore Saturday Nighters Club.

Mr. Myers was born in Boston, the son of Thomas J. and Dorothy E. (Skoglund) Myers, now of Cohasset. He also leaves a brother Stephen V. Myers of Cohasset, and many aunts, uncles and cousins.

A funeral service was held at 11 a.m. Thursday (April 20) in the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

The McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer Street, handled the arrangements.

Donations may be made to the Scituate Special Olympic Fund, Anne Marie Goff, 30 Hammond Ave., Cohasset, 02025, or South Shore Saturday Nighters, South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens, P.O. Box 58, North Weymouth, 02191.

Barbara Weisenfluh

Barbara W. (Wall) Weisenfluh, 58, co-founder of Hunneman and Co. Real Estate and part owner of Sea Heather Antiques in Cohasset, died at home Sunday (April 16) after a long illness.

Mrs. Weisenfluh, who retired six years ago, served on the board of directors of the Cohasset Historical Commission and was past vice-president of the Cohasset Garden Club. She also was active in the Community Garden Club of Cohasset.

She was a member of the Cohasset Yacht Club and Cohasset Golf Club, and a former member of the Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club.

Born in Uniontown, Pennsylvania, Mrs. Weisenfluh graduated from Penn State University. She lived in Cohasset 33 years.

Wife of Allen Weisenfluh, she leaves two sons, Kurt Weisenfluh of Larchmont, New York, and Barton Weisenfluh of Cohasset; a daughter, Pamela W. Lessard of Cohasset, and a niece and nephew.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. today (Thursday, April 20) in the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave. Burial is private.

Funeral arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Homes of Cohasset and Norwell.

Contributions may be made to the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025, or to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer St.

Dudley S. Marsh

Dudley S. Marsh, 74, of Cohasset, a retired manufacturers representative, died Friday (April 14) after a long battle with cancer.

Mr. Marsh worked for several companies in the Boston area before retiring in 1981.

He served with the Merchant Marine, then enlisted in the Navy for flight training and served in the Pacific Theater during World War II.

Born in the Bronx, N.Y., he was raised in Chappaqua, N.Y. and studied economics at Lehigh College in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

He enjoyed bicycling and traveling with his wife, Jane L. (Magness) Marsh, and his family.

Mr. Marsh also leaves two sons, John M. Marsh of Edgewater, New Jersey, and William A. Marsh of Scottsdale, Arizona; a daughter, Suzanne L. Meyer of Dennis; his 95-year-old mother, Isabella Marsh of Centerville; two sisters June Roberts of Centerville and Ellenanne LeClair of Peterborough, New Hampshire; and two grandchildren. He was the son of the late Albert E. Marsh.

A memorial service was held Wednesday (April 19) in the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave. Burial was private.

Arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset and Norwell.

Citizens Bank to sponsor Music Circus, Melody Tent

The Citizens Bank has signed on as presenting sponsor for the South Shore Music Circus and the Cape Cod Melody Tent for the 1995 season. The Citizens Bank Summer Concert series for both theaters will run from late June through Labor Day.

The SSMC and CCMT have been in continuous operation since 1951 and 1948 respectively. Proceeds from events held in both theaters are donated to other not-for-profit organizations supporting education throughout the South Shore and Cape Cod.

Music Circus opens July 1

The South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset has announced a partial line-up for the 1995 season. Acts scheduled to appear include: 1994 Grammy winner Trisha Yearwood, who will open the season on July 1; the Pointer Sisters, July 14; George Carlin, July 15; Rosemary Clooney, July 21; Huey Lewis and The News, Aug. 13; and Kenny Rogers (2 shows), Aug. 26.

Tickets for the Music Circus, now in its 45th season, are now on sale to the public. For further information call 383-9850.

CDC to present 'Annie'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "Annie" on May 13, 14, 19, 20 and 21. The cast of 86 ranges in age from six to 18.

Kerry Tondorf will direct the play, with Karen Ginsburg as musical director and Bonnie Duval as choreographer. Tickets are $8 for general admission and $6 for groups of eight or more. Advance tickets may be reserved by calling 545-3195.

The cast includes Cohasset residents Taylor Strecker (as Annie), Elizabeth Ingber, Caitlin O'Connell, Laura Kondrat, Sera Genovese, Caitlin Welby, Kendra Topalin, Kelly Stone, Ashley Leahy, Holly Dinsmore, Elizabeth DeJulio, Emily DeJulio, Maggie O'Neil, Samantha Canton, Ron Nicynski, Alex Russell, Abigail Kornet, Stephanie Canton, Joseph Nicynski and Jake Kovach.

Free anxiety screenings

Psychological Services for Problems in Living, a group of independent therapists located in Hingham, will hold free screenings for anxiety disorders on National Anxiety Disorders Screening Day, May 3. The group's purpose is to help educate the public about anxiety disorders and assist those suffering from the symptoms to identify their illness and get help.

Those participating in the screening will view a video at 10 a.m. or 4 p.m. depicting the symptoms of the different anxiety disorders, fill out a written self-test for these symptoms and have the opportunity to discuss the results with a mental health professional and receive a referral if appropriate. All screenings are anonymous.

Individuals interested in attending a screening are encouraged to bring a friend or loved one for support if they wish to do so.

National Anxiety Disorders Screening Day is a program of the National Mental Illness Screening Project and is held during National Mental Health Month. For further information call 749-8661.

Ballroom dancing benefit

The Friends of Mary-Martha Learning Center will host their second annual Spring Fling, an evening of ballroom dancing, on Friday, April 21, from 8 p.m. to midnight at the Sons of Italy Hall, 81 Market St., Rockland. Proceeds from this event will go toward reducing the mortgage on the Center's property.

The evening will include dancing, raffles and dance exhibitions by the Fred Astaire Dance Studio, Hanover. The Soft Touch Band, a 20-piece band with one vocalist, will provide music from the era of the '40s to the present. The band is a non-profit organization that uses profits from their appearances for college scholarships.

Sponsors for the evening include Talbots, St. Paul's Parish, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company and the Quincy Crisis Center, Inc.

Hot hors d'oeuvres and dessert will be served, donated by local catering companies and restaurants, including the British Relief, Whiton House, Bella's, Zinnas Cafe, The Cookery, South Shore Country Club, Swedish Bakery and Mike's Pastry.

Tickets are $20 per person and are available at Hingham Library, Buttonwood Books and Noble's Camera in Hingham and Cohasset. Reservations are recommended, and the cost of tickets is tax deductible. For further information or reservations call 749-0867 or 740-1375.

MMLC is a residential educational program for homeless women with young children where residents receive training in life skills designed to help them achieve positive, long-term changes in their lives.

Sarah deLima of Cohasset portrays Mrs. Lovett, and her son Jonathan is Anthony Hope in Hingham Civic Music Theatre's production of "Sweeney Todd" on stage this weekend and next in the Hingham High School auditorium. Call (617)749-0857 for tickets and information.

'Sweeney Todd' to open

Hingham Civic Music Theatre will present "Sweeney Todd," directed by Martha Sawyer, on April 21, 22 and 28 at 8 p.m. and on April 30 at 2 p.m. in the Hingham High School auditorium. The play is under the musical direction of Juliet Cunningham.

The cast includes residents of many South Shore communities. Actors and actresses in lead roles are: Bill and Brenda McColgan, Jonathan and Sarah DeLima, Courtney Furno, Scott Kradolfer, Betty McColgan, Stacey Fleming, John Sawyer and Douglas Forbes.

Advance sale tickets are $12 for adults and $10 for children 12 and under, although the play is not recommended for this age group. Groups of 15 or more are $10 each. All tickets will be $12 at the door. Call Faye O'Brien at 749-0857 to order tickets.

Openings at Conservatory

South Shore Conservatory's Summer Wind Ensemble students will have the opportunity to learn the intricacies of music making from experienced composer Thomas Duffy, a Yale School of Music professor. He is director of the wind ensemble, jazz ensemble, chamber wind ensembles, concert band and marching band at Yale.

Duffy has been commissioned by the Conservatory to compose a celebratory piece to mark the organization's 25th anniversary. The project is funded in part by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

The culmination of his efforts and those of the SWE students with whom he will work will be a late July premiere performance of Duffy's composition. He will assist SWE musical director and conductor Malcolm W. Rowell in executing the anniversary piece.

There are still openings for brass, woodwind and percussion junior and senior high students who would like to participate in the program. Summer Wind Ensemble seating auditions will be held at the SSC on Saturdays May 6 and 20 and June 3. For further information call the Conservatory at 749-7565.

Pierson hosts South Shore Historical Society

On Thursday, April 20, host Wigmore Pierson's guests on "Pierson to Person," shown live on Continental Cablevision channels 3 and 53 from 8 to 9 p.m., will be South Shore Historical Society presidents Mary Hartshorne, Cohasset; Mary Frasier, Braintree; Eugene Chamberlain, Hingham, Richard Cleverly, Hull; and Kathleen Laidlaw, Scituate.

Discussion topics will include the role of local historical societies and commissions in preserving our local heritage, outreach programs, publications and plans to celebrate the arrival of the 21st century.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience. Those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road in Scituate by 7:30 p.m. For further information call the show's executive producer, Robert Belliveau, at 545-2500.

Fall weekend help sought

The Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee is looking for citizens and groups who are interested in joining a steering committee to plan a new Fall Drug Free Weekend. The committee hopes to bring back the annual drug and alcohol awareness weekend, which has been very successful in previous years.

The Drug and Alcohol committee will hold an organizational meeting at Cohasset Town Hall on Tuesday, April 25, at 8 p.m. for all those who are interested. For further information or to volunteer if unable to attend the April 25 meeting, call Ted Carroll at 383-2233.

Hingham Cemetery tour

There will be a "Stroll through History Past and Present" on Sunday, May 28, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Hingham Cemetery and Chapel, 12 South St. (Raindate is Monday, May 29.)

The afternoon is planned to give participants an opportunity to review the cemetery's genealogical records, locate family graves and markers, purchase plants for Memorial Day remembrances and tour the grounds and important monuments with noted Hinghamite Phil Swanson and nationally acclaimed landscape architect A.E. Bye (2 to 3 p.m.)

A short talk about the headstones and their carvers and a tour of the cemetery's colonial headstones will be featured. By request, lots currently available for purchase will be marked.

The event is free and open to the public. For further information or raindate notification call 749-1048.

Spring concert, April 23

A Gypsy Spring Concert of light-hearted classical music for coloratura soprano and gypsy violin will be held on Sunday, April 23, at 4 p.m. at Old Ship Church, Main St., Hingham. Admission is $5 at the door.

The concert will feature soprano Joan Jensen of Cohasset, violinist Josef Porteleki of Canton and pianist Carolyn Curtis of Marshfield.

Jensen and Porteleki will perform light-hearted duets from Brahms' "Gypsy Songs" and the Strauss operetta "Die Fledermaus."

Jensen has made solo appearances with choruses in the United States and Europe and teaches voice and piano in her Cohasset studio.

Porteleki emigrated to the United States from Austria and Hungary and studied at the New England Conservatory and Boston University. He was an award-winning member of the Newton Symphony Orchestra.

For further information about the concert call 383-2240.

Conservatory recital slated

Accomplished pianist and South Shore Conservatory faculty member Mark Goodman will perform his annual faculty recital on Sunday, April 30, at 4 p.m. in South Shore Conservatory's Cox Hall. The music of Bach, Chopin, Messiaen and Schumann will be featured.

His program will include "L'Alouette Calandrelle" and "La Bouscarle," both pieces of Goodman's ongoing cycle in his performance of the complete "Catalogue d'Oiseaux," a 13-piece set Messiaen composed between 1956 and 1958.

Goodman has been a SSC piano instructor since 1981. He received his master of music degree from New England Conservatory and a bachelor of music degree from Oberlin Conservatory.

Admission to the recital is free and open to the public. For further information call 749-7565.

'Congo Capers' is back!

The Second Congregational Church of Cohasset will present "Congo Capers of '95," a reprise and update of the hit variety show of 1993, on May 19 and 20 at 8 p.m. at Cohasset High School.

The show will feature more than 50 singers, dancers, thespians and spear-holders recruited from members and friends of the church. Jo Ann Fichtner is director and choreographer, with Bob Leavitt as musical director.

"Congo Capers of '95" is the latest in a line of shows offered publicly by the parishioners of the church and will feature song, dance and novelty numbers, drawing from well-known Broadway shows such as "Porgy & Bess," South Pacific" and "Chorus Line."

Tickets are $5 and are available through Maggie Bates, ticket chair, at 383-1129, from cast members or from the church office by calling 383-0345.

'Staying at Home' series offered by Council on Aging

On May 17 and June 21 the Council on Aging will sponsor the second and third meetings in a three-part series called, "Staying at Home." Programs will begin at 10 a.m. Admission is free.

The focus of the series is to educate seniors on the South Shore about the option of remaining in their own homes as they grow older as well as other alternatives.

Taxes, abatements, the costs of structural changes in homes, building codes, low-interest rate loans for seniors and home equity were discussed in the first session on April 19.

On May 17 representatives from several area retirement communities will talk about their services and prices.

A panel discussion on June 21 will focus on VNA's, home care, private nursing services, home health services and the MAP program. Local services and programs that provide live-in help, transportation, shopping, respite and light housework will be highlighted. Medicare's reimbursement for these services will also be discussed.

CULTURAL TRIP SLATED

On Thursday, May 4, a day trip is planned. Participants will board a bus at 9:30 a.m. at Appleseed's in Cohasset and head to Wellesley College. The first stop will be the Davis Museum and Cultural Center, followed by lunch at the Wellesley College Club.

After lunch there will be a tour of the Greenhouse, supported by the Friends of Horticulture. The bus will return to Cohasset after 4 p.m. The cost for the bus and lunch is $25. Reservations should be made before April 14 by calling 383-9112.

FINANCIAL SURVIVAL IS TOPIC

On Tuesday, May 9, at 1 p.m. "Learning to Survive Financially" will be presented at the Lightkeeper's Hall. An attorney, financial planner and a judge from the Plymouth District Court will speak. The public is invited and admission is free.

Dot Lincoln cherishes her door prize won at the recent Mardi Gras festivities at the senior center. Be sure to stay tuned to the Cohasset Mariner for all the latest news of interest to the town's active senior citizens.

Clean-up effort slated

On the National Day of Service, April 25, a clean-up is being spearheaded by the Cohasset Mosquito Control Board. Staff, parents and students from the high school have joined in this community effort to clean up sites from Sanctuary Pond to Smith Place.

Debris in this area has contributed to the water's stagnation. An effort to remove most of the debris and release the flow of water will be made. Anyone who would like to assist should meet across from the Cohasset post office on Tuesday, April 25, at 9 a.m. Call Jack Buckley at 925-1284 to volunteer or loan yard tools, including rakes, shovels, clippers, rubber boots and gloves.

PSO meeting April 27

The PSO Spring Meeting will be held on Thursday, April 27, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. Guest speaker will be Henry Lague, who has taught several graduate credit courses and workshops for teachers and parents and who gives a light-hearted view on parenting today.

Workshop items needed

The following items are needed for the Wheelock Theatre's prop and costume-building workshop on May 11: clothes line, glue (Elmer's or other types), plastic containers from L'Eggs, foam rubber, scissors, old belts, old hats and yellow or orange felt.

There is a bag in the Deer Hill School office marked "Workshop Materials" where donations may be placed.

Parenting workshop set

The elementary school adjustment counselors are offering two Wednesday evening parenting workshops to parents of elementary-age students (K-6).

The workshops will be held on April 26 in the Watermelon Room at St. Stephen's Church from 7 to 9 p.m.

The April 26 workshop will involve a discussion about "Self-Esteem . . . What Can A Parent Do?" and "Teaching Responsibility and Respect to Children."

The workshops are open to any Cohasset parent and will be led by Ed Leonard and Frank Fitzgerald, who have extensive experience consulting with parents.

To register call 383-6115 or 383-6117.

The recent PSO-sponsored workshop on "Values," presented by Frank Fitzgerald and Ed Leonard, will be aired on local cable television channel 3 at 6:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 13 and Thursday, April 20.

Collect points for software

The Bank of Boston on 3A, adjacent to the Tedeschi Plaza, is giving out "points" for various transactions conducted at the bank by Cohasset residents. These points can be applied toward the purchase of computer software for the Cohasset Public Schools.

There is no obligation. A short form bonus certificate may be filled out by customers that will earn 100 points for the Cohasset school of their choice. The deadline is May 31. Residents may drop off their points at one of the schools in town.

Osgood School earned a color printer (7,000 points). Their new goal is Apple Quick-Take Camera, which is 10,000 points. 4,000 more points are still needed.

The Deer Hill School has already earned a Camcorder (7,000 points). Their new goal is a CD Rom for 5,000 points. They have 350 points collected toward that goal.

The Jr./Sr. High have earned an Apple Quick-Take Camera and are working toward other software goals.

DHS library needs help

Parents are needed to volunteer in the Deer Hill School library to re-input data that was lost through a computer malfunction. Volunteers should call the school with times they are available. An easy, understandable system for entering the data will be devised. The lost information represents three years' of work by Marge Murphy and others.

Preschool screening slated

The Massachusetts Special Education Law (Chapter 766) provides for the screening of three- and four-year-old children whose parents feel may have a special need which might interfere with their future educational progress. The screening process includes a parent interview as well as a health, vision, hearing, motor and language screening.

Parents who feel that their child might have such a special need should call: Alicia Shea, Director of Student Services, Cohasset Public Schools, phone 383-6104.

If the child will be entering kindergarten in September, he/she will be undergoing a pre-kindergarten screening, and it will not be necessary for parents to call the Office of Student Services.

Cohasset High student group tackles range of social issues

By Alison Shyer
Mariner correspondent

If you're one of those people who thinks that the only things that interest teenagers are dating and video games, you ought to spend an afternoon with Caitlin Connolly and company.

Connolly, 17, and a junior at the Cohasset High School, is the unofficial president and co-founder of the Social Awareness Organization (SAO) at the high school, a group of about 25 students, mostly girls, who are hard at work changing the world.

The SAO, according to its mission statement, is in the business of combating racism, sexism and homophobia, as well as "other current issues."

Since its inception last February, the SAO has done everything from helping free prisoners by writing letters for Amnesty International — which they do at every meeting — to conducting a survey on sexual harassment among high school students. The results of the survey — about 100 charts and graphs — will be part of a workshop put on by the Massachusetts Department of Education for the faculty of the high school.

Most recently, in conjunction with the Cohasset Board of Health, the SAO has implemented recycling at the high school, both of paper and of cans and glass. The proceeds from the recycling — about $50 a month — go to a host of different local charities including the Cohasset Teen Center, Greenpeace and Project Bread.

Connolly says that the group is a kind of spinoff of the Cohasset Volunteer Service, a group of students who concentrate on local volunteer work, but has evolved into a more expanded version.

"We saw that there was a lot of enthusiasm [in the student body] for volunteerism, but we really wanted to get more politically involved and tackle more far-reaching problems. Before SAO, I don't think people had a chance to address some of these issues."

The SAO's meetings, which are held twice a month, are open to anyone who wants to get involved. And although there are 25 members, only about ten show up at every meeting.

"I don't know why we don't have more members," says Nicole Peterson, a 16-year-old junior who has been a member since the first meeting last February. "A lot of people seem interested, but I guess they don't want to take the time out after school to come to the meetings."

Despite the relatively low turnout, the group's efforts have not been fruitless. Every morning, the disk jockeys on the school's radio station remind the student body to recycle properly. There are blue plastic bins in each classroom, over which there are admonitions to the potential trasher: "No Metal. No Tissue or Paper Towels." The amount of unrecycled trash has decreased considerably.

The SAO is a self-supporting group but last year received a donation of $250 from the Cohasset Rotary Club and is hoping to receive another this year.

Although the SAO has taken a step away from the local community service group, it has hardly overlooked its home state. Last fall, the students sponsored a clothing drive and ended up donating a "vanload" of clothes to the Pine Street Inn, a homeless shelter in Boston. And this spring, some of the members will be participating in the MSPCC (Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children) Annual Walk in April, and the Walk for Hunger in May.

Connolly also has a pet project, called the Green Circle Program, which is a project that focuses on teaching tolerance and understanding to elementary school children. Connolly and co-founder Ryan Sawchuck were trained by the National Conference for Christians and Jews and will spend a total of 12 hours this school year teaching what they've learned to the students at the Osgood School.

So, those of you who are still concerned about the ambivalence of our nation's youth, take a look in your paper recycling bin: are there any paper towels?

DHS student enters contest

David Crowley-Buck, a fourth-grade student at Deer Hill School, has submitted an entry to a geography contest sponsored by Delta Airlines. David's teacher, Dorothy MacDonald, read about the contest in "Instructor" magazine and suggested David apply.

The contest, which was open to any fourth-, fifth- or sixth-grader, required a three- to six-page letter, essay or diary entry concerning something in the contestant's town that was stolen by Carmen Sandiego's gang. Applicants were to use travel schedules and maps to describe how they followed the thieves to a chosen city where stolen goods had been transported.

David chose Minot's Light in Cohasset as the stolen item. Using geography skills required by the contest rules, David traced the thieves to Cairo, where the lighthouse was buried in the sand under King Tut's tomb.

A panel of geography professionals from the National Council for Geography Education will serve as judges, choosing both national and international champions. Winners will be selected based on three criteria: use of geography tools, originality and clarity.

SSAC offers scholarships

The South Shore Art Center has announced the availability of scholarships for graduating high school seniors continuing in an arts education.

The Fred E. Bergfors Art Scholarship ($1,000), the South Shore Art Center Scholarship ($500) and the MacIvor Reddie Award ($200) will be announced at graduation exercises or Senior Awards Night and at the 40th Annual Art Festival on the Common June 16 at 6 p.m. The scholarship will be paid directly to the winner's school toward tuition at the beginning of the second semester.

Portfolios must be submitted to the SSAC on Friday, April 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Interested students may call the center at 383-ARTS for an application form.

College Academy applications

Area students attended College Academy, a three-week summer program for bright students in grades four through eight at Stonehill College last summer. Younger children attended College Gate, a program for bright children in kindergarten through grade three at Plymouth River School in Hingham.

Applications for the 1995 sessions of both programs are available now. Youngsters at College Academy select four courses out of the forty that are offered and attend four 75-minute classes each day. Crafts Unlimited, Brain Power, Marine Biology, Radio Broadcasting, Magic, Rocketry, and Chemistry are just some of the popular College Academy courses.

At College Gate the children choose three 55-minute classes in the half-day program. Electricity, Banging Nails, Computers, Star Light, Star Bright, Magic Carpet, and Chemistry are favorites this year. To provide the optimum learning experience, no class has more than 10 students. Many of the courses are multi-disciplinary and are not offered in traditional elementary schools. College Academy will be at Stonehill College and College Gate will be at the Plymouth River School in Hingham from July 10 to 28. Bus transportation is available to Stonehill College from the South Shore. For additional information or an application, people may call the College Academy office: 617-828-9283.

Softballers still searching for first win

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The team could just as easily be sporting a none-too-shabby 2-2 record but that's not the case with the Cohasset High softball squad.

Granted, the Skippers weren't close in 15-0 losses to Abington and Norton. Cohasset was up against one of the top pitchers in the league when Green Wave sophomore Jill LeClerc fired a no-hitter against the locals. The Lancers, too, are in the upper echelon of the South Shore League and had little trouble handling Mike Gill's inexperienced squad.

While the Skippers had their problems at the plate, both Abington and Norton feasted on Cohasset's pitching. That, Gill says, played a major part in each of the losses.

"The difference was it was fast pitching against slow pitching," Gill said.

It was the gut-wrenching losses to East Bridgewater and Scituate that really hurt. Not only would they have given Cohasset the emotional lift it needs, but two wins could have set the stage for a team still learning how to win. Instead, the Skippers are searching for that ice-breaking first win of the year.

Mental mistakes and a lack of clutch hitting, typical of a young squad, led to a 4-2 EB win and the Sailors' 10-9 victory.

"They were both games we could have won," Gill said. "There are several starters playing in their first year and they're still learning."

Because many members of the team escaped Cohasset and vacationed elsewhere this week, Gill didn't hold practices. But the players best be prepared for plenty of batting practice this weekend. Gill said he intends to practice on Saturday and Sunday in preparation for Monday's game against Hanover.

None of the players have really stood out this season, save for Kathleen Fitzgibbons. The sophomore has been the "highlight player so far" according to Gill with her play in the field. "She has been a vacuum cleaner at shortstop," he said.

There's nothing like a sunny April afternoon to lift the spirits of sports fans all over the South Shore. And if this great weather continues, the spring high school season should be, as they say around these parts, wicked awesome.

But there's trouble brewing for some teams because of the April school vacation.

It seems that many student-athletes, including some legitimate all-stars, have departed for vacations that have left their teams and coaches in the lurch.

While it's great to get out and see Mickey and Goofy with mom and dad or travel with your classmates to India, missing several games and a week of practice is a no-no for anyone who takes their sport seriously.

"The player vacations have really hurt us," said one South Shore coach who did not want to be named. "We've had to move the lineup around and I hope this doesn't end up costing us a win or a tournament berth.That would really hurt."

Another problem with the April vacation is that some players actually miss more than just the scheduled week.

"It seems the vacation starts earlier for some players and ends up running longer and longer," the frustrated coach continued. "I just hope we get everyone back without too much damage."

Another coach is just as frustrated but is helpless to do anything.

"What can you do?," she said. "It happens every year no matter what anyone says. I gave up worrying a long time ago."

Team unity is often thrown out the window on the return of these Accidental Tourists.

"Many think they are just going to walk back and start every game like nothing happened," a coach said. "That isn't really fair to the players who hung around and played and practiced."

And the players missing the games due to vacations also end up getting hurt.

I know this from first-hand experience.

In the third grade I had to drop off the Hanover Minor League all-star team because my family was vacationing on the Cape that summer.

I didn't think it would be a big deal to miss the all-stars. I was wrong.

I came back from two weeks of sun and fun to discover the all-star team had won the state Little League title.

Each player received a trophy about five feet high while I got a sunburn.

I didn't miss any more all-star games in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades but I never even got close to a championship trophy. Oh well.

In the overall scheme of things, missing a few games by taking a vacation isn't a big deal.

But you only get once chance at high school athletics. And if you want to miss ten days of the season working on a tan, that is your choice.

The 99th Boston Marathon was held on Monday and it seems to get bigger and bigger each year.

And while it is fun to watch all those foreigners tear up the course, the real fun is watching the amateur athletes give it their best.

Most don't even have an official number but still chug along for 26 miles and 385 yards.

Hingham's Samantha Drohan, only 19 years old and a freshman at UPenn, was one of those unofficial runners on Monday.

She ended up running 3:59 in her first marathon and had a great time.

But she had some interesting observations about the start in Hopkinton.

"The streets were jammed with runners and I was way in the back because I wasn't officially entered," she said. "The gun went off and it took a full two and a half minutes for me to reach the starting line. I couldn't believe it."

Drohan said the runners were all bunched together for the first mile or so before it started to clear up.

"Once you got going it was all right," she said. "But I couldn't believe the start."

A couple years ago a race official mistakenly stood in the road as the noon gun sounded and was promptly trampled by a sea of runners.

Several top runners also took a spill over the official who scrambled to the sidewalk to save his life.

—D.M.

You can bet a whole lot of unofficial runners will join Samantha Drohan in next year's 100th running of the marathon. The hype for the 100th began long before the gun for Monday's race went off. Send your entry blanks in early!

I made a few observations while watching highlights of the race that evening and some in general:

* With her good looks, ear-to-ear smile and bubbly personality, women's winner Uta Pippig would be the most popular female sports figure in the country. And she wouldn't make fun of Mickey Mouse either.

* It has been 15 long years since an American last won the race. That distinction goes to Hingham's Greg Meyer, who recorded a 2:09 in 1983.

* I still have that memory in my head of the '79 race when former Greater Boston Track Club teammates Bill Rodgers, Randy Thomas, former Norwell resident Bob Hodge and Weymouth's Dick Mahoney passed 12 miles running four abreast at the front of the lead pack. Now we have a phalanx of remarkable African runners doing the same. Boston has become more of an international race than ever before.

* Johnny Kelly was truly a remarkable runner and still is a great Boston Marathon personality, but the idolization and rehashing of his story every year is starting wear a bit thin. Damn me to a five-mile run down Route 3A, but I'm sick of the way he is treated like Pope John Paul II every Patriot's Day. Enough's enough!

* Dan Jansen covering the marathon? I'll admit Jansen, who is a great athlete and appears to be very personable, was better than listening to that egomaniac Lynn Jennings panning Joan Benoit Samuelson a few years back for even running the race because she wasn't in top shape. Nancy Kerrigan's bum-kisser for hire, Paul Wylie, did the same during the '94 Winter Olympics when Katarina Witt was skating. Hey Paul, in my book, if a guy can skate he should be playing hockey.

* What I said about Uta Pippig also holds true for wheelchair champion Jean Driscoll. Is there a better endorsement for training in Hingham's Wompatuck State Park than Driscoll's comments of spending the week's before the race packing the miles in on the fire roads? It's tough to maneuver in a wheelchair, but you still can't beat Hingham's Worlds End for some quality training away from the hustle and bustle of the busy streets near 3A.

* Word was on Wednesday that the B.A.A. race organizers are expecting a field in the 25,000-plus range for next year's race. There is also a rumor circulating that Rodgers may just come out of his marathon retirement and take part in the big event.

Rodgers, who first won the race as a 27-year-old in '75, is still one of only three runners to win the race three years in a row ('78-80). The other two are the legendary, seven-time winner Clarence DeMar, and of course, Ndeti. The Kenyan star, whose son, Boston, was born on the day of his dad's '93 victory, vows he'll be the first one to cross the finish line next year. And you can bet he means it.

* Yours truly ran to the 13.5 mile mark in the '81 race and the experience was like no other race I have ever run since. For starters, there were lines no less than 50-yards long to the portable toilets before the race. Anyone who has ever been forced to use one of those toilets-from-Hell knows just how "enjoyable" an experience it is.

And a tip for anyone short of running gear. Five minutes before the start, runners shed whatever warmups they are wearing and toss them to the side of the road, knowing they'll never see them again. A coach could dress a cross country team 10 times over with the amount of sweats that are left in Hopkinton.

The crowds are sparce during the first few miles as the course winds through Ashland and Framingham, but begin to thicken as the race wears on. The best part of the race for me was running past Wellesley College between the girls screaming encouragement to the runners. I was nearing the halfway point of the course, and I can tell you, the girls certainly give you a lift.

Hopefully, I'll join the throng and be a part of next year's race. I have some training in front of me, but I want to be able to tell the grandkids that I was part of that crazy race.

—Joe Reardon

With the marathon history for another year, it's time to focus on the upcoming local road races. Kids and Company Inc., is sponsoring the Fourth Annual Hingham Road Race on Sunday, May 21. The 4.2-mile race, proceeds of which will benefit children with disabilities, begins at Hingham High School and winds its way through Wompatuck State Park. T-shirts will be provided to all runners who pre-register by May 5. They can also be purchased for $8.

Along with the 4.2-mile race, which begins at 11 a.m., a 1-mile fun walk kicks off an hour earlier. The fee for the race is a very reasonable $10 for pre-entrants and $12 on the day of the race. The walk is $3 and free for kids 12 and under.

Awards will be given out all first-place finishers in the law enforcement category, 19 and under, 20-39, 40-49, 50 and over, firefighters and special athletes. Festivities include raffles, refreshments and more for the entire family.

A free reception for runners and their families will be held at the Son's of Italy beginning at 12:30 p.m., and catered by Stars Restaurant.

Summer baseball camp set for June

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a South Shore Baseball Club Summer Baseball Camp, Monday, June 26 through Friday, June 30.

The half-day program for ages five through 7 will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. The cost is $70.

A full-day program will also be offered for ages seven through 12, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for $120. Registrations are being accepted at the Recreation Office. Call 383-6791 for further information.

U.S.C.G.A. safe boating course

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, Flotilla 1208, and the Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a spring, six-session, safe boating course, offering certification by both the Coast Guard and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youth and adults; however, certification in this course is mandatory for 16-year-olds and under, who wish to operate a craft powered by 25 horsepower or more. U.S.C.G.A., Flotilla 1208 instructors will teach the six-session course, scheduled to begin Tuesday evening, May 16, at the Cohasset High School in the audio-visual room. Class will meet each Tuesday and Thursday evening, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., May 16 through June 1.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791, as soon as possible, as class will be limited in size, and participants will be enrolled on a first-call basis. There will be a $15 per person fee for this program, that covers the cost of the text book and class materials. Checks for payment must be made out to U.S.C.G.A. Flotilla 1208. While the class is designed for children/youth and adults, it is suggested that children age 12 and under be accompanied by a participating adult.

Certification cards will be issued, and both the Coast Guard and state recognize the Safe Boating Certificate. Further, for those who may be interested, certification for this course will allow you a discount on your boat insurance premium of 5 percent to 10 percent, depending upon your insurance carrier.

South Shore Community Center "Gymnast in Motion"

Registration is now going on for gymnastic camp for girls ages 6-13. Come join Ruthann and Susie for a fun-filled three days of gymnastics, bowling and contests for prizes. Camp meets April 19, 20 and 21 from 2 to 5 p.m.

Rotations on floor exercise, uneven bars, vault, beam and dance. All levels learn new skills. Camp cost is $45 for three days. Call the center for more information at 383-0088.

Girls Night Out, ages 5-7, May 12, 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Girls Night Out, ages 8-11, May 19, 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Registration is now being taken for Girls Night Out. Come join Ruthann, Gina and George for a fun-filled evening of gymnastics, bowling, and make your own pizza. No drop-ins. Everyone receives something for participation. Call today for more information, 383-0088. Cost is $15 for non-members, $13 for members.

SESSION IV GYMNASTICS

Session IV gymnastics begins Mondays and Tuesdays, May 15 and 16. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday classes begin May 10, 11, and 12. Session IV runs for five weeks at a cost of $32.50.

The center gymnastic program offers a wide variety of classes for the 3-year-old as well as the 18-year-old. For more information, call the center at 383-0088.

Cohasset Recreation Department
Spring outdoor recreation programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept mail-in registrations for spring recreation programs for children ages four and five and grades K to six. Programs are scheduled to commence during the week of May 1, continuing for six weeks through June 9. Programs are as follows:

Mondays, grade K to 3, T-Ball, Osgood Field, after school to 5 p.m.; age 4 and 5, organized games, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

Tuesdays, grade K to 3, Games and Sports, Osgood Field, after school to 5 p.m.

Wednesdays, grade K to 3, Arts and Crafts, Osgood, after school to 5 p.m.; ages 4 and 5, T-Ball, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

Thursdays, grade K to 3, Kickball, Osgood Field, after school to 5 p.m.; ages 4 and 5, Kickball, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

Fridays, ages 7 to 12, Nature Studies, Osgood Field, 3 to 5 p.m.

(Osgood students may stay after school Fridays).

Each program meets for two hours weekly for a six-week period. Some programs will have to be postponed because of bad weather and you may call the recreation office at 383-6791 after 1 p.m., if you are in doubt of program status. Children at Osgood and Deer Hill schools will be advised and sent home should programs not meet.

Children may bring snacks/drinks to programs and all children must be picked up either prior to, or promptly at the concluding program times. Osgood and Deer Hill children may stay after school to participate once parental permission is given.

Fee schedules:

One child in any six-week program $23.

Or four-day programs, first child $65, second child $30, third child, free.

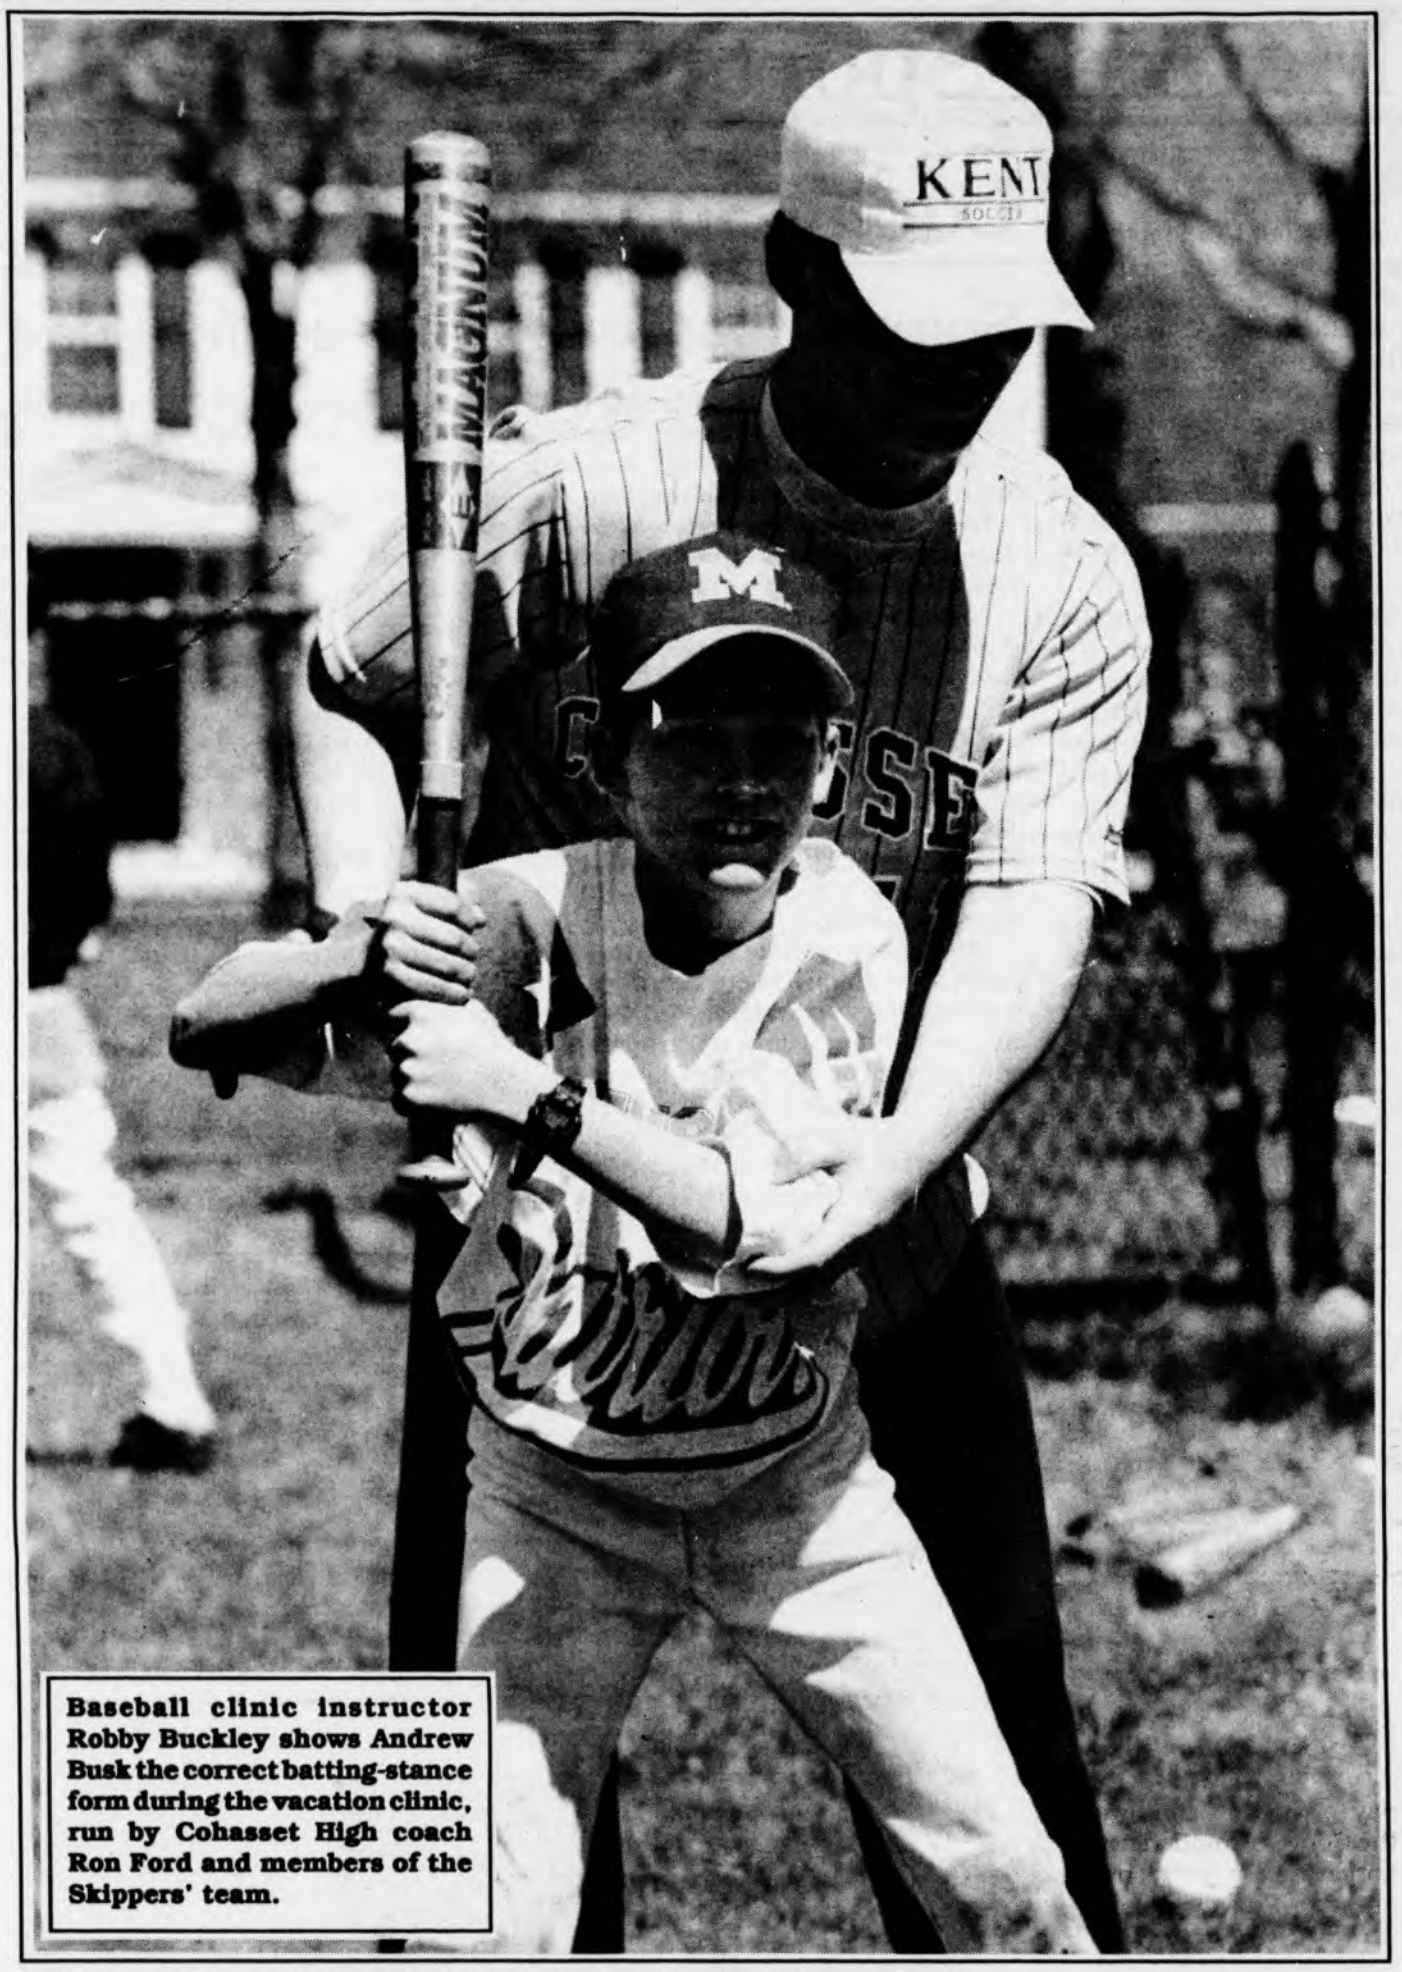
Three-day programs, first child $55, second child $25, third child free.

Two-day programs, first child $40, second child $20, third child free.

To register mail checks payable to Town of Cohasset, Cohasset Recreation Department, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, 02025.

Baseball, according to Ford

Photos by J. Paul MacDonald



Baseball clinic instructor Robby Buckley shows Andrew Busk the correct batting-stance form during the vacation clinic, run by Cohasset High coach Ron Ford and members of the Skippers' team.

Cohasset High baseball captain Nick Welz hits some grounders to the younger players at camp.

Cohasset head coach Ron Ford instructs a group of future high school stars on some of the basic fundamentals of the game.

Little League coaches needed

Coaches are needed for the Cohasset Little League Farm League and Senior League programs. Anyone interested in coaching these levels should attend the coaches meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m., at the Deer Hill School.

1995 Bay State Games registration

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation announced that registration for the 1995 Bay State Games has begun.

Registration information can be found at high school and college athletic departments, local libraries, town recreation departments, YMCAs and various sport organizations. Information also is available by calling 617-727-3227. This year marks the introduction of judo into the games, along with the expansion of archery and six-on-six field hockey.

Tryouts and qualifying tournaments start May 28 and run through June 24. The finals will be July 12-16 at five Boston area universities. Opening ceremonies will take place Thursday night, July 13, at Boston City Hall Plaza.

Free sports clinic at SSH

Trainers, coaches, parents and adult athletes are invited to take "time out" for a free evening spring sports clinic at South Shore Hospital on Wednesday, May 10, from 6 to 9 p.m. in the Emerson conference room.

Sponsored by SSH physicians affiliated with South Shore Orthopaedic Associates, Inc. the clinic will familiarize participants with the types of injuries and treatment methods specific to spring sports. There will also be a presentation on choosing proper athletic footwear.

Admission to the clinic is free but reservations are required and may be made by calling (617) 340-8349.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 95P0848E1

Estate of VIRGINIA B. JONES late of COHASSET
In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will and codicil of said decedent be proved and allowed and that BARBARA J. MOORE of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on May 17, 1995.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16A.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this seventh day of April, one thousand nine hundred and ninety-five.

Harvard Community Health Plan knows what you want in a Medicare* plan: top-quality health care, with lots of great benefits, that doesn't cost a fortune. It's that simple.

First Seniority is just $15† per month, whereas Medicare supplemental plans that cover comparable services can cost you as much as $60 more per month. First Seniority offers you:

- Your choice of personal care physician
- Emergency coverage anywhere in the world
- Only $5 for routine visits
- Dental coverage, an exclusive First Seniority benefit
- Hearing aid and eyeglass coverage
- Virtually no paperwork
- Wellness programs, including fitness and nutrition classes
- Prescription drug option for only $89† per month.

And there's much more. That's why you should come to the First Seniority Open House being held in your area. Come visit, have some refreshments, and learn more about the plan. There's no obligation, and our First Seniority representative will be happy to answer all your questions. Seating is limited at each Open House, so call today to reserve your place or for other times and locations: 1-800-961-1000, ext. 111.

Public safety lay-offs loom if override fails

• Selectmen want public to know what's at stake

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Grappling with what they see as Draconian cuts to the town's public safety services — selectmen will reluctantly recommend cutting one police officer and one firefighter if the May 13 override fails.

The cuts would save about $60,000 or 1/3 of amount the advisory board recommends be slashed from the municipal side of the town budget if the $358,000 general override does not pass muster with the voters in a special election next month. The school department could also shoulder $180,000 in potential cuts.

The override is needed to balance the $14.6 million town budget approved at town meeting and will add about $108 a year to the taxes of a typical Cohasset home valued at $242,000.

Advisors suggested $60,000 be slashed from the fiscal year 1996 fire department budget which includes nearly $957,000 in salaries. But selectmen would not consider cutting two firefighters — a move which would end the town's ambulance service and the

• Unemployment benefits will complicate matters

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

If the May 13 Proposition 2 1/2 override should be defeated, the advisory committee recommends a total of $205,100 in cuts from the town side of the budget.

Because the cuts include the elimination of one firefighter and one police officer, the town would have to pay unemployment insurance, which the committee estimated would include a total of $22,800. When that figure is subtracted from the $205,100 in cuts, that leaves a total of $182,300 in actual savings.

The school committee has already stated how the $180,000 in cuts from the school side of the budget would be made. The override amount is $360,000 and officials have already agreed that the town and school portions of the budget would each be reduced by half that amount.

During an informal meeting held Tuesday night, the advisory committee agreed to make the following reductions:

• $50,000, selectmen from various

Proponent keeps possible Red Fox Lane cemetery alive

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Glenn Pratt is determined to keep alive the possibility of building a cemetery on Red Fox Lane.

"This is the single best bet," for a new cemetery, Pratt said. "It's got to be done."

The ten-acre site off Route 3A would provide space for 5,000 graves and satisfy Cohasset demand for the next century, he claimed.

Although his article calling for engineering studies of the site was defeated at both the recent town meeting and last fall's special town meeting, he vowed to reintroduce the measure until it passes.

"I'm going to go to every town meeting with the article to see if something gets done," he said.

After resigning in protest a year ago, over what he called inaction by the town over that site, Pratt now seeks to be reappointed to the cemetery study committee.

He said selectmen have not responded to his April 13 letter asking to be reappointed.

Pratt charged that he is not wanted on the committee because some officials think he is a pest.

(See page 7)

Selectmen say Cohasset's lack of cemetery space will be handled through the expansion of Beechwood Cemetery, shown here. But Glenn Pratt, who sat on the Cemetery Committee for 11 years, is determined that the town proceed with plans to develop a new town cemetery off Red Fox Lane.

Title V alternatives offer relief to homeowners

By Rob Rogers
Mariner staff

The Department of Environmental Protection has recently approved a number of "alternative" septic system designs that may allow homeowners to comply with the state's tough new Title V regulations without facing financial ruin.

Environmental engineer and DEP representative Christos Dimisioris outlined the new systems last week at a meeting of the Cohasset-based Gulf Association.

Title V is the generic name for the state's septic system codes, first established in 1978 and significantly revised on March 31, 1995. The purpose of Title V is to protect the state's supply of drinking and ground water, as well as lakes, ponds, and tidal estuaries, from contamination by failed septic systems.

According to Title V, a complete septic system includes a septic tank, distribution box, and soil absorption system (leaching field). Yet many South Shore homes built before 1978 — particularly those which were once summer cottages — do not have the necessary yard space to incorporate a three-part septic system. Many of these homes have systems with different components and configurations which do not conform to Title V standards.

All homeowners who wish to sell their homes, or perform renovations which will change the outer shape of their homes — such as adding an extra bedroom or a deck — must undergo an inspection by an engineer, sanitarian, or health officer.

The inspector will examine the system and evaluate it according to a strict list of criteria provided by the DEP. The inspector must determine whether the on-site sewage system can meet its current load, whether it is too close to ground or surface water supplies, and whether the system is damaged or operating improperly. If the system fails even one of the DEP's criteria, the homeowner will have one year to make any necessary repairs and upgrades.

While not all cesspools will fail a Title V inspection, the essential inefficiency of cesspools means that a significant number of homeowners who have them can expect to face required upgrades to their system.

Under the 1978 Title V code, a homeowner with a failed septic system was required to meet the very letter of the law in upgrading that system, or else apply for a variance from both the local board of health and the

Absentee ballots ready

Absentee ballots are now available for the May 13 special election. Voters may apply for an absentee ballot if they are going to be out of town, have a physical disability, or cannot vote on Saturday May 13 due to their religious beliefs. Ballots may be picked up during regular office hours at the town clerk's office until noon May 12. Voters may also apply for an absentee ballot by mail; please include name as registered, address, precinct, mailing address and signature. For information, please call the town clerk at 383-9900. Please note the town clerk's office will close at noon, Friday May 12 in preparation for the election.

Old ball field renamed

This week selectmen decided to recommend renaming the ball park in the Beechwood section of town, Pratt Memorial Park. According to old town maps the area was originally called "Pratts Corners," after those who donated the land to the town, and had never officially been named the Beechwood Ball Park.

Although selectmen have the authority to rename the park, they will ask town meeting to ratify it to avoid being chastised for acting without voter input.

In the past, the board was criticized for naming the park near the post office Constitution Park, without town meeting's approval, selectmen recalled this week.

Nancy Snowdale of Mill Lane suggested the name change two weeks ago but at that time selectmen said more research would have to be done on renaming the park before they would agree to it.

Snowdale is soliciting about $1,300 in donations from Beechwood residents asking for money to buy plantings to beautify Beechwood ball park and the name change came up as part of that discussion.

Licenses are approved

Selectmen approved renewal of Sunday and weekday entertainment and Sunday food and common victualler's licenses for the Music Circus.

Manager Vincent Longo said there are no changes from the licenses issued last year.

Robert V. Davenport of Sohier Street asked selectmen to remind Longo that the Music Circus is in a residential area. Davenport asked that the establishment not play music during its ticket sales.

Longo said he put the music on at the request of patrons who were standing in line and had no idea it interfered with anyone.

"I apologize," he said.

Janet MacLure of Sohier Street also asked why the Music Circus sends out brochures about its upcoming season before obtaining its license renewals.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said that was a business decision by the Music Circus and was irrelevant to the board's vote on renewing the licenses.

Drama Club to meet

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold its annual meeting at 7:30 p.m., June 2 at Cohasset Town Hall. Selectmen approved the club's request to use town hall that evening but want to see the club officials before acting on the request to use town hall for a haunted house/Halloween performance in October.

Transient vendors okayed

Hugh J. Morgan and Diga Inc., owned by Todd DiGregorio have been issued transient vendor licenses to serve food and soft drinks at Sandy Beach this summer.

Also in keeping with their policy, selectmen promised not to allow any potential ice cream vendors to sell soft drinks. There was a problem last year when two college-age entrepreneurs wanted to sell soft drinks along with ice cream and appeared before selectmen to ask for an expansion of their license.

At that time Morgan noted that he has to send his patrons to the ice cream truck for ice cream and therefore, it shouldn't be a problem for an ice cream vendor to tell patrons where to go for soft drinks.

The town restricts the number of transient vendors at the beach and Government Island and it explicitly states what each vendor can sell on the license.

Cohasset Heights Landfill meeting fails to bury objections

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Selectman chairman Merle Brown said last week that the town will consider Cohasset Heights landfill owner's suggestions that he might offer "possible concessions" on the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights landfill.

But activists who have long opposed expansion of the Rte. 3A dump, charge that owner Paul Barry offered nothing specific or new and vowed to continue their fight.

"I don't think there was anything to discuss," said Linda Keller of SAFE, Stop Any Further Expansion, after the meeting. "I don't want to see this landfill getting any bigger until the problems with the current ones are taken care of."

Using a conciliatory tone, Barry said vaguely that he might consider paying the town more money when he accepts construction and demolition debris which originates out of town. He now pays $2.09 per ton, in what is called a tipping fee.

Barry also said he could think about limiting the type of operations at the landfill, if he is allowed to expand.

During the hour-long meeting attended by some 50 people, Barry told three town officials — Brown, Thomas Cook, health board chairman, and Roseanne McMorris, conservation commission chairman — that he wants to compromise to end years of litigation over its operations.

When McMorris asked him what exactly he suggested, Barry replied, "I don't want to put anything on the table tonight, but that (tipping fee increase and expansion limits) might be a direction to go."

Later, his daughter, Lynne Schwandt, a non-practicing attorney, stressed that Barry was not making any offers, rather discussing "possible negotiating tools. These aren't offers, they are just alternatives."

Barry opened his comments by stating that legal costs have gotten out of hand and suggested that compromise is possible.

"I'm not here to tell you that Cohasset Heights was the best thing that ever happened to Cohasset," he said. "I'd be lying. but it happened."

Barry bought the landfill in 1982 from James Tyer-yar, since then the site has been more or less consistently embroiled in controversy.

LEGAL SKIRMISHES

"It's been a constant legal, engineering battle. I initiated most (legal action) but I was trying to save my business," Barry stated.

He outlined the two costly lawsuits he has brought against the town, which have cost taxpayers some $450,000.

First he socked the conservation commission with a civil rights lawsuit, charging that the board was interfering when it cited the landfill over a possible siltation problem.

That lawsuit is "toward the settlement stage," he stated.

Barry brought a second lawsuit, which said was the "strongest" of the two, against the board of health over the inclusion of part of the landfill in the watershed protection district. That inclusion gives the town much greater authority over its operations.

He maintained that tests have shown that landfill runoff is not threatening ground water and that the operation is environmentally sound.

"How much has CHL affected your life?," he asked the crowd. "I bet it hasn't, except for the tax dollar."

Currently Barry is limited to using only about 20 acres of the 48-acre landfill site. He wants the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) to allow him to use all the site and to expand the scope of operations.

Now the landfill can only accept up to 299 tons construction and demolition debris per day.

Barry wants to triple that figure, to include 500 tons of general refuse per day and 300 tons of recycled material, and 100 tons of material to be reprocessed.

The expansion, "is my right and can be environmentally sound," he stated, outlining specific procedures he has taken to ensure the safety of the operation.

He also stated that it could cost $2.9 million to cap the landfill and monitor the site for 30 years.

CONCESSIONS FOUND WANTING

However, SAFE members were unimpressed.

Keller said that Barry has not dealt with complaints about odor and leaching into the ground water from a portion of the landfill which is unlined.

John McNabb, Jr., another SAFE member, said that DEP is ready to require Barry to give the town some sort of insurance policy, to cover the cost of closing and monitoring the landfill if necessary.

"He has to do this," McNabb said. "It's not something that he is doing out of the goodness of his heart."

According to McNabb, it could cost from $7.5 to $8.5 million to close and monitor the site. He said the insurance policy is necessary because if the owner does not cap a facility, the town or state would have to.

McNabb was also sceptical about the increase in the tipping fee. "He's floated this before and it's gone nowhere."

As for the suggestion that the landfill be expanded, but limited to construction debris, McNabb pointed out that DEP already imposes this limitation and suggested that it is not much of a concession.

He also wondered if a new owner could later seek to accept other materials in the future.

In addition, McNabb said that a "good portion" of the landfill lies in the watershed protection district. He said that town engineers state that the area proposed for expansion does drain into the Sohier St. well area. The town is not currently using these wells for drinking water, but maintains them for additional sources if needed.

A part of the present landfill also lies in the watershed area, McNabb said, pointing out that although a consultant drew the original line in 1986, it has since been codified into by-law by town meeting.

Using a map, McNabb explained that the area in question drains into Brass Kettle Brook and then into Lily Pond, which feeds Bound Brook, a wildlife-rich resource.

Neither Brown, nor Cook had any questions after the presentation and audience members were not allowed to speak during the meeting.

Part-time dispatcher pay

The town will pay $9.16 per hour for two part-time 9-1-1- dispatchers and $9.70 for a third. The hourly rates are based on qualifications and experience.

License dogs by May 1

The deadline for licensing dogs in Cohasset is May 1. A $25 fine will be due after that date. Town Clerk office hours are Monday through Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

If unable to go to the Town Clerk's office, a check for $8 (neutered and spayed animals) or $15 (male and female animals) may be mailed to: Town Clerk, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025 along with a note listing type of animal, owner's name, address and telephone number, breed, color, dog's name and a copy of the dog's rabies certificate.

Burning season ends

The 1995 Open Burning Season in Cohasset, ends April 30. Permits are issued on a daily basis, between 9:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. Residents should call the Fire Department business line (383-0616) on the day they wish to conduct burning.

Residents requesting permits will be required to supply the name of the person supervising the fire, the address where the burning will take place and the type of materials to be burned.

Burning must take place between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. on land close to the place where the material to be burned was generated, and must be done at a location more than 75 feet from any building. Burning of leaves, grass, hay and stumps is prohibited. A complete set of rules is available at Fire Headquarters, 44 Elm Street.

Permits may be suspended at any time by the Fire Department due to environmental conditions or noncompliance with the open burning rules. A water hose, tools and constant supervision of an active fire are strongly recommended.

Deadline extended

The Cohasset Board of Health recently voted to extend the purchase deadline for 1995 Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility permits to Wednesday, May 31. They may be purchased through the mail for the first time. The fee is $65.

Cohasset residents qualify for two permits per household for $65 by providing both motor vehicle registrations with the same address at the same time. If information on a second vehicle is provided at a later date, an additional $25 fee will be charged.

The RTF permit fee for a single person household is $33. To qualify the applicant must sign an affadavit available only in the office of the health department. There is no senior citizen discount.

To obtain a 1995 RTF permit by mail send a copy of vehicle registration(s) with current address and a check for $65 payable to the Town of Cohasset. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Mail to: Permits, Board of Health Office, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

departments as suggested by selectmen

- $30,000, police department salaries
- $30,000, fire department salaries
- $25,500, fire department car
- $15,000, harbor salaries
- $8,000, library salaries
- $5,000, recreation department salaries
- $10,000, landfill salaries
- $15,000, reduction in landfill tipping fees
- $5,000, council on aging salaries
- $5,000, highway salaries
- $6,600, in tree & parks dept. rototiller and salaries.

The committee members said during the discussion that if departments have a problem functioning, the amounts can be adjusted or they could seek a reserve fund transfer in the fall.

In making the reductions, committee chairman Nancy Adams Roth reviewed responses to possible budget cuts from the various departments, in particular selectmen (see related story.)

Selectmen propose reducing the amounts spent for secretarial help, and on the following departments: wire, building inspector, dog control, street lights, town hall, legal and unclassified expenses.

The library department said that in order to receive state aid, the purchase of books must constitute at least 19 percent of the budget. Therefore, the reduction would cause the library to close on some Sundays, because of reduced salaries.

The reduction in the amount the town pays for SEMASS to accept Cohasset trash, called the tipping fee, was made by selectmen. They wrote to Roth stating that Cohasset would no longer pick up stuffed furniture, rugs or mattresses. Resident would have to dispose of those items through private trash haulers.

The council on aging was the only department not to respond.

Instead, the committee wrote to Roth that, "We (COA) could not carry on with even a $150 cut, let alone a $5,000 cut."

The advisory committee members were unimpressed and agreed to cut their budget $5,000.

"If we don't have the money to pay for it," Roth said. "We can't do it." She also pointed out that when the COA was created a number of years ago, its supporters said the department would not cost the town money.

The recreation department budget also generated discussion.

Advisory committee member Deborah Cook suggested that the department be cut more than $5,000, stating the department could make up the reduction by increasing the fees it charges for the programs.

"If we didn't have the town summer program," she said, "it would be sad, but the town wouldn't fold."

However, Cook agreed with other members that recreation director John Worley works many more hours than he is paid for. After reviewing the department's budget they agreed not to cut it further.

In addition, Roth explained that any increase in fees would have to go into the general fund and then be appropriated by town meeting, so the department could not immediately recoup what is being cut.

Another member said that it the department was worth the money if it saves one youth. He mentioned this week's beating of a man dressed as Big Bird on his way to entertain at a children's party by a gang of area teenagers and young adults and the current trial of several Rockland teenagers for beating to death a young man at a convenience store.

The discussion also veered off the current budget on to ways additional savings could be generated in the future.

Looking at the stationary the town departments used to submit their replies, Roth noted that each different department has its own fancy letterhead, consisting of a raised crest and the names of those on that committee.

"Why should everyone have their own private paper, with a crest?" she asked.

There was general agreement with her suggestion that the town could order paper saying "Town of Cohasset," which all departments could use. She said departments could put their own crests on computer and print them out onto the paper as necessary.

When someone reminded them, that the advisory committee has its own paper, someone else laughed and said that the paper was found by accident in the town hall basement.

The group also agreed to honor Roth, who is stepping down after six years on the committee, including four as chairman. They suggested taking her to dinner at the Red Lion Inn.

The members also said they enjoyed receiving the postcards — depicting scenes of provincial France or works of art — which Roth sent to remind members of meetings.

Selectmen want public to know. . .

Three firefighter positions are already being eliminated in fiscal year 1996 through attrition. The savings realized there are going toward paying the salaries of the town's new dispatchers who will man the 9-1-1 emergency response service coming on line next month.

Lincoln explained that due to seniority, any lay-offs would be Firefighter/EMTs, leaving the ambulance only able to function with "a lot of overtime." EMTs who are trained to handle medical emergencies must man the ambulance.

"I'm saying I couldn't efficiently run an ambulance with five men gone," Lincoln said.

Advisors have said that maintenance and capital items should not form the basis of the potential cuts. Selectmen will recommend however, that the town purchase a cheaper car than the one town meeting approved for the fire chief and save another $8,500.

But Lincoln stressed that equipment is useless without manpower.

"Nothing is more valuable than a pair of hands," he said. "I'd walk and forgo a car. You can have all the equipment in the world but you still need a couple of guys holding hose to put a fire out."

Selectman Jane Goedecke stressed that voters must get the straight scoop on potential cuts.

"The public has to know what will happen. We have hard choices here," she said.

Making up the rest of $180,000 in recommended town-side cuts if voters opt not to pass the override are: cutting the harbormaster to half-time; phasing out the wire department by March of next year; cutting $25,000 from the landfill budget; and a myriad of cuts to small departments and offices like the building inspector; the council on aging, secretarial; town hall clerical; highway; and tree, park & cemetery.

One-day liquor license

Selectmen approved issuing a one-day liquor license to the South Shore Community Center for a Little League dance, May 27.

Sidewalk board members

Peter H. Pearce of Forest Notch and Deborah L. Jorgensen of Jerusalem Road have been appointed by selectmen to the town's new sidewalk study committee.

Red Fox Lane cemetery. . .

"The selectmen think that I'm a trouble maker," he claimed. "To me it seems like the selectmen don't want to do anything. I'm sure they don't want to deal with it. They're sick of hearing about it."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said nothing is further from the truth.

She said she told Pratt one month ago that the committee is now full with five members and that he will be considered, along with any other volunteers, when a vacancy does occur.

She denied that Pratt is being kept off because he is too ardent a supporter of Red Fox Lane. "That's not even an issue."

Current cemetery committee chairman, Joseph Jerz, also said the committee is full and declined to speculate further.

"I don't want to get involved in a fight in the press," he said.

Gjesteby and Jerz both said the group will look at Red Fox Lane once the current plan to expand the Beechwood Cemetery is completed.

Last fall's special town meeting approved some $50,000 for the Beechwood expansion.

Gjesteby said selectmen have never ruled out Red Fox Lane, but wish to proceed with one project first.

She and Jerz also stated that the Beechwood Cemetery expansion would give the town time to study other options.

Jerz estimated that Beechwood is good for another seven to ten years.

"We have some time to look," he explained.

Pratt charged that the Beechwood St. cemetery expansion is a waste of time and money because it is an unpopular cemetery.

"The Beechwood cemetery is not a place that is popular," he maintained. "People don't like to buy graves there."

Gjesteby disagreed, saying, "He's the only one who says that. I haven't had any other complaints (about Beechwood.)"

Jerz pointed out that access to the Red Fox Lane spot needs further study. He said the site can be reached only by a privately-owned driveway or through 200 feet of wetlands, which he called "a pretty big detail. Otherwise, it looks like a great site."

He did say that once the Beechwood expansion is finished, the Red Fox Lane location will be reviewed. "If that looks like the thing to do," it will be done," he stated.

A former planning board chairman, Pratt served on 11 years on the cemetery committee and studied the Red Fox Lane location.

He dismissed objections that the spot is a poor choice for a cemetery because it is hard to get to.

The town would either have to buy land from an abutter or fill in wetlands, something the conservation commission is against.

"The argument of no access is nonsense," he said. "It's ridiculous."

He also said that the town could proceed with building a cemetery on town-owned land on Pleasant St. because the studies were done in the 1980's.

"That land is all set to go. You could start tomorrow cutting down trees," he stated.

The town dropped plans to proceed with that location because neighbors feared traffic. "The traffic to a cemetery is pretty modest," he said.

Mary Hartwell, who also resigned last year, said she has no plans to be rejoin the committee.

She did stress that Cohasset needs a new cemetery. "I sincerely believed 11 years ago that this town needed another cemetery," Hartwell stated. "That was our charge from the selectmen."

Pratt admitted that he has had second thoughts about resigning. "In hindsight the long-standing committee should not have quit in frustration."

Selectmen chairman Merle Brown, who is board's liaison to the cemetery committee, could not be reached for comment.

Dear Dennis:

I am writing to thank you for the positive impact you and your staff had on the life of a little six year old boy, this summer. My son arrived at your camp after a stressful year in Kindergarten that culminated in low self esteem and anger and frustration. I enrolled him at Camp Daniel Webster after hearing many glowing testimonials from parents of campers.

I am pleased to report that my son had the best summer of his life! He is thrilled with his progress in swimming and each day he got up early, eager to leave for camp. Each afternoon he returned happy and excited to tell of his daily activity.

I am sure you are aware of my son, due to his impulsive nature and I'm sure that you had to speak to him about his actions on occasion, but you were able to do it in a manner that was immensely helpful to him. The difference between Camp Daniel Webster and his Kindergarten experience is that he came away from Camp with his self esteem intact and a genuine affection for the Camp and its staff. He was very comfortable at Camp. He was truly sad that Camp was ending on 8/19/94.

Please congratulate yourself and your staff on a job well done.

Sincerely,

(name omitted)

Have you heard the latest about Dr. Joe D. Hagan, another CHS grad (class of 1970) that we can be oh-so-proud of?

Well, he was one of six faculty members to receive the 1995 WVU Foundation Award for outstanding Teaching April 7. This all took place at a convocation that was part of WVU's weekend of honors celebration April 7-9. The convocation recognized achievements of faculty, staff, students and alumni.

Joe has degrees in political science from Drew University and the University of Kentucky. His teaching career began at Goucher College and continued at the University of Wyoming. Joe went to WVU in 1991 as an associate professor of political science and then associate director of Eberly College of Arts and Sciences' international studies program. His courses range from introductory international politics and upper level U.S. foreign relations to graduate seminars on theories of international relations and foreign policy.

During 1993-94, Joe was a Pew Faculty Fellow in International Affairs at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government. The immediate result of this fellowship has been restructuring of the U.S. foreign policy class around the "Case method" of teaching — employing more active strategies of student learning.

Dr. Hagan is a dynamo, he is a virtual perpetual motion machine when it comes to teaching and research," a student said. Joe is the son of Libby Hagan of Cohasset.

Here's another newsworthy note from the business world! Cohasset resident John Cuneo was recently elected president of the New England Broadcasting Association. He will be in charge of the 48-year-old non-profit organization, which is made up of more than 1,000 professionals in the electronic media industry from throughout the region.

Mr. Cuneo will manage and direct the board of directors and the executive committee to make and execute meaningful events to further the educational mission of the New England Broadcasting Association.

Mrs. William E. Haynes of the Cohasset Garden Club attended an orientation meeting last month at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston to plan for the annual Art in Bloom festival of flowers and art at the Museum, April 24-27. In celebration of flower design as an art form, arrangements by 70 New England garden clubs interpret masterpieces throughout the Museum's world famous collections at the festival.

News from another field comes our way — this time it's Helen Pratt who is the topic! Everyone knows Helen (she is a top salesperson for Hunneman, she is the former phys. ed. teacher for Cohasset schools, she is selectman Peter Pratt's mom, and wife of the late Burt Pratt), did you also know that she is to be bestowed with a great honor May 7? That's the date she will become a member of Boston University's Hall of Fame, a great honor indeed! We are not surprised, but we sure are proud of you, Helen. Hope you fill us in on the details afterwards.

The Social Service League's own Mary Hartwell will be chairing a seminar entitled "Are you Prepared to Survive Alone Financially?" at the lightkeeper's residence Tuesday, May 9, at 1 p.m. On the panel will be: Judge Anna Doherty, Attorney Michele Dorsey, and investment advisor Harvey Gates. Space is limited, so be sure to call the league at 383-0771 to reserve your seat. What a timely and critical discussion this will be.

Congratulations go to Ryan Freeman, who was selected Student of the Month at CHS. An honor well deserved!

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset's field trip to Tower Hill Botanical Garden in Boylston will take place Wednesday, May 3. There will be a bus departing from the town hall at 8:30 a.m., and the garden tour promises to be a spectacular one. We know that Doris Flint and her able crew worked hard to make this adventure a grand one, enjoy yourselves ladies!

What a sad week this has been, everyone in the nation has been touched by the tragedy in Oklahoma City. It is so hard to comprehend, or reason why. We in Cohasset had our own losses this week, and although they were "natural", they were large! As hard as it is, can't you just see Tim Myers up in heaven, helping all of those little ones that were lost in day care — racing with them, telling them it will be okay. Tim was such a sweet, kind boy who really knew the meaning of love and gave it freely. They'll also have two great moms to watch over them, Barbara Weisenfluh and Eileen Kurtz, who raised their children to be fine people. God Bless them all!

On a much happier note, the South Shore Music Circus opened its box office last weekend, and it was wonderful to catch the enthusiasm that the patrons had for the upcoming season! Be sure to get your tickets, and then be prepared to have lots of fun. Yes indeed folks, spring is here!

Please be sure to call me with your news, there has to be tons after vacation — share it with us!

Annual mission to El Salvador

Local residents share vision of helping heal eyes

By Thomas De Santes
Mariner correspondent

They came in all shapes and sizes. Thick, thin, black, pearl, tinted, or clear. For many people, eye glasses are more than a medical aid, more than an accessory, they have become part of their persona. Many people take for granted the importance of eye glasses in everyday life. Some even frown upon the idea of wearing them.

Unfortunately, in other parts of the world, people do not have access to eye care as we do in the United States. People with sight impairments are forced to adjust their lifestyle to their handicap.

With the help of local South Shore volunteers, strides are being made to bring eye care to countries in need. Bob and Rena Zeller of Hingham and Helen and Alan Gruber and their daughter Kerry of Cohasset have been traveling to El Salvador for years to bring the needed medical attention to the people of this country.

With the help of the UCC/Norwell, funds have been collected to help buy equipment for the clinics that have been set up in El Salvador and manned by people like the Grubers and Zellers. The Church in Norwell has been supporting the project since its inception seven years ago. The couples from the South Shore have recently returned from their latest trip to El Salvador.

ASAPROSAR, the Salvadoran Association for Rural Health, is an organization helping people in the country deal with the growing problems that resulted from poverty and a civil war.

Dr. Vicky Guzman heads the project in her homeland, bringing aid and education to people in the mountainside as well as the cities. Besides medical aid, she has been organizing programs to teach ex-combatants marketable skills, such as sewing and tailoring to help them get jobs now that the civil war has ended.

She teaches preventative health care to help curb the problems as well. Her efforts to help the impoverished have garnered her political scrutiny and even landed her in prison. In the wake of this civil calm, she has been instrumental in revitalizing the nation helping end the problems that have crippled the people under wartime conditions.

One of the major problems in the country has been lack of eye care. Like people of the United States and nations across the globe, the people of El Salvador have problems seeing. Near-sightedness, farsightedness, and cataracts are just as common there as here, but more uncommon is access to glasses to correct the problem.

The mission of the latest trip was to provide glasses and corrective surgery to those in need. According to Rena Zeller, over the course of the year optometrists and opthamologists from the United States collect used pairs of glasses from businesses and individuals.

Kerri Gruber of Cohasset fits eyeglasses to an El Salvadorian man at an eye clinic. Through UCC/Norwell, Kerri recently travelled with her parents Helen and Alan Gruber to bring badly needed medical care to El Salvador.

The glasses are then marked by their prescription and bagged for dispersal in El Salvador.

In the meantime, hundreds of Salvadorans are prescreened and their prescriptions are determined. Then people like the Zellers and Grubers, who have been trained to read prescriptions, give the appropriate glasses to the appropriate people. When they arrive in El Salvador, it is their job to match patients with the fitting glasses.

In the past, volunteers have established outreaches to the remote mountain sections of the country, traveling by horseback if necessary. Today, clinics are set up at the ASAPROSAR facility making it easier to see more patients in a smaller amount of time. People bus in from remote sections and others walk the miles to reach the clinics. No one complains. Time and time again, the volunteers put smiles on their satisfied customers' faces.

On the latest trip there were two optometrists, four ophthalmologists and seven volunteers who helped more than 900 people in five days of clinics and performing 42 surgeries. In addition to the traditional aid, this year a new surgical microscope was put to excellent use thanks to donations from the UCC/Norwell. Doctors performed surgery on cataracts. They treated children with cross-eyes and operated on patients with trigium, a growth over the cornea. The efforts of the volunteers and the subsequent success stories this year were amazing.

According to Rena Zeller, seeing people regain their impaired vision made it all worth while.

"One woman who opened her eyes with a new pair of glasses exclaimed, "Oh no! Now I can see my wrinkles!" she recalls.

Another woman was so happy because now she was going to be able to go home and watch her children play outside for the first time.

"We heard about the need and we wanted to do our part to help," Rena Zeller says. "Each year we continue to volunteer our services because we know we can make a difference. We see the results first-hand and it's a great feeling for all of us to know that we were really accomplishing something terrific."

How about a raise?

Proposition 2-1/2 which passed in 1980 put Cohasset and all other towns in the Commonwealth on a fixed income.

No matter how much prices rise — for anything from textbooks to electricity to health or liability insurance — the town can only raise the property tax levy by 2-1/2 percent a year.

This year town meeting voters approved a budget that is $358,000 in the red. A successful override is needed on May 13 to balance the books — otherwise cuts will have to be made in both the town and school sides of the fiscal year 1996 budget.

The override is a permanent tax increase and would allow the town to raise its tax base by $358,000 — which amounts to about $108 a year on the property tax bill of the typical Cohasset home valued at $242,000.

This override should not be confused with a debt exclusion, which raises taxes outside the 2-1/2 percent cap for debt service costs. May 13 voters will also be asked to approve a debt exclusion to borrow for a public works garage. The $752,000 needed will not appear on the ballot because the dollar figure cannot report the full cost of the principal plus interest charges. However, if voters approve borrowing for the garage, the owners of the typical home will see about a $27 annual increase in property taxes and that figure would gradually decline thereafter until the debt is paid off.

Cohasseters need to ask themselves some tough questions in these two weeks before the override election. No one likes to pay more taxes — but we all want efficient town services.

If there's a fire or medical emergency at our house, we want the fire department there pronto! We want small class sizes for our kids and want someone to answer the town hall phone when we call.

We believe the intent of Prop. 2-1/2 is to put control in your hands. But along with control goes the responsibility to make sure that your vote is an informed one.

In this week's paper, we detail the proposed cuts recommended by the advisory committee and selectmen. Please give them some thought because cutting back could have an impact on your quality of life.

Remember nowhere are tax dollars better spent than right here in your own backyard. So take some time to think about giving Cohasset a raise this year.

Town should compromise with landfill

(Ed's note: The following letter was sent to Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown.)

Dear Merle,

Ref: Open Meeting with Paul Barry

I would prefer that there be no landfill expansion and that the Curtis Estate remain undeveloped. Unfortunately, we don't always get what we want.

If there is a 50 percent or greater probability that Paul's legal initiatives will succeed; I suggest compromise — now.

I understand that he has offered to pay to pipe leachate down Forest Avenue to Hull. I believe the town plans to lay new water main down Forest Avenue. You know that the owners of the Curtis Estate are trying to develop the property and to use the Title V law to gain neighborhood support.

It seems to me that sewering areas near Straits Pond is only a matter of time. Why not ask Paul, The Lambert's Lane and Curtis Estate developers and others who stand to profit to help finance sewage services for that part of town.

Because Cohasset lacks a Master Plan, it invariably gets backed into corners where it finds itself paying legal fees to resolve issues that could have been solved by planning and compromise.

On a personal note, I think Paul Barry is a good man and I would rather see us deal with him than someone from out of town.

Landfill expansion is opposed

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL) landfill should not be allowed to construct its proposed 27.5 acre Area V expansion, whether it is for general refuse or "just" for construction and demolition (C&D) waste. While there is a popular misconception that C&D is relatively innocuous, the fact remains that it is not.

C&D waste can include, for example, treated wood, lead-based paint, asbestos, fiberglass and fuel tanks. Gypsum drywall (sheetrock), also found in C&D waste, can decompose anaerobically to produce hydrogen sulfide, a toxic and foul-smelling gas. C&D landfills can, and have, polluted groundwater and surface water with toxic chemicals. C&D landfills can, and have, threatened drinking water supplies.

Mr. Barry's April 19 presentation on behalf of CHL to town officials and residents provided no persuasive reason for anyone to support the Area V expansion. While CHL still would like to dump general refuse into Area V, if it is ever approved, the fact remains that the state says there is no need for additional general refuse landfilling and has already in effect limited Area V to C&D waste. Also, keep in mind that Mr. Barry stated that he was "not putting anything on the table" that night, so in reality there is no proposal from CHL for anyone to consider.

CHL should be treated like a business

To the Editor and Cohasset residents:

On April 19, I attended the meeting between the Chairpersons of the Selectmen, the Board of Health, and the Conservation Commission and Cohasset Heights, LTD (CHL). The meeting was requested by Paul Barry, owner of CHL, to discuss his business and the town's involvement in his business. The basic purpose of the meeting was to discuss ways in which the town and CHL could come to the table and, in a businesslike manner, agree how put an end to the lawsuits and litigation which have gone on for years between the parties.

Over the years, large amounts of the citizens of Cohasset's tax dollars have been spent on legal and engineering costs to combat the landfill. The landfill has not been treated like a business which is why a civil rights action was filed to ensure that due process was implicit in the Town's treatment of CHL. It is time that the citizens of Cohasset, not just a few, listen to the issues and look at how their tax dollars are being spent. Monies spent fighting CHL could be spent in the school system, on recreational programs, on senior citizen programs or other programs for the benefit of everyone. I am quite certain that if the money spent to fight CHL was coming out of the pockets of the members of SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion), and not from everyone's hard earned tax dollars, the SAFE members would listen to the environmental experts and based on their comments and actions on facts, not emotions.

At the meeting on April 19, there was one couple in particular that exemplify the ignorance of a handful of the Cohasset citizens. While Paul Barry was speaking, this couple was mocking and laughing at him. Unable to control my disappointment in such immature behavior, I decided to speak to the wife of the couple. I told her that I found it rude and unprofessional for her and her husband to sit and laugh while Paul Barry was speaking. I understand that they may disagree and

To the Editor:

The selectmen's vote for a Request for Proposal for environmental legal counsel, and its cynical reversal, have raised a real clamor around town. It speaks volumes about the confusion and division that Cohasset's battles with CHL have caused. It also tells a story about integrity.

March 20, the selectmen approved the Request for Proposal (RFP) as an amendment to an original motion to pay $83,000 in unbudgeted environmental legal and engineering fees. At Special Town Meeting March 25, the RFP was described by selectman Jane Goedecke as an important ingredient in the plan to control future expenses.

Just two weeks later, Selectman Goedecke called for a reconsideration on the issue, switched her vote and defeated the RFP.

This has become an issue for three reasons.

The selectmen are duty bound to spend the town's money wisely. The town wisely requests bids for all sorts of goods and services, reflecting our own purchasing behavior. Who among us wouldn't 'shop the market' before we committed our own funds to buy a house, hire a carpenter, repair a car? Haven't we all found that competition drives costs down?

Yet our environmental counsel has been on the job for nine years, never once having faced a competitive bid. In effect, Michael Leon of Warner & Stackpole has had a nine-year (and now longer) no bid, open-ended (no budget limit) contract. Without having faced competition, I doubt the selectmen can say with assurance that we've been receiving competitive rates from Warner & Stackpole. The situation at present hardly represents wise management.

An RFP represents good management, rather than an indictment of the current vendor. Both Tom Cook, chairman, board of health, and Rosanne McMorris, chairman, conservation commission, wrote strong endorsements of Michael Leon and Warner & Stackpole's performance in letters to the selectmen.

An RFP seeks to determine the value of a vendor's service, as well as the vendor's quality of service. Mr. Cook's and Ms. McMorris' letters each argue against changing our counsel. Would either commit their own money without seeking bids on, say, a home improvement project? Common sense says no.

An RFP can be written to favor a current vendor, and his performance. It is entirely likely that Cohasset will find that we are well and fairly represented by Warner & Stackpole. Accordingly, there seems to be little to fear by pursuing competitive bids.

The board of selectmen's reconsideration of the RFP constitutes a betrayal of trust with the voters. In effect, the selectman have given the voters cause to question the validity of their word. Is it now acceptable to promise better management at town meeting, and quietly rescind that promise two weeks later? One should be reminded that RFP was withdrawn without substituting an alternative.

The argument might be made that the RFP is an isolated issue, not to be confused with other town business. I believe that it is a symptom which fully represents all town business. If we allow representatives to back away from difficult stances, then for what have they been elected?

Several selectmen have said that their objective with regard to Cohasset Heights Ltd.'s landfill is to prevent further expansion. Hopefully that is reassuring to the voters. In light of the events surrounding the RFP, one wonders whether a 200-foot landfill, perched above our water supply will soon be the gateway to Cohasset.

Which side you take on the issue is not nearly as important as whether or not you express your view. Please call the selectmen today, and make your view known.

Myers family is grateful for support

To the Editor:

The family of Tim Myers would like to thank the hundreds of people who paid tribute to Tim after his death on Easter. To us, it was a tribute to a young man who spread sunshine wherever he went. Tim touched the lives of countless people in our community and he was always treated with open affection and respect. No one ever treated Tim as different and therefore he never felt that he was.

While it would be impossible to thank everyone individually, we would like publically to thank a few people who made Tim's life a little easier.

Our thanks to the Cohasset Fire Department's EMT's who, on several occasions, rushed Tim to the hospital, responding within minutes each and every time. Unfortunately, we never find out how professional they are until we need them.

Our thanks to Kenneth Ekberg who obtained and set up a closed circuit TV monitor over Tim's bed, saving us hundreds of trips over the stairs to check on him.

Our thanks to Joseph "Skinny" Laugelle who took Tim under his wing and made him feel wanted and useful at the recycling station. Joe's daily visits to our house, the hospital, and the nursing home were a source of great joy to Tim.

To June Simione, who kept the U.S. Postal service in the black, with her greeting cards that kept Tim eagerly awaiting the arrival of our mailman. We would like to thank the Reverend Gary Ritts of the Cohasset Second Congregational Church. He is, in the truest sense of the word — a minister.

Finally, we would like to thank our network of callers who would call everyone else for us during Tim's final months.

To all of you that helped us through this long ordeal, you will always have our undying gratitude. Henceforth, when people ask us where we are from, instead of replying simply "Cohasset," we will now add, "where else."

Gratefully,
Dorothy, Tom and Stephen Myers and Tim

All aboard for Greenbush!

To the Editor:

As a Cohasset senior citizen who makes frequent commutes into Boston for part-time teaching, medical treatment and pleasure purposes, I would wholeheartedly welcome the return of direct rail service on the Greenbush line.

Clean and dependable public transportation can be a distinct asset for our South Shore communities.

scoff at something he said, but the behavior I witnessed was blatant mockery. I asked her how her children or grandchildren would feel if she was speaking before a group of people who were humilitating her and she said that Paul Barry humiliated himself by "telling lies." At this moment, I was pushed to my boiling point. You may say things about my Dad that I will agree. He is persistent, headstrong, but I believe those who know him or who have taken the time to know him as a person and not as the owner of CHL, know that he is not a liar. Until you have all your facts and figures in order, I caution anyone before they make such accusations. My father loves this town and he has donated his time and his services to improve this town, many of which go unnoticed. He would stop anything he believed would have a detrimental effect on the environment.

Paul Barry does not intend to disrupt the town, he merely wants an opportunity to run his business in a manner which is acceptable to both himself and the town. Another mentality that makes me angry is those individuals that think he should not make a living from the landfill. I do not think there is any citizen in Cohasset that is in business who does not intend to make a living from that business and provide for their family. Just because Paul Barry owns CHL, should he not have the right to make a living? The purpose of the meeting was to explain that CHL is a business. Those of you who know Paul Barry would agree that he is a very hard worker, perhaps a workaholic, and he works for his wage. No one should be concerned about how he lives his life.

Paul and John Barry bought a fully permitted landfill from a Cohasset resident 13 years ago. The original permit was approved by members of the Cohasset Town Boards. CHL was purchased for the use of the entire plot and the owners have a right to fairly and reasonably, if economically sound, pursue their intention to operate the landfill and expand.

I encourage all citizens to write letters to the Board of Selectmen on the issue of CHL and offer your comments, questions and issues.

Greenbush horns are rail pollution

To the Editor:

I strongly oppose the restoration of the Greenbush rail line to the South Shore coastal area.

One of my major concerns is that the MBTA is planning to use 110 DB horns to warn motorists and pedestrians at grade crossings. While I share concerns about the safety of grade crossings, keep in mind that the Environmental Protection Agency considers sounds above 55 DB's to constitute "noise pollution." Since there are 11 grade crossings in the town of Cohasset alone and the horn must sound 1/4 mile before each crossing when traveling at speeds in excess of 40 MPH (the MBTA estimated speed is 46 miles per hour at Beechwood Street), this horn will blow the entire length of Cohasset from King Street to past Beechwood. Although I am not an abutter, I live close enough to believe it will wake me up on the first pass in the wee hours of dawn. I believe it may even wake up half the town.

I have heard some nostalgic comments in newspapers and at public meetings about trains in Switzerland "ding dinging" through the countryside. It doesn't sound like we will be living the same fairy tale.

Yes vote on May 13 override urged

To the Editor:

People choose to live in Cohasset for lots of different reasons. Many have grown up here and have strong family ties. Still others find the sense of community and identification with a town appealing. Certainly the natural beauty of Cohasset, from its quaint village center to its spectacular views along the ocean and Little Harbor, are natural assets which contribute to the quality of life here.

The overriding impetus for families who choose to live in Cohasset, however, is the school system. Just read the headlines in The Boston Globe's Sunday real estate section to see how important the school system is in making a choice on where to live!

While we don't have the highest per student expenditure in the state, we can boast one of the highest statistical ratings in terms of SAT scores and percentage of students graduating to go on to college in the state. The school system goes beyond statistics, however. Our schools are a reflection of the character and values of the people who live here, and they speak very well for the town.

It is not just parents who benefit from the high standards Cohasset sets for its students; these children will go on to be leaders of other communities and spread the values and foundation they learn here. Those of you who have lived here for many years have enjoyed the benefits of a long-standing commitment to excellence in education. This is perhaps the most important legacy parents and a community can give to the next generation.

We are faced, however, with burgeoning costs just to maintain the infrastructure of the town. In addition, towns like Cohasset must come up with money for unfunded mandates from the state. These required outlays place a tremendous burden on the town and are part of the reason we are faced with an override situation.

The town has experienced growth in the number of students enrolled in the schools which translates into higher costs in many different areas. If we are to maintain the standards we have come to expect from the Cohasset school system, we must pass this current override and give our educators the tools they need to prepare our children to meet the challenges of the 21st century.

Does Cohasset want to send a message to its current and future citizens that education is paramount and continues to be a prime focus for all residents of the town? If we do, we must vote in favor of fully funding the school budget as submitted.

To say "no" to the override is to send a clear message that our commitment to excellence has begun to erode. A "no" vote is a signal that Cohasset is willing to let the schools in town suffer the slow downward spiral that has occurred in so many other towns and villages across the state and the country.

As parents, as citizens, we cannot allow this slow erosion of the most important legacy we have to give future generations. We must stand committed, united in our desire to maintain the quality of education that has been the bedrock of this town.

Vote "YES" on Question #2 on the ballot May 13. Remember, it takes an entire village to raise a child.

Title V alternatives offer relief to homeowners

DEP.

The revised code, however, requires homeowners to make the "maximum feasible upgrade" to their system, unless their system is presenting an immediate danger to public health.

In some cases, a "maximum feasible upgrade" to a failed cesspool could mean minor repairs to the cesspool itself, which could then continue to function as an approved non-conforming septic system. In many cases, the upgrade could include a conversion of the cesspool site into a three-part septic system. In areas where the size of a homeowner's property cannot accommodate the installation of a typical Title V system, a homeowner may wish to consider one of the "alternative" systems recently approved for general use.

Each of these alternatives can allow homeowners to reduce the required size — by as much as 40 percent — of the leaching field on their property, or to reduce the required depth of either the groundwater separation or naturally occurring pervious material in their system by two feet. Unlike conventional septic systems, many of the alternatives also remove nitrogen compounds from septage, making the system much less of a risk to sensitive watershed areas.

The simplest of these systems, the Saneco Intermittent Sand Filter, acts as an add-on component to a traditional Title V system. The device intercepts effluent after it leaves the septic tank, then sprays it over a long bed of sand. The effluent then percolates through the sand filter, leaving septage by-products behind on its way to the leaching field.

A recirculating sand filter goes one step further. The RSF collects some of the material left behind in the bed of sand for another go-round through the system. In doing so, the device is capable of removing 40 to 50 percent of the nitrogen content from the effluent. The system could cost between $2,000 and $3,000, in addition to the cost of a Title V system.

The AWT BioClere system is similar to a recirculating sand filter. Instead of sand, effluent is sprayed over a tank filled with tiny bits of PVC pipe floating in a soup of microorganisms. The microbes remove many of the septage by-products from the effluent, and those by-products are recirculated through the system to remove nitrogen. The BioClere system could cost an additional $4,500.

While many of these alternatives have been available for general use in other states for many years, the DEP approved them for use only on a case-by-case basis until last week. The state has refused to approve several additional alternatives until detailed data about their effectiveness is available.

"Right now, there are a lot of companies out there saying they've built a better mousetrap, and we're right in the middle of that," Dimisioris said. "A standard Title V system can take a lot of abuse, day in and day out, with very little maintenance. Some of these newer systems require more in terms of construction, operation, and maintenance, and they stand the chance of failing much more miserably. That's why each of them will have to go through piloting and provisional approval stages before they are certified for general use."

One of the systems the DEP is currently considering is the peat filter. The system essentially replaces the sand in an intermittent sand filter with compacted peat, which supposedly removes harmful septage products from the effluent passing through it. Peat filters have already been adopted in Maine at a cost of about $3,000 each.

Another alternative the DEP is examining is the composting toilet. While the toilet itself — essentially an in-house separation tank for septage — has been an approved alternative system since 1978, a leaching system for disposing of the "gray water," or wastewater flowing from showers, sinks, and washing machines, is still being tested. Homeowners must also secure a variance from the state plumbing code in order to install a composting toilet.

While alternative septic systems may be a godsend to small-lot homeowners, they provide no solace for property owners whose land will not pass state percolation tests.

"In my opinion," Dimisioris said, "a system built without two feet of naturally-occurring pervious material cannot work."

Dimisioris added that the DEP would consider such systems on a case-by-case basis, however.

The problem is a difficult one for many South Shore residents whose homes are built on poor-quality soil. These residents, many of whom live in flood-prone "velocity zones," fear they will be forced to install septage holding facilities, or "tight tanks," on their property. Because tight tanks must be pumped out at least once a month, some residents and realtors believe the installation of a tight tank could cause a property's value to decrease dramatically.

"If a tight tank has to be pumped out every three weeks, at a cost of $600 to $1,000, a buyer is most likely going to want to pay less for that property, or else turn to some property without the pumping expense," said David Drinkwater, a realtor for Scituate's Hallmark 100 Properties and chairman of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors' Education Commission.

"The town's tax base is going to be devastated by this," said Scituate resident Joan Foster. "Many of the homes that form the core of Scituate's tax base are those elevated houses out there in the velocity zones. The cost of having tight tanks in those homes — especially if the tanks have to be placed inside the homes — is going to be a depreciation of those properties. Since tax rates are based on the assessed sale value of a home, a lot of those homes are going to be asking for an abatement on their taxes. That's something that could chop Scituate's budget."

"I'm recommending to the people I've met who are going on tight tanks that they request a 50 percent tax abatement," said Scituate health agent Jennifer Sullivan.

Residents, however, may be able to avoid a tight tank prescription by adhering to the DEP's "maximum feasible upgrade" precept.

"Boards of health do not advocate tight tanks," Drinkwater said. "They don't view them as a solution. Whenever possible, the boards and the DEP will look very seriously at any alternative to installing a tight tank on the property. In addition, it is difficult to ascertain what level of tax abatements will be granted to properties with tight tanks, since there is little data available that could tell us exactly how much having a tight tank drives the value of a house down."

The new Title V regulations give local boards of health less leeway in evaluating septic systems than the 1978 code. Local boards can pass regulations stricter than Title V if they desire, but they cannot relax any of its restrictions. And while the boards can still grant variances to individual homeowners in many situations, local health officials will now be audited by the DEP to ensure their decisions mesh with the state's design.

"One problem we as a community have had to deal with in terms of Title V is the accuracy and reliability of information referring to the costs of inspections, repairs, and upgrades," Drinkwater said. "Early estimates of Title V inspections were in the $400 to $1,200 range. The $1,200 is what's stuck in people's heads, but in truth what we've normally been seeing are inspections in the $500 to $600 range. And while it's true that some repairs to systems have cost as much as $20,000 or $30,000, that's not a range we're viewing as normal or average.

"There are a number of reasons why a system could fail, and repairs could end up costing only $1,000," Drinkwater continued. "What we're telling our clients is to learn all the facts. Don't make a decision that

The Hearing Center
Have You Heard?
by Nancy Allonen-Allie, M.S., CCC-A
Licensed-Certified Audiologist
EXCESSIVE NOISE AND EARLY HEARING LOSS
Age-related hearing loss (known as presbycusis) continues to lay claim to a large share of the population as people live increasingly longer lives and the elderly segment of the population grows. Beyond that, a disturbing new trend has developed. According to a panel of experts convened by the National Institutes of Health, millions of Americans are exposed to excessive noise at home, at work, and at play that is giving rise to irreversible hearing loss at earlier ages. In the past, noise-induced hearing loss was mostly experienced by those working at occupations in noisy workplaces. Today, nearly anyone can experience hearing loss simply by being a participant in our noisy culture. Thus, it no longer holds that one has to be old to experience hearing loss.
It is important to protect your hearing if you are exposed to excessive amounts of loud noises. Routine hearing exams may help screen potential problems. If you have been exposed to loud noises and suspect that you might be suffering from hearing loss, please come see us at THE HEARING CENTER. We take a pro-active approach to hearing conservation (i.e. protection from excessive/noises – walkmans, concerts, etc.), and can help you towards better hearing health. Please call us at 1-800-339-9316. We are pleased to announce that we are now located at 62 Derby St. in Hingham. We know you will enjoy the convenient parking and larger location. For your convenience, we are still located at 470 Southern Artery (Rte. 3-A), Quincy. Mastercard and Visa are accepted.
P.S. It is estimated that at least ten million Americans experience diminished hearing due to exposure to excessive noise.

CDC presents 'Annie'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club, the area's oldest community theater group, will present the classic musical, "Annie," at Scituate High School on May 13, May 19, and May 20 at 7:30 p.m. and on May 14 and May 21 at 2 p.m.

The cast of 86 is entirely made up of junior members of the club. The show will be directed by Kerry Tondorf, with musical direction by Karen Ginsburg and choreography by Bonnie Duval. Dawn Rota and Anita Ahern will produce the show.

Tickets are $8 or $6 each for groups of eight or more and may be purchased at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset or Wilbur's Ice Cream in Scituate. Reservations and group sales may be made by calling 545-7514.

Plant sale at Glastonbury Abbey

A large selection of plants will be on sale on Saturday, May 13, from 9 a.m. to noon on the grounds of Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St. (Rt. 228), Hingham.

Perennials, ground cover, herbs, annuals, fruit and vegetable plants, house plants and bushes will be sold, including both seedlings and mature plants.

The plants are being donated from local private gardens in the Hingham-Cohasset area and many will be divisions of specimens grown in the Abbey gardens.

Proceeds will benefit the Benedictine Monks at Glastonbury Abbey.

'Congo Capers' is back!

The Second Congregational Church of Cohasset will present "Congo Capers of '95," a reprise and update of the hit variety show of 1993, on May 19 and 20 at 8 p.m. at Cohasset High School.

The show will feature more than 50 singers, dancers, thespians and spear-holders recruited from members and friends of the church. Jo Ann Fichtner is director and choreographer, with Bob Leavitt as musical director.

"Congo Capers of '95" is the latest in a line of shows offered publicly by the parishioners of the church and will feature song, dance and novelty numbers, drawing from well-known Broadway shows such as "Porgy & Bess," South Pacific" and "Chorus Line."

Tickets are $5 and are available through Maggie Bates, ticket chair, at 383-1129, from cast members or from the church office by calling 383-0345.

Community Garden Club

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its annual meeting at the Chart House in Cohasset on Tuesday, May 23. A social hour begins at 11 a.m., followed by brunch and the business meeting at 11:30 a.m. New club officers will be introduced, and the Broad Cove Chorale will present a concert. Tickets are $16. For further information or reservations call Mary Sullivan at 383-1295. Members are encouraged to bring a guest. Babysitting will be available at St. Stephen's church.

Title V. . .

could affect your property based on sound bites heard out of context.

Homeowners — especially small-lot homeowners — can economize on the costs of a Title V upgrade by coming together to purchase and maintain a shared septic system for several households.

"It's more economical for a few houses with cesspools to pool their resources and buy, for example, a BioClere system," Dimisioris said. "I know of one street with six or seven tight tanks where the residents got together, took a second mortgage out on each of their homes, brought the money to town hall, and said, 'Here's a check. We want the sewer line extended to our property.' The move cost those homeowners $15,000 each, and it increased the value of each of their homes by $30,000. So things like that can work. The problem is getting two people who have lived beside each other for 20 years to agree on anything."

Copies of the Title V regulations are available from the State House bookstore by calling (617) 727-2834. Individual names can be placed on the DEP's mailing list by calling (617) 292-5886. For information about Title V regulations in velocity zones or other legal issues, call (617) 935-7600.

PSO meeting tonight

The PSO Spring Meeting will be held on Thursday, April 27, at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. The guest speaker will be Henry Lague.

All parents of Cohasset Public School students are invited to come and meet the new board members for the upcoming school year.

Henry Lague, who has taught several graduate credit courses and workshops for teachers and parents, will give a light-hearted view on parenting today.

Coastline College

The Annual Coastline College Night will be held at Scituate High School on Tuesday, May 2 from 7 to 9 p.m. The evening will be conducted by the guidance department of the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate.

This year about 190 colleges and universities will be in attendance and representatives will be present to meet parents and students. The schools' guidance departments encourage sophomores and juniors to attend.

CHS students clean up James Brook

On April 25 hundreds of citizens in communities throughout Massachusetts participated in events to celebrate the National Day of Service. Citizens of all ages worked together, planting trees, building community centers and participating in citywide cleanups.

In Cohasset more than 50 public school students joined with adult volunteers to clean up three sites along James Brook and remove the debris that is currently obstructing the flow of water. The group also worked with members of the Cohasset Mosquito Control Board, Conservation Commission and Council on Aging, as well as school administrators, Cohasset PSO and the school committee to complete the project.

There were so many student volunteers that some had to be turned away. The volunteers were instructed by Veneta Roebuck of the Conservation Commission about working in the wetlands.

This project was made possible by a mini-grant from the Massachusetts National and Community Service Commission.

SSAC offers scholarships

The South Shore Art Center has announced the availability of scholarships for graduating high school seniors continuing in an arts education.

The Fred E. Bergfors Art Scholarship ($1,000), the South Shore Art Center Scholarship ($500) and the Macivor Reddie Award ($200) will be announced at graduation exercises or Senior Awards Night and at the 40th Annual Art Festival on the Common June 16 at 6 p.m. The scholarship will be paid directly to the winner's school toward tuition at the beginning of the second semester.

Portfolios must be submitted to the SSAC on Friday, April 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Interested students may call the center at 383-ARTS for an application form.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

The front entry-way of the Pierce residence at 1 Jerusalem Road is decorated for springtime with two large containers filled with dark pink tulips. The pink tulips are the perfect accent to the pale gray exterior, white trim and black shutters of this lovely Cohasset home.

I like Major Tulip,
He seems to say to me,
"I'm stationed here on dress parade —
As smart as smart can be.
My uniform is beautiful —
I know what I am doing —
I'm here to guard the garden plot
If there is trouble brewing.
Please leave me to my business
Which is to toe the line,
And if you'll tend to your affairs —
Why, I will tend to mine.

South Shore walks for kids

The Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children's South Shore Friends Association will host its first walk-a-thon to raise awareness and money to help get children off to a good start.

The Walk for Children will be held on Sunday, April 30, at Wompatuck State Park, Hingham, rain or shine. Families from many South Shore communities will be walking a one-, two- or five and a half-mile route. Registration will be between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. at the visitors center. There will be music, pony rides, face painting and other activities for children. Walking papers may be picked up at local town libraries.

Cohasset residents Meg Bertolami and Allison Moskow are co-chairing the Walk for Children, along with an active committee.

Funds raised will support prevention and treatment programs administered by MSPCC's Metro Region. MSPCC is one of the oldest child welfare agencies in the state.

Live band concert at CHS

On Saturday, April 29, an energetic group of Cohasset teens will stage a live band concert at the Cohasset High School Auditorium from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m. as part of their senior project.

The featured band, "Fun in the Kitchen," along with a Hingham band, "The Unseen," a Cape Cod band, "Dagobah," and a Norwell band, "Pug," have put together a varied, lively and interesting show suitable for all ages.

The price of the four-band concert is $5 at the door. Cohasset High School is located on Pond Street off Route 3A. For further information or directions call Dean at 383-0752.

SSL financial planning seminar

The Social Service League of Cohasset will hold a seminar, "Are You Prepared to Survive Alone Financially?" on Tuesday, May 9, at 1 p.m. at the Lightkeepers Residence, Bancroft Hall, Cohasset Harbor.

The seminar will focus on informing the audience on how to manage financial matters should they be left alone through the death of a spouse, divorce or disability.

Topics will include taxes, health insurance, assets, checkbook knowledge, investments, attorneys, accountants and wills. Members of the panel are: Judge Anna Doherty of Marshfield, Attorney Michele Dorsey of Scituate, Harvey Gates, A.G. Edwards Investments of Hingham and Mary Hartwell, Cohasset Social Service League.

For reservations call the Cohasset SSL at (617) 383-0771. Space is limited.

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate Dog Training Classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Tuesday evenings on Cohasset Common, beginning May 9.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. with intermediate-advanced classes held from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. The fee is $46 for the 8-week program.

Checks should be made payable to the Town of Cohasset and may be brought to the first class. Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months old.

The beginner class will teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. The intermediate-advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department beginner class.

For both classes owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. No spike collars are allowed. It is suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothing.

For further information or to register call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. Classes are limited in size. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis. Classes will not meet during inclement weather.

Eileen F. Kurtz

Eileen F. (Jason) Kurtz, 69, of Cohasset, died April 18 at home.

Born in Weymouth, she lived most of her life in Cohasset, where she attended school. She recently moved to Hull to be with her daughter, Diane Kurtz O'Brien.

She was secretary of the Harborview Tenants Association and a telephone operator for New England Telephone for 30 years, retiring 10 years ago.

She was past president of the American Legion Auxiliary and was a member of the installation team of Norfolk County Council.

Mrs. Kurtz was also a member of the Telephone Pioneers and FISH, a volunteer service, and was a volunteer at the Cohasset Council on Aging, Cohasset Town Hall and the town Water Department. She was a member of the Cohasset Housing Authority Modernization Committee.

She leaves three sons, Peter Kurtz, Richard Kurtz and William Kurtz, all of Cohasset; three other daughters, Charlene Kurtz Jones Gardner of Scituate, Jacqueline Kurtz of Cohasset and Eileen Kurtz of Weymouth; two sisters, Elizabeth J. Maree of Cohasset and Carolyn Vickery of Carver and eight grandchildren.

A memorial service was held in St. Anthony's Church. Burial was private.

Donations in her memory may be made to charity.

Community Health Awareness Day slated

The Social Service League of Cohasset and the Cohasset Board of Health are sponsoring a Community Health Awareness Day on Thursday, May 4, at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. and an evening clinic from 5 to 7 p.m.

The purpose of the special day is to bring free health screenings under one roof to encourage Cohasset residents to take an active part in their own health care by participating in free screenings and consultations with physicians and health professionals in various fields.

Physicians have volunteered for screenings in podiatry, oral cancer, opthamology, dermatology and chiropractic care. There will also be screenings for diabetes, glaucoma and cholesterol, and hearing tests will be administered. All screenings are free.

The Norwell Visiting Nurses will conduct breast exams, and women may sign up for an appointment for a mammogram to be conducted by the Mobile Diagnostic Van, which will be in the Town Hall parking lot on Saturday, June 10.

A librarian from the Paul Pratt Memorial Library will display books pertaining to health issues.

A registered pharmacist will be present to provide information on prescription interactions. Those having questions pertaining to their prescriptions are asked to bring them in a brown bag for a consultation.

Health programs will be presented in all schools in Cohasset on May 4. There will be puppet shows, poster displays by students, and the "Convincer," sponsored by the Governor's Council on Safety, will demonstrate the value of seat belts while driving. The Cohasset Police Department and Tobacco Control Committee will also have demonstrations.

Healthy treats have been donated by Stop & Shop, Dunkin' Donuts and Atlantic Bagel. The program is open to all Cohasset residents free of charge.

No horsing around for 15-year-old champion

Horse shows are all business for Loni Colwill

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Loni Colwill was three hours into her pre-competition ritual of washing, combing and clipping the whiskers and eye lashes of her 10-year-old horse "Pocos Diamond Jessie."

The 15-year-old Colwill, a sophomore at Cohasset High School, had already spent several hours of her Saturday at the Mount Hope Farm in the west end of Scituate. But judging by her enthusiasm in her work in the musty stable, one would have thought Colwill arrived only minutes earlier.

Colwill, the Mass Quarter Horse Association Novice Youth All-Around champion in 1994, was preparing "Jessie" for a show the following morning in Raynham. It would be one of the first of several Colwill would enter before the middle of fall.

Training, and all that goes along with horse shows, has never been a chore for Colwill. On the contrary, she thrives on heading to the stable every day after school and working to perfect any imperfections in her routine with the handsome horse she has owned for the past four years. In short, Colwill knows what she needs to do in the competitions to come out on top.

"I like it," Colwill said. "It's a routine. It's sort of a part of life."

Life was good to Colwill during last year's season, which runs from April to late September "when it gets too cold to ride." Not only did she win the MQHA novice title, Colwill also garnered no less than eight top-three finishes between the MQHA and South Shore Horseman's Council (SSHC) competitions.

Much of the success Colwill has enjoyed lies squarely in her ability to control "Jessie" in pressure situations. However, Colwill has made no small commitment to her sport. The dedication she pours into working with "Jessie" is one which her trainer, Nancy Moose of Laxmen turn game into 'vacation massacre'

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The members of the Cohasset High lacrosse team didn't need an extravagant trip to some far away location to enjoy their April vacation. Friday morning's 16-3 thumping of Brookline was fun enough for the surging laxmen squad. Milliken Field might as well have been Club Med for all the Skippers cared.

Cohasset simply smothering Brookline from the opening minutes of the match. The scoring binge didn't end with Brookline. The Skippers, paced by Adams' 10 points, took their act on the road, rubbing out Bedford, 18-8, to improve their record to 4-3.

After getting off to a somewhat sluggish start, the Skippers have tightened up their game and become especially stingy on defense. In hindsight, the slow start could be attributed the fact the preseason was especially short and the team wasn't able to get in any scrimmage games prior to the beginning of the regular schedule.

"Offensively, we have gotten a lot better," said head coach Ken Ekberg. There certainly has been constant improvement."

So dominating were the Skippers on offense against Brookline, they had to play an entire two minutes of defense in the first 20 minutes of the contest, rumbling out to a insurmountable 7-0 lead in the first period.

Attackman Chris Adams moved closer to becoming Cohasset's all-time scoring leader by punishing Brookline with seven goals, four of which came in the opening period. Ken Leahy (3 goals, 4 assists) and Andy Collins (3 goals, 1 assist) each had hat tricks. Ben Redfield added a tally and a pair of assists while Brett MacQuarrie and Ed Hamilton had a goal apiece to contribute to the Skippers' offensive onslaught.

Cohasset used a combination of tight passing and stingy defense to go up 3-0 just 2:37 into the game. Adams scored a pair of goals within an 18-second span and MacQuarrie whipped a shot past the Brookline goalie for an unassisted tally.

Redfield made it 4-0 when he picked up a loose ball at midfield and sprinted towards the net rifling his shot past the shot-weary Brookline goaltender. Collins had the most bizarre goal of the period, with 6:14 gone on the clock. The goaltender made a save and was attempting to clear the ball out of the Brookline end when Collins alertly put his stick up and picked off the ball. It was barely in Collins' webbing for a second before he unleashed a wicked shot that the netminder had absolutely no chance of stopping.

Adams showed what makes him such a great goal scorer at the 7:03 mark. Playing to the right of the goaltender, he leaped and reached for Leahy's pass and, in one deft motion, got off a perfect shot before touching the ground.

The period ended with Adams taking MacQuarrie's pass from his right and found the back of the net with 51 seconds remaining in the period.

Seven players had points in the win over Bedford. Adams put home 6 goals to go along with his 4 assists. Leahy added 4 goals and 2 assists of his own, while Collins and Redfield combined for 7 goals and 3 assists. McKenna had a single tally and Bob Stansell and Matt O'Connor had an assist apiece.

Cohasset's transition game has been extremely effective of late, due mainly to the play of netminder Eli Kahn. Despite playing with a broken thumb, Kahn has been solid in net. He has become especially adept at reading the position of the Skippers and clears the ball quickly from Cohasset's zone.

"He has been very perceptive to the guy who is breaking down the field," Ekberg said. "We probably had a half dozen fast-break goals [against Bedford]."

It isn't even May yet and some incredible baseball games have already been played on the South Shore.

Take the Scituate High baseball team, please.

The Sailors trailed the Hull Pirates 4-0 in the seventh inning last week with two outs and no one on base and appeared dead in the water.

But out of nowhere, the Sailors ripped off five runs to claim the two-out victory.

"It was an incredible win for us," said SHS coach Dan McCarty. "Even with two outs nobody quit and somehow we found a way to win."

Here's how the seventh unfolded for the Sailors.

With two outs, junior catcher Rich Connell singled to put a runner on first.

Senior tri-captain Matt Swanner then singled to put runners on first and second.

Senior tri-captain Matt Chase followed with another single, which scored Connell and the score was 4-1 in favor of Hull.

After a walk to Jeremy Keeswood, sophomore third baseman Jared Connolly singled to score two runs and make it 4-3.

Then senior tri-captain Pete Duggan delivered the big hit as he singled in two more runs and Scituate won the game 5-4.

And you thought the Mets rally in '86 was a great comeback.

The Sailors, who rely more on hard work and hustle than raw talent, won three straight games to even their record at 3-3.

Other teams that have pulled out some fantastic finishes include Silver Lake, which rallied past defending OCL champions Falmouth in the first game. (The winning run came on a two-out bases loaded double in the sixth inning.)

The Lakers, who are 3-2 on the season, have two of the best players around in lefty pitcher Lou Chighisola and center fielder Chris Watson.

Chighisola throws some serious lefty heat while Watson brings great speed on the basepaths and back-to-back OCL batting titles.

Stayed tune for more fantastic finishes on the diamond.

Some of the other teams to watch this year are: Hingham High, anchored by catcher Corey Farina (Yes the same Corey Farina who tore up the ACL gridiron) and a strong pitching staff.

Norwell High, led by another deep pitching staff and crafty coach Al Kassatly.

Also powerful Abington and Norton look tough in the SSL.

And both Scituate and Marshfield are back in the hunt for the state tourney.

With all that's going on, who needs whiny pro baseball players?

Spring into saving strokes around the green

Now that spring is here and the golf season is upon us, let us all pledge together that we shall shave off a few strokes each round this year. The simplest way to knock off strokes is to work on the short game...improve our chipping and putting. My belief is the short game is the "first to leave and the last to return" after undergoing a long hiatus from golf thanks to mother nature.

Have you noticed that after a long layoff that the full shots such as the driver and long irons are not so bad but your score is not quite what it could be? I feel this is attributed to when we loose contact with a golf club, we loose contact with ourselves and mainly with our connection to the club and the "feel" required to perform delicate shots such as the ones we find around the green.

"But the short game is so boring...I want to go to a driving range and beat balls until my hands bleed." I personally don't find lower scores boring and as we know, to improve at anything we need to practice. Constructive practice that is...practice with a purpose...quality rather than quantity.

Try this little drill the next time you go to practice your golf. Warm up by hitting chips and pitches. Be aware of how far your ball is traveling and practice "feeling" the distance. Become one with the yardage and understand what it takes for you to hit the ball the yardage you are attempting. Do this same drill on the putting green. Become aware of distance and stroke the golf ball this distance.

Good golf is played when golfers hit the golf ball the correct distance. Hitting the ball the correct distance requires practice and the understanding of "feel." Understanding what it takes to propel a golf ball the required distance gives you the ability to knock the ball closer to the hole more often and with less luck. This in turn provides you the opportunity to save strokes because it is a heck of a lot easier to knock in a three foot putt than a 20 foot putt.

If you need any questions addressed, please write to me at the South Shore CC and I will gladly include it in my weekly article. Best of luck with your golf games.

(Joe Keefe is the South Shore Country Club's head professional.)

Girls softball starts Saturday

The Cohasset girls' softball program officially begins this Saturday, April 29, at Cohasset High School fields. All girls interested in playing softball in grades 3-8 are asked to attend a special evaluation clinic beginning promptly at 2 p.m.

Games for grades 3-6 will be scheduled Tuesday and Thursday evenings at various town fields beginning at 6 p.m., as well as an occasional Saturday afternoon between noon and 4 p.m. at Barnes Little League Field.

All seventh- and eighth-grade girls are encouraged to participate in the program. Games for this level will be scheduled Sunday evenings at 6 p.m. at Barnes Field. Cost for registration is $25. Last minute sign-ups are welcome!

Golf Club to host tourney

Quincy Hospital will hold its Sixth Annual Golf & Tennis Tournament May 22 at the Cohasset Golf Club. The event benefits the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation and is open to anyone wishing to participate.

A day of golf, including greens fees, prizes, cart rental, box lunch and dinner costs $125. Tennis, including court time, prizes, box lunch and dinner, costs $75. You can attend the dinner alone for $50.

Sponsorships for the golf or tennis tournament are available at various levels: Sponsors ($500 or more) will be recognized by a sign at one of the 18 tees/holes or at the tennis courts and receive one free registration for either golf or tennis and dinner, as well as acknowledgment in the tournament program. Associate Sponsors ($250 or more) receive a complimentary dinner and acknowledgment in the tournament program. Friends of Quincy Hospital ($100) are acknowledged in the tournament program.

The Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation provides support for advanced medical technologies and services at Quincy Hospital.

The tournament is chaired by Quincy Hospital physicians Peter Barrett, MD and Peter Ambrus, MD. To play in or support the tournament, call Joan Schwartz at the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation at 617/773-6100, ext. 4016.

terview with horse rider Loni Colwill of Cohasset at the Mount Hope Farm, a beautiful layout tucked off the beaten path in the west end of Scituate, I learned the closest I'll ever get to a horse again is watching my 4-year-old niece ride the merry-go-round at Nantasket Beach or maybe catching a "Mr. Ed" rerun on Nickelodeon.

I'm not sure if it was the hay, the dung, the general mustiness that goes hand-in-hand with a stable that boards 10 horses, or all of the above, but I began to sneeze, wheeze and tear less than 10 minutes into the interview. Not since a hideous bout with conjunctivitis, four years ago, when it took a crowbar to pry open my eyelids in the morning, had I suffered a reaction like Saturday's.

After spending an hour with Colwill and her trainer, Scituate's Nancy Moose, I had all the information I needed and the interview mercifully came to a sneezy, drippy end. I bid good riddance to Mount Hope Farm, silently cursed those people at the stables who could take in the spring air through clear nasal passages, and headed off to my next appointment with a container of Mrs. Colwill's cashew nuts in tow.

My next stop was the CVS in Scituate Harbor where I groped around from aisle to aisle until I had my hands wrapped securely around a plastic bottle of Visine. Without giving a hoot about common courtesy, I cut the three people in line at the register and gave them a demonic, wide-eyed stare when they shared some colorful words with me. They all took a step back after what must have been a horrifying experience looking into my eyes. I can't help but think these innocent people were half expecting me to twist my head completely around if they protested my rudeness any further.

It was in CVS where I learned two more valuable lessons. Visine truly does "get the red out," and a little bit of demonic possession goes a long way in getting what you want in a hurry.

—Joe Reardon

No horsing around for 15-year-old champion

Scituate, doesn't see very often in a girl her age.

"Every single day she's here to work on what needs to be worked on," said Moose, who has been a trainer for more than 20 years. "It's incredible. I have to tell her to take a day off.

"She also realizes the horse is an athlete and has to be kept in condition to perform at its best. You're asking a 1,000-pound animal to do something it wouldn't normally do. You have to have incredible patience and sensitivity."

The misconceptions the public has over horse showing often irritates Colwill. The hours she puts in training "Jessie" rivals that of athletes in any sport and it can be dangerous. Colwill has taken her share of hard falls, which is all part of the sport.

"A lot of people think people who have horses are really snotty," she said, "but it's a lot of hard work."

The sport can be a frustrating one as well. Sometimes the horse is in just no mood to work. At that point, experience and patience come into play. For Colwill, the sessions where "Jessie" is unruly during a workout have become less frequent.

"One day he can be the best he has ever been," Colwill said. "The next day he can't do anything right. It has a lot to do with the personality of the horse."

If "Jessie" is particularly frisky at the start of a session, Colwill generally goes through the "lunge" routine. Colwill puts a line on the horse and walks him around in circles. This part of the horse's is similar to the stretching period an athlete generally takes before beginning the meat of a workout.

"It takes a lot of the spunk out of him," Colwill said. "It warms him up."

During a session, Colwill works on "Jessie's" walk, trot and canter. Like any athlete, Colwill recognizes the need for "Jessie" to have easy days, giving him a chance to recuperate from the previous day's work. Colwill generally takes "Jessie" on meandering, along the peaceful bridal trails which border the farm. Colwill usually reserves the rides for weekends, sometimes taking one once during the week. A typical outing on the trails covers anywhere from 3-4 miles.

"Mostly the trail rides is to get his mind off of the work," Colwill said.

The time Colwill has spent with "Jessie" has obviously paid off in calming the handsome animal. "He's just a big puppy dog," Colwill said in describing "Jessie's" disposition. "He follows me around everywhere."

During one show "Jessie" lost his footing in a patch of mud and fell on top of Colwill, seriously injuring her shoulder. Normally, when a horse falls it panics and begins to run frantically around the corral. But "Jessie's" reaction was completely the opposite. Sensing Colwill was hurt, he raised himself off her slowly, seemingly aware that she was injured. He then stood next to her, as if protecting her from further harm, while she was tended to by EMTs.

Colwill has too many goals in front of her to let a shoulder injury stand in her way for any long duration. Though she is still in the Novice Youth division, Colwill will compete this season in the Youth division at the open shows. When a competition day arrives, she is all business. Her goal for that day is very specific.

"To win," Colwill said. "This isn't fun. I mean, it's fun but it's a lot of work."

Eventually, Colwill would like to attend a college that offers "some sort of equestrian studies." An honor roll student for the past eight terms, Colwill has little time to do much else than schoolwork and training for competitions.

Moose said Colwill will reap the benefits of her discipline and work ethic even more in the coming years. The sport could provide her with endless possibilities.

"She could be a successful trainer or a successful instructor," Moose said. "She's certainly capable of doing the Quarter Horse Congress and Quarter Horse Worlds (the two biggest shows in the world)."

Summer baseball camp set

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a South Shore Baseball Club Summer Baseball Camp, Monday, June 26 through Friday, June 30.

The half-day program for ages five through 7 will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. The cost is $70.

A full-day program will also be offered for ages seven through 12, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for $120. Registrations are being accepted at the Recreation Office. Call 383-6791 for further information.

1995 Bay State Games registration opens

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation announced that registration for the 1995 Bay State Games has begun.

Registration information can be found at high school and college athletic departments, local libraries, town recreation departments, YMCAs and various sport organizations. Information also is available by calling 617-727-3227. This year marks the introduction of judo into the games, along with the expansion of archery and six-on-six field hockey.

Tryouts and qualifying tournaments start May 28 and run through June 24. The finals will be July 12-16 at five Boston area universities. Opening ceremonies will take place Thursday night, July 13, at Boston City Hall Plaza.

Free sports clinic at SSH

Trainers, coaches, parents and adult athletes are invited to take "time out" for a free evening spring sports clinic at South Shore Hospital on Wednesday, May 10, from 6 to 9 p.m. in the Emerson conference room.

Sponsored by SSH physicians affiliated with South Shore Orthopaedic Associates, Inc. the clinic will familiarize participants with the types of injuries and treatment methods specific to spring sports. There will also be a presentation on choosing proper athletic footwear.

Admission to the clinic is free but reservations are required and may be made by calling (617) 340-8349.

Harborfest parade planned

The theme of this year's Harborfest Parade will be "World War II Remembered," in keeping with Governor Weld's request that each community in the Commonwealth celebrate the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II.

The parade is scheduled for Sunday, June 18, beginning at 2:30 p.m. Any person or group is eligible to participate, and presentations need not follow the theme. However, only those that do honor the theme will be eligible for prizes, co-sponsored by the George H. Mealey American Legion Post and the Cohasset VFW Post #9146. The first prize will be $1,000, with a second prize of $500 and a third of $200.

For further information call Keith Knowles at 383-1331.

Drama workshop offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a Saturday morning Drama Workshop, to be taught by Elizabeth and Grace Deveney.

The class will meet from 9 to 10:30 a.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall for six weeks, beginning May 20. The fee is $24 per participant for the entire series of lessons.

The program is ideal for young people who have an interest in theater and the performing arts. At the end of the workshop the children will put on a skit for parents.

To register call the Recreation Department at [illegible]-6791. Non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis.

Harborfest parade planned

The theme of this year's Harborfest Parade will be "World War II Remembered," in keeping with Governor Weld's request that each community in the Commonwealth celebrate the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II.

The parade is scheduled for Sunday, June 18, beginning at 2:30 p.m. Any person or group is eligible to participate, and presentations need not follow the theme. However, only those that do honor the theme will be eligible for prizes, co-sponsored by the George H. Mealey American Legion Post and the Cohasset VFW Post #9146. The first prize will be $1,000, with a second prize of $500 and a third of $200.

For further information call Keith Knowles at 383-1331.

Drama workshop offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a Saturday morning Drama Workshop, to be taught by Elizabeth and Grace Deveney.

The class will meet from 9 to 10:30 a.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall for six weeks, beginning May 20. The fee is $24 per participant for the entire series of lessons.

The program is ideal for young people who have an interest in theater and the performing arts. At the end of the workshop the children will put on a skit for parents.

To register call the Recreation Department at [illegible]-6791. Non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 83F1378T1
Notice of Fiduciary's Account

To all persons interested in the estate of Julian S. Hartwell late of Cohasset, Ma. in the county of Norfolk,

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the 10th and Final account of Mary A. Hartwell and George E. Coorssen, Jr. as trustees under article 4th of the will of Julian S. Hartwell of said estate as Trustee - (the fiduciary) under Article 4th of the will of said deceased has been presented to said Court for allowance.

If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the 31st day of May, 1995 the return day of this citation. Cohasset inventor says:

Abandon Greenbush; build spur in Weymouth

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

An architectural designer/inventor from Cohasset has proposed a novel concept to provide commuter rail service to an even greater population than those who would be served by the Old Colony Railroad's Greenbush line.

"This concept has never been proposed by the MBTA nor, to my knowledge, by anyone else," said Kevin O. O'Keeffe of Pond Street, who works mostly out of his home.

O'Keeffe suggests that a three-mile commuter-rail spur be constructed at the Route 3-228 interchange on Hingham Street, Rockland, and run three miles westward to the Old Colony Plymouth line in South Weymouth.

Two miles of this line would run through the South Weymouth Naval Air Station, which has been targeted by the Defense Base Realignment and Closure Commission to be closed. One mile of the spur runs through privately owned property.

According to O'Keeffe, an M.I.T. graduate, the Accord terminal, which would be sited west of Accord Pond, one of Hingham's drinking water supplies, would serve as a regional destination for local shuttle buses. Other commuters could drive to the park-and-ride lot, then board the train for a 30-minute non-stop express ride to Boston.

In addition, the highway link from Route 3 to the South Weymouth Naval Air Station would foster economic de-

Cohasset could seek waiver for train horns

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Engineers from the company Cohasset hired to analyze the MBTA's environmental impact report on the restoration of the Greenbush line, recommend the town ask that train speed be reduced to less than 40 mph through the village area to mitigate noise impacts.

CDM said the MBTA significantly underestimated the number of residences that would be impacted by grade-crossing horns.

However reduced speed would eliminate the need for pole mounted warning horns at the North Main, Smith Place, Pleasant and Spring Street crossings, Frank Vitale of the Cambridge-based Camp, Dresser & McKee explained this week.

ConCom fines local developer

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Charging that he performed unauthorized work and damaged wetlands at his Super Stop & Shop site on Rte. 3A, the conservation commission this week fined Donald Staszko.

In a four-part judgement against the prominent businessman and developer, the commission fined Staszko approximately $7,500.

Commission chairman Roseanne McMorris explained that the fee was arrived at by assessing dollar amounts to each of the various violations, which included placing and leaving fill in certain areas and for obliterating a wetlands buffer. The commission did not ask that the buffer be replaced because that wet-

62-acre Rte. 3A site sells for $1.3M

By Alice C. Coyle

It's been five months since the Webb-Norfolk Conveyor in Cohasset closed its doors, laying off dozens of local workers and moving equipment and a very few employees willing to relocate, closer to its Michigan headquarters, the Jervis B. Webb Company.

According to The Douglas Company, the Hingham-based real estate agency handling the property, Mario Susi & Son, a Dorchester construction company, bought the land and buildings this week for $1.3 million.

Originally listed at $2.6 million, Douglas said the zoning and soil conditions made it a tough sell for residential developers. Douglas said the construction firm has no immediate plans for the land and will keep the building as it is for now.

Pesticide ok'ed for midge problem

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Tuesday night the conservation commission unanimously agreed to allow pesticide spraying on Straits Pond to combat an anticipated infestation of midges, tiny gnat-like insects which swarm in dense elouds. Able to pass through screens, midges have become so serious a problem on Straits Pond in recent summers that the Hull Board of Health has declared them a public health emergency.

South westerly winds tend to blow the insects away from Cohasset, making the problem more serious in Hull.

Absentee ballots ready

Absentee ballots are now available for the May 13 special election. Voters may apply for an absentee ballot if they are going to be out of town, have a physical disability, or cannot vote on Saturday May 13 due to their religious beliefs. Ballots may be picked up during regular office hours at the town clerk's office until noon May 12. Voters may also apply for an absentee ballot by mail; please include name as registered, address, precinct, mailing address and signature. For information, please call the town clerk at 383-9900. Please note the town clerk's office will close at noon, Friday May 12 in preparation for the election.

Adopt a Plot is topic

Cohasset Lightkeepers President Joe McElroy and garden club liaison to the Lightkeepers Corporation Barbara Dillon are working together to start an Adopt-a-Plot program at Government Island.

McElroy noted that with pressures to the Lightkeepers' budget, there are not sufficient funds to enhance the area around the Lightkeeper's residence and parking lot with more landscaping.

McElroy and Dillon said they'd like to send out letters to local landscaping companies and ask they offer their services by adopting a plot. They would get a small plaque to install in their area.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said she had no objections as long as there is some coordination so the entire area looks "like a uniform whole."

Selectmen gave the go ahead to explore the possibility of seeking landscaping companies that work in Cohasset to provide beautification to areas near the Lightkeepers residence that require it. The Lightkeepers group is a non-profit organization that oversees the newly renovated lightkeepers residence and grounds. The group raised money to renovate the building which includes two apartments and a meeting room.

Shaw's cemetery slated?

Cohasset's long-lived cemetery controversy popped up unexpectedly during last week's planning board hearing on the Shaw's supermarket proposed for Cushing Plaza.

Planning board chairman Alfred Moore stated that the board looks at the long-term affects of any project.

"Where will we be in the year 2030?" he asked.

"We'll be dead," someone replied.

"Not in a cemetery in Cohasset," deadpanned John Modzelewski, the engineer hired to evaluate the project for the planning board.

In the general laughter which followed, Moore asked Martin Healy, Shaw's attorney, how many burial plots could be included at Cushing Plaza. "That's a new condition of all new site plans," he joked.

At the heart of the cemetery battle, are the town's efforts to expand the Beechwood St. cemetery site. Some former members of the cemetery study committee wanted the town to proceed with a new cemetery off Red Fox Lane (off Rte. 3A near the Super Stop & Shop), instead.

9-1-1 is on hold

Selectmen learned this week that enhanced 9-1-1, an emergency response system, will not be on line until June 7 at the earliest.

Although the system was scheduled to come on line next week, selectmen don't see the delay as being entirely negative. They say the extra month can be used working out any problems in configuring Cohasset's system.

Selectman Peter Pratt explained NYNEX was experiencing technical difficulties during overflow scenarios which prompted the state to put a moratorium on the service until these problems can be resolved.

Dispatchers to man the system have been hired and will start work on schedule despite the delay, Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said.

He said the dispatchers will handle the police phones. The fire phones haven't been switched over yet, Brown said.

Residents should continue to use the emergency numbers 383-1212 to police and 383-0260 for fire until 9-1-1 comes on line, selectmen said.

Sewer study money

Last week the advisory committee agreed to a $9,600 reserve fund transfer which will be used to partly pay for a sewer study.

Edward "Ted" Guild of the sewer commission told the committee that the state will pay 2/3 of the cost of the study, $20,400.

Guild said the study will search for leaks in the sewer line, which will reduce the town's chances of being fined by the state.

"The more leaks we can find and stop up, the less we'll be in jeopardy of penalties," he stated.

There are some 15,000 feet of sewer line in the Cohasset.

During the meeting there was also some agreement that sewer rates, which have not gone up in three years, should be raised. Between 180 and 200 residents are on the sewer line.

Guild said that when a new system is in place by April 1, 1999, rates will increase substantially.

Conservation business will cost more

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

In keeping with what is charged in other towns and in order to cover some of the ever-growing cost of running their office, the conservation commission this w[illegible] raised fees.

"This will more accurately reflect the cost to the town of Cohasset," said commission chairman Roseanne McMorris.

"Our fees are certainly in the ball park," said Thomas Callahan, a commission member.

Applicants will be charged for the cost of processing paperwork and for the cost of hiring consultants who must provide technical review of projects, applications, monitor work in progress, offer enforcement and corrective action.

For example, an applicant seeking a certificate of compliance will by asked to pay $50 for the conservation office to determine whether it is justified.

An amended order of conditions will be $25 and a variance request will cost $55.

The review of projects will cost considerably more, ranging from $55 to $725.

The fees will usually add up to $1,500, for example, a sum which will be held while the project is underway. Once everything is completed to the commission's approval, the balance of the fee will be returned to the applicant.

They said that this provides an incentive to applicants to obey wetlands law.

Commissioners explained that the fees will be set by either the agent or chairman and that the amounts will likely vary based on the project. Complicated, time-consuming commercial projects would be charged more than a simple homeowner planning an addition, for example.

McMorris said that the fees are not at all high when all the of the steps that the commission must undertake to review projects.

During the discussion, the commission agreed to a suggestion from Jeffrey Waal to remove language on percolation tests from the document on fees. Although they will charge for perc tests, they said that is not a fee, rather a policy decision, which will be discussed more in the future.

In addition, the commission itself must follow strict guidelines stipulated by state and federal law. Conservation commissions were set up to protect all wetlands, including bodies of fresh or salt water and the buffer zones around them. The commissions monitor construction and related activity in areas of their jurisdiction in order to protect plant and animal habitat as much as possible.

Commission member Veneta Roebuck reminded the group that the health board had been notified of the proposed fee changes and suggested that any comments from that board be considered when they are received. The other members agreed.

Meanwhile, the fees will be sent to town counsel Richard Henderson for a review of the wording and then filed with the town clerk.

All fees can be waived at the discretion of the board. Other town departments are not subject to the fees.

Dogs must be licensed

The deadline for licensing dogs in Cohasset is May 1. A $25 fine will be due after that date. Town Clerk office hours are Monday through Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

If unable to go to the Town Clerk's office, a check for $8 (neutered and spayed animals) or $15 (male and female animals) may be mailed to: Town Clerk, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025 along with a note listing type of animal, owner's name, address and telephone number, breed, color, dog's name and a copy of the dog's rabies certificate.

No more burning allowed

The 1995 Open Burning Season in Cohasset, ended April 30., the fire department said.

Larger signs required

Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield will install larger "Keep Right" signs than are currently there at Beach Street and Atlantic Avenue, also know as Perry Higginson Square.

Safety Officer Clifton Jones said that the proposed signs would not detract from the beauty of the area.

Pesticide ok'ed for midge problem

The chemical pesticide Abate will be sprayed from a boat in various locations of the pond in about three weeks.

Acting at the request of the Town of Hull, the commission gave its approval for the process to be repeated for the next three years, if necessary.

About 15 Hull residents attended the meeting, including a number of officials.

Hull Town Manager Phillip Lemnois, health board member Kevin O'Brien and conservation commission members Joan McKaulif and Cathy Bogdan all endorsed the spraying. Last week the Hull Conservation Commission unanimously endorsed the spraying.

Permission of the Cohasset Conservation Commission was required because the pond lies partly in the town and falls under the jurisdiction of the commission since it is a wetland.

Lemnois explained that last summer's Abate application ended the infestation. Applying the chemical in pellets from a boat is safer for the environment than a spraying from the air, Lemnois explained. It is also likely to be more effective since the chemical can be concentrated where the midge larvae are developing, whereas wind can disperse an aerial spraying.

Although Lemnois and McKaulif said that the Abate has not appeared to damage wildlife on the pond, they stressed that long-term non-chemical solutions to the problem are desirable.

However, environmentalists have pointed out that often the long-term affects of chemical spraying are not immediately visible, but can take years to work their way thrqugh the food chain.

Straits Pond is a shallow, warm water body, fed by both fresh and salt water from the Weir River.

Runoff from septic systems combines with the warm, shallow water to create an ideal environment for the build up of algae, which in turn provide nourishment for midges.

According to Lemnois, Hull bought a $5,300 gate to control the tidal flow into the pond, opening it 23 times last year to let cold, salt water flush algae out of Straits Pond. Opening the gate also allows crabs, mussels and other predators to enter the pond.

Lemnois said that at some point a fishing ban may be considered on the pond, since fish eat midge larvae. A ban would require a town meeting vote and could last as long as five years, the Hull official stated.

Hull has also tried to stop sewage from seeping into the pond.

He said that every septic system on the Hull side of the pond was tested with dye to determine runoff to the pond.

The testing revealed that one septic system has failed, which has since been fixed. They also uncovered five sewage pipes leading directly into the pond or into water which flows into it.

Lemnois said Cohasset must test sewer systems on its side of the pond.

"We will be seeking from Cohasset what we saw from Hull, which is rectification . . . a long-term solution," he said.

The Cohasset officials appeared to agree with this approach.

Executive secretary Gregory Doyon endorsed the spraying and an inspection of sewage systems.

"We have a responsibility to look at that as well," he said. "I would certainly urge you to support the three-year program."

Last year Cohasset selectmen approved $3,000 to help pay for the spraying.

Conservation commission member Edward Graham, who lives near the pond, attested to the severity of the problem and praised Hull's efforts.

"I saw a very professional approach (last year)," he said. "My house this week is completely covered (with midges.) It's time we put Cohasset behind this effort."

Roseanne McMorris, conservation commission chairman, said that she would waive the requirement that abutters be notified, but pointed out that Cohasset residents were not individually notified of the meeting, which applicants appearing before the commission are supposed to do.

The Hull officials pointed out that the notice of the meeting did run in various local newspapers.

Another conservation commissioner, Veneta Roebuck, wanted to know what the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) had said about the spraying, and was told that they have yet to respond to Hull's request.

However, Lemnois told her that DEP has approved an aerial spraying by Scituate of Musquashcut Pond, which is not far from Cohasset.

More than two years ago, DEP and the Coastal Zone Management forbade Abate spraying until the problem had been further studied.

In addition, midges, can become immune to various pesticides, including Abate, after repeated exposures, so environmentalists do not usually recommend spraying as a repeated, permanent solution.

Since midges are attracted to light, residents can hang sticky fly paper in lighted areas to trap the insects as they swarm around the light.

Cohasset could seek waiver

CDM also suggests the MBTA consider reducing speed at the Sohier Street crossing near the Osgood School and South Shore Music Circus which would improve safety and allow the potential elimination of warning horns between Sohier and Castle Road.

CDM's comments will be reviewed by selectmen, who added their input Monday night. They plan to vote on what comments to send to state Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Coxe next week. Comments on the EIR are due May 22 when the public comment period on document ends.

Noise impacts have been a rallying issue for train opponents who feel the horns would negatively affect the quality of life in town.

"The best approach to mitigate noise from warning horns is to eliminate their use," CDM says. "This could be done by the Department of Public Utilities (DPU) or the Massachusetts Legislature granting a waiver or by reducing the speeds of the train along the rail line.

"It is the MBTA's policy to use warning horns at those

Abandon Greenbush; build spur in Weymouth

velopment.

O'Keeffe said that a short segment of the Greenbush right-of-way from Braintree to Weymouth or West Hingham, could be used to provide bus service or light rail service.

The train would not eliminate the need for commuter boats, he said, and encourages the continuation of that service from both Hingham and Hull.

By constructing an Accord terminal, he said, commuters who now travel Route 3 from Duxbury, Marshfield and Hingham — and would not use the Greenbush line — now could ride the train. Other South Shore residents — from Pembroke, Hanover, Norwell and Rockland — who won't be served by the Greenbush line either — could use this rail service as well.

"Route 3 simply works better as a regional transportation link than the 1849 Greenbush roadbed," declared O'Keeffe. "The existence of function of Route 3 and the 36 years of its economic and social effects have to be considered as components in any effective regional transportation plan," he said.

O'Keeffe has submitted his proposal along with an analysis of travel times from Greenbush and from Accord to Transportation and Construction Secretary James Kerasiotis, Gov. William Weld, Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Coxe and numerous legislators.

The site of the proposed Accord terminal is nine miles away from Scituate, he noted, and calculated that the Accord terminal proposal would eliminate six train stops, 44 grade crossings and 11 miles of winding track.

But O'Keeffe not only has studied the MBTA's rail proposal before developing this idea; he considered at length the local transportation needs as well.

For example, he suggested that a Route 53 bypass running parallel to Route 3 could resolve major traffic problems that now exist from Hanover to Hingham, and he resurrected a proposal of connecting Route 53 to Scituate by a road or light transit through Wompatuck State Park.

An Accord terminal would encourage regional economic growth. With the convergence of road and rail and possibly air, transport, more business most likely would locate here.

The Greenbush line serves South Station-bound commuters and does not consider the possibility of the demographic changes that already are occurring, whereby individuals are not traveling to Boston for employment. The MBTA's basic premise reflects a "one-directional benefit . . . and overlooks a remarkable present opportunity for mutual benefit within the metropolitan economy," he stated.

"An Accord terminal (would) serve Boston's needs better than the MBTA's Greenbush restoration project by bringing in more commuters to the city, (yet) this proposal would encourage local jobs in local office buildings, jobs which actually reduce the pollution of commuting and enhance the quality of life," he concluded.

grade crossings where trains would be travelling 40 mph or greater."

Air pollution, wetlands flora and fauna, traffic impact and parking and financial issues are also included in CDM's report. CDM concentrated on potential impacts of Alternative 5, which is commuter rail at-grade to Greenbush.

The EIR also looks at other transportation alternatives including no-build, boats, buses and high occupancy vehicle lanes.

CDM attended the April 6 public meeting with selectmen and concerned citizens to scope the review of the EIR; attended the MBTA public hearing in Boston April 12; visited the right-of-way in town, the sites of the proposed station and parking facilities; and met with the police and fire chiefs.

The public can see CDM's report at the selectmen's office. Special town meeting last October voted to spend up to $15,000 to hire a consultant to help the town comment on the EIR. A referendum on whether or not residents support restoration of the Greenbush line is on the ballot in the special election May 13.

Street lights needed

Town safety officer Clifton Jones reported that a street light is needed at Highland Avenue and Long Road. The flood light illuminates the front of town hall not the intersection, Jones explained. Jones' recommendation is the result of his recent investigation of the lighting situation on the town common.

Selectmen said they'd put the request on their list of things to do. If the May 13 override fails, the town will reduce street lights, Selectman Jane Goedecke noted.

For 30 years the Cohasset plant built motor-driven conveyors comprised of a system of belts and rollers which are used by airports to move luggage and numerous industries to move product lines.

Webb-Norfolk Conveyor was the second company to own the plant and 62-acre property off Route 3A. During the Korean War, D.S. Kennedy owned and operated a high-tech antenna manufacturing company and employed upwards of 500 people.

Webb-Norfolk opened its plant in Cohasset in 1966. While the plant's headquarters are in Farmington Hills, Mich., there are other division offices in California, Georgia, Ohio and North Carolina, said plant general manager Robert Kohl.

Employees were told in a brief notice last summer that the company's product mix and the facility's financial performance during the past several years, along with aging facilities and equipment and market demands, led the company to that decision, Kohl said.

Kohl also noted that the plant's physical location in the Northeast when most of the company's market is in the Midwest caused other problems, like transportation costs, and made the company less competitive.

About half of the 45 union workers employed by Webb-Norfolk and represented by the Local 501 Shopmen Ironworkers union have been placed in other area companies represented by the ironworkers union, have found jobs in the private sector outside the union, and still others are waiting to transfer to Local 7 in Boston to work on the "Big Dig," said David Mortimer, a business agent for the Braintree-based ironworkers local.

This type of thing runs in cycles, said Mortimer of the plant closures and layoffs. With the summer coming — and longer days — construction work is more available, he added.

The average union worker at Webb-Norfolk earned $14 per hour and Mortimer spoke highly of the company's benefit package. Mortimer said he was also pleased with the severance negotiations.

"Relations between the company and the union were always good, there was always an open line of communications," Mortimer said.

Former Webb-Norfolk employee James Nagle does not share the same good feelings about the company.

A 28-year employee of Webb-Norfolk and before that D.S. Kennedy, Nagle, supervisor in engineering, was laid off in January 1994, nearly a year before the closure.

Nagle, who met his wife at Webb-Norfolk in 1978, said he is in the midst of an age discrimination suit with the company. At 60, when he was laid off, Nagle said he was the youngest of three long-time Webb-Norfolk employees let go last year and was given five weeks severance pay. When that ran out, Nagle was forced to dip into his pension, losing about 6 percent of it annually for every year he is under 65. Nagle's wife, Mary, who was director of personnel, was laid off in December and earned 16 weeks severance pay — one week for every year of service. At age 50, she's pursuing a degree in business and accounting at Quincy College and is using her severance pay for tuition. Nagle is working part-time but said the layoffs have been a blow.

Evelyn Shore of the South Coastal Workers Assistance Center, said the closure has been tough on local workers, many of whom are over 50 years old and now have to start over.

About 40 of the 75 Webb-Norfolk employees in South Coastal's outreach program are heading back to school, upgrading skills and getting re-training so they can get back to work. Shore said workshops in coping with job loss, and subsequent job searches, resume writing and interviewing skills, help individuals who haven't had to look for work in more than 20 years. All workers can update their skills and can go to school for up to a year tuition-free to learn new skills through this federally funded program, she said.

"It's a terrific program," said Shore, who noted the only requirement is that you've been laid off, not fired, and have a work record.

As the fourth largest employer in Cohasset, after the town itself, Stop and Shop and the Chart House, selectman Peter Pratt said the closing has had an economic impact on the town's tax revenues and tax base.

According to the assessors' office, the Webb-Norfolk plant is assessed at $3.48 million and the company paid $49,877 in taxes last year. While Cohasset is largely a residential community, light industry is important to the town's economy, Pratt said.

But environmental concerns made the property a tough sell.

According to Pratt, most of the property's 62 acres lies in a watershed protection district, which protects ground and surface drinking water supplies.

Familiar face appointed

On the recommendation of Police Chief Brian Noonan, selectmen appointed William Quigley as the town's seasonal police officer for the summer. Quigley will continue as the town's animal control officer. Quigley has completed all of the necessary training that is required by the state for reserve/intermittent police officers.

Clarification is noted

Voting machines are not kept in the vault in the town clerk's office but in a locked closet in the town hall auditorium. As required by law, ballots are kept in the vault for the 30 days following an election, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said. A recent story on the investigation following alleged election fraud in the April 1 town election incorrectly said the machines were locked in the vault.

Fish market to open

A new branch of Mullaney's Fish Market, which is based on Allen Street in Scituate Harbor, will open in about two weeks at 754 CJC Highway occupying the former used sports equipment store space next to Dwyer's Cleaners.

Company owner Christopher Mullaney, a Marshfield resident, said the store would offer one-stop shopping for fresh and frozen seafood, some dry goods, like sauces and pastas, and a limited range of wines and beers.

Selectmen approved Mullaney's application for a liquor license this week.

The store will be open from about 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., he said. Mullaney, who explained all the fish processing will be done in Scituate, opened a retail fish market in Duxbury about a year ago. The Cohasset store is the first to have a liquor license. Mullaney is renting the Cohasset space for $1,300 a month from the Dwyer Family Realty Trust, according to his liquor license application.

Harborfest parade planned

The theme of this year's Harborfest Parade will be "World War II Remembered," in keeping with Governor Weld's request that each community in the Commonwealth celebrate the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II.

The parade is scheduled for Sunday, June 18, beginning at 2:30 p.m. Any person or group is eligible to participate, and presentations need not follow the theme. However, only those that do honor the theme will be eligible for prizes, co-sponsored by the George H. Mealey American Legion Post and the Cohasset VFW Post #9146. The first prize will be $1,000, with a second prize of $500 and a third of $200.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

LOOKING FOR ADVICE

QUESTION: I've inherited some residential real estate. Would it make more sense to sell it or keep it and rent it out?

ANSWER: With such big dollars at stake, it would make sense to have a real estate professional sit down with you and put all the pros and cons down on paper.

Important questions need to be answered and you need professional input. Should you sell? What return can you expect? What will be the tax consequence? Is it the right time to sell? Would the residence be a good rental property? Would it be wiser to rent or put the profit into financial instruments? Get all the facts before you decide.

Dartmouth's off-campus programs are designed to expand the college's curriculum into new areas of academic and cultural understanding.

Through these programs, students are given the chance to study a particular topic in depth. Dartmouth's off-campus offerings include 44 programs in 17 countries and the United States. Approximately 65 percent of Dartmouth undergraduates take advantage of the college's foreign study opportunities.

Here's hoping that Benjamin will give us a detailed report of Greece and his studies there!

Diversity group plans multi-cultural event

A group of concerned residents have formed the Cohasset Diversity Committee not only to foster respect among citizens of all ages — but to serve as a resource for information and education, organizers say.

With 60 people at meetings and ten on the steering committee — the group's focus on mutual respect seems to have hit a responsive chord in the community.

To help pay for a myriad of programs and resources ranging from speakers on the Holocaust to sponsoring puppet shows celebrating diversity, the group plans a kick-off fund-raiser Sunday.

Susan Etkind, a social worker, and Nancy Herlin, a hospital administrator by background, are co-chairs of the multi-cultural evening from 5 to 7 p.m. this Sunday, May 7 at the South Shore Art Center.

The event features international food, beverages and music. Tickets are $25 per couple in advance and $30 at the door. Dress is casual. For information call Etkind at 383-6602 or Herlin at 383-1463.

A "mega" raffle is also planned and prizes will include a day-long sail, spring clean-up baskets and other surprises.

The evening will be fun and a way to enjoy ethnic foods, Etkind says.

In an interview this week, Etkind and Herlin said diversity is something Cohasseters often don't think much about. They explained that many high school graduates go off to college and find they have a roommate of a different culture.

"There's not the cultural mix (in Cohasset) to prepare kids for the culture at large," Etkind explains.

So the group was started to provide opportunities through education to expand the town's cultural awareness.

"We've hear more and more about kids teased for being different," notes Etkind. "And as parents we want to know how best to deal with the situation."

Last year, the newly formed committee sponsored a private showing of "Schindler's List" for Cohasset High School students at the Harborlight Mall movie theater in Weymouth.

And although the committee recently affiliated with the Parent School Organization (PSO) — its focus goes beyond the confines of the classroom. Plans include sponsoring an event at Harborfest in June, a community reading/book program at the Paul Pratt Library, and to sponsor speakers on various subjects.

obituaries

Scott A. Muir

Staff Sgt. Scott A. Muir, 33, of Plymouth, formerly of Cohasset, died April 22 in New York City after being involved in a motor vehicle accident while on duty.

Staff Sgt. Muir, a career Army officer, was born in Boston and graduated from Cohasset High School. He attended Daniel Webster College in New Hampshire.

He was the husband of Katherine A. (Andrews) Muir and leaves a son and daughter, Timothy A. Muir and Teri A. Muir, both of Plymouth; his parents, Robert C. Muir Sr. and Margaret A. (Armstrong) Muir of Marceline, Mo.; a brother, Robert C. Muir Jr. of Pennsylvania; a sister, Elizabeth Jury of Missouri and his wife's parents, Joseph and Edwina Migliaccio of Cohasset. He was the father of the late Christina A. Muir.

A funeral service was held on April 25, his 34th birthday, in Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Donations in his memory may be made to the Army Emergency Relief Fund, 200 Stovall St., Alexandria, VA 22332.

One town

Cohasset is still one town and the South Shore, one region despite the divisive debate on the proposed restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad.

As Cohasset prepares for a special election next week — which will include two ballot questions on the train — we think it's important and remember that we're a community as well as a democracy.

We doubt there are many fence sitters on the issue left in town — but that won't prevent the area outside town hall on election day from becoming a stage for vigorous campaigning.

But between now and May 13, please remember if your neighbor feels opposite to the way you do — don't let the issue end years of being neighborly.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we support the train. But we think we've been unbiased in our reporting and generous with editorial page space by supplying ample room for opinions on both sides.

And don't overlook the other important business on the ballot. The town is seeking a $360,000 override and authorization to borrow for a $752,000 public works garage.

The train issue won't be resolved at the Cohasset polls May 13, so don't let it ruin any present or future relationships.

Take solace that other towns are also grappling with strong opinions for and against the Greenbush Line.

We encourage both Cohasset camps to distribute all the literature they want on the issue. Hold signs, speak out, try to persuade, get involved.

But please go to the polls next Saturday with an open mind — not about the issue necessarily — but about the right your neighbor has to hold a different opinion from your own.

letters

To the Editor:

The letter in last week's Mariner (April 27) on railroad warning horns for the Greenbush line is confused on some points and grossly misleading on many more. A proper discussion cannot be so brief and devoid of supporting argument but it seems to be needed.

Sound levels from a horn fall off with distance and are much less at the sides and back of the horn than directly in front, although last week's letter ignores these facts, and confuses peak sound levels and 24-hour average sound levels as well.

The MBTA is planning to use pole-mounted horns at the grade crossings along with the warning bells and gates. The horns will then be able to be oriented down the street crossing where their warning is needed, rather than along the track, and the sound level in front of the horn will be 93dBA at 50 feet distance (86dBA at 50 feet abeam of the horn along the track). On a flat prairie with no bushes or trees, the sound level will decrease by 6dBA each time the distance doubles: 87dBA at 100 feet, 81dBA at 200 feet, etc. In Cohasset where foliage and buildings will absorb and obstruct the sound, the level will decrease faster.

(For its effect on people, sound power levels are measured by dBA, after passing through an "A" filter which approximates the average normal human hearing response, by deemphasizing low frequencies and high frequencies to which our ears are insensitive. dB sound levels are measured without a filter and are not really meaningful as a measure for human responses).

The locomotive horn will not be used except in emergencies. It is necessarily louder than the pole mounted horns because it is not yet at the grade crossing when the warning signal is needed. The federal rules require the locomotive horn to be at least 96 dBA at 100 feet. Last week's letter talks about "110 DB horns," which is reached as a dBA level only at 20 feet in front of the horn, perhaps 15 feet in front of the locomotive, a most inadvisable listening point. Someone standing five feet from the side of the train, which is also a foolhardy location, will hear 120 dBA for less than one quarter second for a train passing at 45 mph. The rest of the horn signal is much less loud because the locomotive is farther away, and the bystander is outside the main sound beam after the locomotive goes by.

The sound level near the sound source determines the lesser sound levels at reasonable distances where warnings are necessary and disturbance to neighbors may exist. Presenting source sound levels as though they are heard directly by the community is entirely wrong.

The actual horn noise impact has been measured by the MBTA as the change in the 24-hour average sound level without and with the train (adding 10dBA to nighttime sound levels — 10 p.m. to 7 a.m. — because they are more intrusive). This method has been standard since it was introduced by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in the early 1970s. Measurements of the ambient noise levels at many points along the right of way, and interpolating for many more, give values from 63 dBA to 53 dBA. Passage of the 24 trains per day with pole mounted horns and bells at the grade crossings raises the ambient average level to 65 dBA only for locations within 20 to 35 feet from the track (Table 8 of the March 1995 MBTA report on Analysis of Noise and Vibration Impacts). The horn and the passage of the train is clearly audible, but it is active for such a short time that it does not shift the 24-hour average very much.

Whistle stop is needed

To the Editor:

Da train, da train! Here comes da train. But guess what? Wanta walk, bike, or get dropped off down at the train? Forget it. It's only going to stop in the "boonies."

Wanta go into Boston for the evening, take the kids in on the weekend? Forget it. The train's only going to run during rush hours Monday through Friday.

What we need is a stop in Cohasset Village, a stop that will also slow the train down as it moves through the village. What we also need are midday, evening, and weekend trains so we aren't just stuck with a costly P&B.

Occasional commuter questions Greenbush

To the Editor:

I am an occasional commuter to Boston. Several years ago, when I first heard that the Greenbush line was going to be rebuilt, I really felt good about it. Now, after hearing all the details, I'm not so sure.

I heard what Mr. Brennan said at the informational meeting at Cohasset High School — that the train is a much more convenient and pleasant way to commute than is driving. He's right; I'd welcome the opportunity to leave my car in the garage.

However, the MBTA estimates that about 300 Cohasset people would use the proposed Greenbush train to travel to Boston. Three hundred out of a total Cohasset population of 7,075 is only 4.2 percent.

I now question how anyone can justify 11 grade crossings and the associated potential for accidents for the convenience of as little as 4.2 percent of the town's population. I'm also concerned about whether it's fair for 300 people to ask the other 6,775 to endure

More fiscal creativity is needed

letters

To the Editor:

In the coming weeks we are going to be deluged with reasons why we must have an override. I don't believe that an override is necessary at this time. Our present government is too big and does not spend intelligently. We have read in the Patriot Ledger and the Cohasset Mariner how Supt. Stephen Hart proposed $179,000 in cuts from the school budget. Acting as a bureaucrat, instead of as a manager of the taxpayers' funds providing the best education that we are willing to pay for, he cut into the areas of the school budget that would cause the greatest amount of concern for parents.

We are looking for some creativity, on his part, and we don't see any. All we get is the same thing we have been hearing year after year; we must spend more money. We do not have to cut in these areas, at present. We can save more than $179,000 just by capping the administrative, principals and supervisory budgets at a total of 5 budget of the school budget. That would put a cap of +/- $342,000. We have the opportunity to do this now because we have two principal positions open. Mr. Hart told me at town meeting that he only has $321,000 budgeted for administration and principals. However, the town warrant stated differently. Page 6 of the Town of Cohasset Warrant Annual Town Meeting March 25, states the following:

	Approp. Fiscal 1994	Expended Fiscal 1994	Approp. Fiscal 1995	Requested Fiscal 1996	Recomm. Fiscal 1996
1100 Scl Cmtee	$ 51,853	$ 47,138	$ 76,253	$ 81,865	$ 81,865
1200 Suprtndnt	113,815	115,146	118,239	122,646	122,646
1220 Bsns Off	48,440	52,864	51,365	52,533	52,533
2100 Spvsn	39,693	39,863	34,439	43,145	43,145
2200 Prncpls	396,744	398,597	398,011	404,761	404,761
Totals	$650,545	$653,608	$678,307	$704,950	$704,950
Less Proposed 5% Cap				(342,000)	(342,000)
Excess to meet Override needs				$362,950	$362,950

Since we need $179,000 from the schools this year we could phase in the caps. If we used only accounts 1200 and 2200, which total $527,407 and we subtracted the 5 percent CAP we would have an excess of $185,407. This also exceeds the $179,000 to cover the excess. Before the school committee considers the superintendent's recommendations, have they made an analysis of what we have? We constantly hear complaints and have voiced our own complaints about the cleanliness and sanitary conditions of the schools. Have they established standards of sanitation and cleanliness? Have they found out what it would cost to contract out the custodial services? Have they gone to any city or town that does this and reviewed their programs? Would this meet our standards and save us money? If not what must we do to meet the standards that have been established? What must we pay for this service? When the school budget is looked at we are not including pensions. How much do they cost us on an annual basis and how much of our future is being mortgaged?

We have many citizens who have lived in our town for a good portion of their lives and they would like to remain here but, with these increases, overrides and ineffective management, the future does not look bright for them.

What we really need is some creative thinking from our school committee and we do not seem to be getting it. If all we do is what the bureaucrats tell us to do then they will price us out of business. All of the citizens of the town know the value of a good education program. They also know the value of a dollar. Are we getting our money's worth from our program as outlined in the warrant?

There are many areas of government and its services for cities and towns to revise and save hundreds of thousands of dollars. These decisions have to be made by the politicians under the scrutiny of the voters and the populace of the city or town. We the voters must ensure that the politicians remain accountable for their decisions. We must not allow them to be spendthrifts with our money. We must demand that they control the bureaucrats. We must hold the politicians accountable for every dime of our money that they spend. We must speak out. We must not remain silent because we will then leave our futures and our children's futures to incompetence.

Override needed to maintain services

To the Editor:

Ah, springtime. Time to tidy up, plant the garden and revel in the beauty of Cohasset. This spring, however, you shouldn't bask in the glory of where you live unless you'll be voting "yes" in support of the override Saturday, May 13.

Some very basic services and a consistent level of quality at our schools are at risk. Please don't assume that this override will pass easily simply because it's the first in three years, was recommended by the town's selectmen and advisory board, and was approved at the most recent town meeting.

There may be many who think that another $108 per year (on average) is too much money, and/or that we should be keeping our expenses within the state-mandated 2-1/2 percent increase. Unfortunately those people may not be aware of the following results of a failed override:

• At our schools we'll forego the services of another elementary grade teacher, a kindergarten aide and adjustment counselors, busing for junior and senior high and some elementary students. We'll increase the cost to participate in sports and drop some programs altogether. Supplies will be cut. And we won't continue the much-needed updating of technology at Deer Hill.

• And, perhaps closer to home for everyone, we stand to lose the essential services of one police officer and another firefighter. (We're already eliminating three firefighter positions in fiscal 1996 through attrition.) We'll also cut back on library hours, building inspections, street lights, the harbormaster and senior citizen program funding.

For the price of about four yards of loam, we can be assured of the highest quality of life on the South Shore, so it is hard to believe that every citizen of Cohasset wouldn't fully support this 2-1/2 percent override. It's even harder to imagine how we would feel if it didn't pass because you and I assumed too much.

Please vote, and vote "yes."

Prayer should make a comeback

To the Editor:

Re: The National Day of Prayer, May 4,1995

There can be no doubt — America, as a nation, is suffering, and our future is uncertain. The moral decay is apparent to the rest of the world, especially Eastern Block countries that have learned from bitter experience they cannot exist without moral principals and dependence upon God.

Historical records prove that our founders believed in God and in the power of prayer. Our nation was founded on Biblical principles and our freedom was won at great cost. Five of our founding fathers were captured and executed by the British for treason, nine of them died on the battlefields, and another dozen lost everything they had. These men freely gave their lives, fortunes and, in some cases, their families, in order that we might live with the precious freedoms we have allowed to be stripped away.

We are surrounded by reminders of religion's positive influence on our nation, from the national anthem to monuments to currency. In 1951, Supreme Court Justice William 0. Douglas affirmed that "we are a religious people and our institutions presuppose a Supreme being." However, June 25,1962, the Supreme Court shockingly deviated from the inclusion of God in the affairs of this nation and removed prayer from public schools (Engle v. Vitale). Never before in the history of our country had a branch of government taken such a stand; it set the stage for humanism to creep into our courts and laws. Bible reading in schools was removed in 1963, and the posting of the Ten Commandments in schools was outlawed in 1980. The very guidebook upon which our country was established was deemed worthless. As waves of rampant violence, confusion and immorality crash around us, it remains obvious that we are a nation without a rudder.

Fortunately, one freedom is still available to us by law: the annual National Day of Prayer. Originally declared by the Continental Congress in 1775, it has been signed into law by Presidents Truman and Reagan. May 4, 1995, marks the 44th consecutive observance. Only through prayer and repentance can our nation be restored to the land once envisioned by our forefathers. The National Day of Prayer is similar to Thanksgiving or the Fourth of July. It's a national day — and a privilege.

Prayer is part of our national heritage. Would you consider joining millions of humble Americans on their knees to intercede for our nation May 4? It may be our only hope.

Cohasset's beauty not only skin deep

To the Editor:

I am a senior citizen not on fixed income because it seems to be a decreasing income. I hated the thought of higher real estate tax but I love living in Cohasset.

To me Cohasset is the most beautiful town in the world, and it is not just its scenic beauty that I am speaking of.

A few years ago I had a bad accident and was laying on the ground when the EMTs pulled up. You cannot imagine the relief I felt seeing those friendly faces.

A while back Mig was involved in an auto accident in Hanover. Her car had to be towed away. The police from the towns involved gave her rides from town to town until she arrived home with her bundles.

When I was having difficulty getting out of my car Skinny would rush over to empty my barrels at the recycling area.

Our roads are well maintained and are in better condition than other towns after a storm.

Our commons and other common areas are kept in excellent condition.

The people at the town hall and library are always helpful and friendly.

The school system is one of the best, so it is expensive, but it also keeps our real estate values up. However, the most important feature of the schools is that I hope to be around for a lot more years and how well those kids do will have a great effect on how well I do.

So I am voting for the override.

Joe Buckley
28 Linden Dr.

P.S. I am voting for Harold's and Peter's new garage also. It will save money in the long run.

Support the public works garage

To the Editor:

The reasons for needing a D.P.W. garage are simple yet very important. Both the highway and tree and parks' current facilities are extremely inadequate. These buildings are dilapitated and are not cost-efficient to maintain. One building is very close to collapsing.

Another factor for consideration is the fact that we have vehicles and equipment scattered at different locations throughout the town. Consolidation to a single location would significantly improve the level of efficiency for both departments.

However, the most important reason should be being able to house these vehicles and equipment indoors saving money by increasing the life of these vehicles and decreasing the amount of money being spent on maintenance.

The plans for the garage are functional and provide enough space to keep all our equipment together and indoors.

For these reasons I urge that you vote to make this garage a reality.

inconveniences such as possible road closings (Smith Place and Spring St.). Finally, I'll mention that the other characteristics that changed my mind are the noise at the Osgood School and the intrusion on the environment.

I hope that the train concept will be dropped in favor of other modes of transportation, such as expanded commuter boat service with shuttle busses.

Planning board arena becomes Shaw's battleground

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

The big guns came out for last week's planning board hearing on the Shaw's supermarket planned for Cushing Plaza on Route 3A.

Beach St. resident Donald Staszko, who as the developer of the Super Stop & Shop, may have the most to lose if Shaw's is built, appeared at the hearing to ask that the same stringent rules which were applied to his project, be applied to Shaw's plan.

In addition, two members of the five-member planning board indicated serious reservations about the proposal, and town counsel will be asked to rule on whether one of them, Robert Study, should even participate.

Shaw's came even further under the gun when two consultants hired by neighbors appeared with reports and drawings and suggested changes to the plan.

A QUESTION FOR TOWN COUNSEL

The most intense exchange during the hearing came when Martin Healy, Shaw's lawyer, asked Sturdy to excuse himself from the process because he missed the two previous sessions and charged that he has been biased from the start.

Sturdy said he hadn't needed to be at the first hearings.

"I'm an engineer," he snapped. "I don't need you to walk me through it."

Healy countered that Sturdy has made statements opposing the project even before plans were submitted.

Moments earlier, Sturdy had asked Shaw's representatives to to review the proposal submitted by Super Stop & Shop, stating that it had been "literally a mirror" of the Shaw's plan when it was first submitted, but changed to the present form during the review process.

"It (Super Stop & Shop) has certainly been satisfactory to the community," Sturdy said. "We would speed things up . . . look at what happened."

He said the Stop & Shop was originally intended to front Rte. 3A, but was turned to face the side during the review period.

Larry Wagner, Shaw's engineer, stated that they did inspect the Stop & Shop file before any work was done on the Shaw's proposal.

"That material was considered very heavily," he said.

Both Shaw's Healy and planning board chairman Alfred Moore said that they have already discussed turning the building on its side.

"We're past some of those issues," Moore stated, adding that it is tricky to compare two different sites.

At the April 5 hearing, Max Pounder of the design review board said that his committee had spent more than an hour working with engineers, trying to turn the building away from Beechwood St.

"We kept running into wetlands law," he said.

And at an April 18 hearing it held on Shaw's, the conservation commission indicated strongly that they will brook no interference with the wetlands in the area, which is a wildlife habitat leading to Bound Brook.

Planning board member John O'Toole also indicated reservations about Shaw's last week.

"Bigger isn't always best," he said, reminding the audience that he had opposed the size of the Stop & Shop.

"I can be opposed to something," he said, "but I have an open mind."

TRAFFIC SIGNAL SOUGHT

Staszko spoke about the possible impact traffic from Shaw's will have on his businesses on Rte. 3A. To the north of Shaw's there is the Super Stop & Shop, and to the south, near the Scituate line, there is South Shore Chevrolet/Geo, the former Spensely Chevrolet dealership, which Staszko took over in July, 1993.

The Super Stop & Shop is now in the third phase of development, which involves the addition of another store. Staszko has said he wants a major clothing store at the location.

"I have nothing against this project," Staszko claimed. "Competition is good, it brings more people into the community."

However, he feared "gridlock" unless there is a traffic light at the entrance to Shaw's, just south of the light at Beechwood St.

Staszko said that traffic regularly backs up from the Beechwood traffic light as far as Pond St.

He also feared that customers would not be able to turn left from the southbound Rte. 53 lane into the Chevrolet dealership if traffic was clogged on the northbound lane.

There has been considerable agreement that the Shaw's entrance on Rte. 3A must have a light.

Moore said the planning board won't approve a plan without a light.

"We're not going to approve a plan that's not signalized," he stated. "If there is no light, we might insist on a certain police presence at peak hours."

Moore and several other speakers, want Shaw's to ask the Mass. Highway Department, which has jurisdiction over state roads like Rte. 3A, to approve a light.

"It seems as if everyone wants it (light), but no one has asked for it," remarked Moore.

Originally, Shaw's wanted a signal, but the board of appeals special permit stipulates that the entrance not have a light.

Instead, traffic leaving Shaw's would be required to turn right, and proceed south on Rte. 3A. Left, northbound turns, would be restricted to delivery vehicles.

There was been widespread criticism of this provision.

Beechwood St. resident Wayne Shawchuk has also asked that a signal be included.

He presented a written report, including eight points he would like Shaw's to include in its design.

lands area in the center of the Cohasset Plaza, where Stop & Shop is located, will be moved to another area.

Some of the fees were assessed on a per diem basis, since the violations were determined to be continuing.

In addition, commissioners asked Staszko, to deposit a $1,500 fee to pay for consultant's services. Technical consultant Paul Shea will have to monitor the site in the future. The fee must be replenished if the amount falls below $300. This is standard procedure with large projects.

In addition, the commission ruled that Staszko, who is listed as trustee of Cohasset Development Trust, must submit a detailed plan outlining the future sequence of further construction at Cohasset Plaza.

Commissioners also prohibited any further work in the 100-year buffer zone between the development and the existing wetlands.

Although they acknowledged that Staszko stopped work once commission members complained, the officials said they were disappointed that he had not told them in advance what he had planned to do.

Thomas Callahan, a commission member, said that had Staszko explained his plans, he might not be before them that night.

"The orders (from the commission which outline work procedures) have to be followed to the letter."

McMorris said she couldn't understand why Staszko didn't amend his earlier plan, especially considering the hours he has spent in hearings over the past few years.

"Never we were told that this was the intent of the project," she stated. "You basically ignored (the intent of the previous hearings.)"

For his part, Staszko readily admitted that he was in error.

However, he pointed out that he has received permits from the Department of Environment Protection and Army Crops of Engineers to undertake the work.

In January the conservation commission gave him permission to eradicate that wetlands and replicate it near other wetlands at the back of the site. At that time they issued an order of conditions, which spelled out, in considerable detail, what he may or may not do. The order listed 46 separate conditions and included three additional pages of explanation.

Staszko is apparently planning Phase III of the Cohasset Plaza project, which may include the construction of a large retail space. In the past, the developer said he wants to put a major clothing store in the plaza.

Phase I comprised the construction of the Super Stop & Shop, while Phase II included construction of the smaller stores across the parking lot.

Conservation commission members said Staszko should have moved the wetlands first, to ensure the survival of at least some of the species living in it.

Callahan also pointed out that the work couldn't have happened at a worse time, since spring is the breading season and frogs, fish and other animals often lay eggs in wetlands buffer areas.

"Don't shoot me," Staszko said. Several times he said he was unaware that work was not being performed in accordance with the January order.

"Within five or ten minutes (of receiving a complaint) there were people doing everything he (Shea) said (to stop activity)," Staszko stated.

"I apologize for the activity that took place," he said. As an indication of his intentions to work with officials, Staszko pointed out that he can always be reached through his office. For example, Staszko said he recently called Callahan from South America, when he learned the commissioner had been trying to reach him. (Staszko is also an American Airlines pilot and frequently out of town.)

Shea told the board that "This area has been stabilized" and praised the efforts to place hay bales around the edges of the site to prevent construction sediment from draining into wetlands.

The board members conceded that while Staszko responded quickly, punishment remains justified.

"I understand that you've gone through steps to minimize damage from unauthorized work," McMorris stated.

Robin Grinnell, conservation commission member, appeared to sum up feelings of her colleagues when she said that she had visited Stop & Shop before work began and pointed out the "symphony" created by the chirping peepers to her children.

When she returned a week later, Grinnell said the cheerful peppers had been silenced. "I was absolutely devastated to see the devastation on the site. I think its about time we got a little strict."

She said that it sets a bad example to allow wetlands violations to occur with impunity and suggested fines.

McMorris said she agreed, saying that she has receive many calls from residents concerned about the work.

After the meeting, Robert Spirito, the contractor who had been doing the work, said he did not realize that he had broken the rules.

"It's just a misunderstanding," he said. "It's not a flagrant violation. We felt the buffer didn't exist."

Asked to comment on the commission's sanctions, he said, "I think they're fair."

Shaw's battleground . . .

These include a deceleration lane in the southbound side of 3A, to allow vehicles turning into Shaw's to get out of the main traffic flow (the Shaw's on Rte. 53 in Hanover has such a lane.)

He also wants Beechwood St. to be signalized for left turns in all directions and suggested that the sidewalk slated to run along the Beechwood St. side of the plaza, to be moved to the north side of the street to save the trees now growing next to the plaza.

According to Sawchuk, there were 22 accidents in a recent one-year period at the Beechwood St. intersection.

Wagner said he that most but not all of Sawchuk's points could be incorporated in the design.

He said the so-called "Sawchuk tree" at Beechwood St. and 3A a giant oak 24 inches in diameter, could be saved by moving the sidewalk to the north side of the street.

Steve Mitchell, Shaw's traffic consultant, explained that there did not have to be a turn signal for traffic turning south from Beechwood St. onto Rte. 3A because there is sufficient space for ongoing traffic to move around the turning vehicles. The Rte. 3A turns need to be signalized, he said, to allow through traffic to proceed.

CONSULTANTS' REPORTS

In addition, two neighbors hired consultants who presented material to be considered.

Julie Hassan, owner of a business just south of Cushing Plaza on Rte. 3A, hired a hydrologist to review the potential for flooding onto her property.

Dr. Jerome Carr presented a two-page report, which Shaw's engineers said they would respond to in writing.

He feared that the plans do not adequately address the consequences of a severe storm.

In addition, Carr speculated that sediment which drains off the parking lot during construction could wind up in Bound Brook, affecting wildlife. He also said that possible thermal pollution, caused by the introduction into Bound Brook of water which has not had time to cool off, should be looked into.

Joseph Hamilton of Beechwood St., who has also retained Charles Humphries to challenge the ZBA permit, introduced a civil engineer, Robert Hannigan of Quincy.

Hannigan presented two drawings which showed the Shaw's building moved away from Beechwood St.

The configurations showed the truck turnaround area pointing toward Bergson's and not Beechwood St. houses as it now does.

Moore feared that if Shaw's faced Beechwood St., that road would become the major entrance to the site.

Healy repeated his contention that Shaw's is "trying to achieve high noise standards."

Parking request denied

Because it is a commercial venture, selectmen denied the request form Willis Henry Auctions to use the Lightkeepers' parking lot May 19 and 20 for an auction at a house on Border Street.

Managing matters alone

The Social Service League of Cohasset will hold a seminar, "Are You Prepared to Survive Alone Financially?" on Tuesday, May 9, at 1 p.m. at the Lightkeepers Residence, Bancroft Hall, Cohasset Harbor.

The seminar will focus on informing the audience on how to manage financial matters should they be left alone through the death of a spouse, divorce or disability.

Topics will include taxes, health insurance, assets, checkbook knowledge, investments, attorneys, accountants and wills. Members of the panel are: Judge Anna Doherty of Marshfield, Attorney Michele Dorsey of Scituate, Harvey Gates, A.G. Edwards Investments of Hingham and Mary Hartwell, Cohasset Social Service League.

For reservations call the Cohasset SSL at (617) 383-0771. Space is limited.

Alzheimer's group to meet

"Day Care — Respite Care Options" will be the topic at the next meeting of the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore on Wednesday, May 24, at 7:30 p.m. The group will meet at Thaxter Park Community Hall, 30 Thaxter St., Hingham.

Adult day health care involves respite care for both patient and family caregiver. Representatives from Hollingsworth Adult Day Health of Braintree, Salvation Army Adult Day Health, Quincy, New England Sinai Hospital Day Health of Stoughton and Colonial Day Health, Weymouth, will be on hand to answer questions.

Older American Month

This year's theme of Older American Month is "Aging: Generations of Experience." The dedication of this issue is in recognition of the experience, insight, wisdom and humor of older Americans. The Council on Aging hopes to continue to encourage interaction between elders and children. On May 23 students from the Osgood School third grade and their teacher, Diane Barbiere, will have lunch with the town's seniors and create art work following the lunch. For reservations call 383-9112.

This year marks the 30th anniversary of the Older American Act, which set up a new structure for delivering services to elders. Cohasset seniors benefit directly from these programs by participating in educational programs, riding in the medical van or by obtaining assistance from the COA staff.

On Thursday, May 11, the COA will host a talk by Carolyn Kelliher at 1 p.m. entitled, "Your Home, Your Most Valuable Asset." Seating is limited.

On May 19 at 10 a.m. representatives from several area retirement communities will speak at the COA, 3 North Main St. Information about costs, services and benefits will be shared. Admission is free.

Gardeners are needed to share in the COA community garden. The council is hoping to increase the garden to include tomatoes, summer squash, cucumbers, beans and other vegetables. It is hoped that there will be enough produce to share with the local food pantry.

For further information or to sign up for an event, call 383-9112.

The Computer Group of the COA is seeking donations of used computers, printers and computer desks or sturdy tables. Please call 383-9112 to donate items.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

Kevin and Sandy Crough have put a bright spring 'face' on their new home at 362 North Main Street. They have painted the exterior a creamy beige, trimmed the windows in bright white and painted the shutters a lovely teal green. Sandy tells me she worked very hard to rearrange her assortment of spring flowering bulbs. She has created a walkway bordered by riot of spring color — nodding daffodils and grape hyacinth. Her bright turquoise banner picturing bunnies leaping through a garden patch complement the colors of the house and garden. Keep up the good work, Sandy and Kevin!

Community Garden Club

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its annual meeting at the Chart House in Cohasset on Tuesday, May 23. A social hour begins at 11 a.m., followed by brunch and the business meeting at 11:30 a.m. New club officers will be introduced, and the Broad Cove Chorale will present a concert. Tickets are $16. For further information or reservations call Mary Sullivan at 383-1295. Members are encouraged to bring a guest. Babysitting will be available at St. Stephen's church.

Garden Club to hold plant sale

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will host "Not Your Ordinary Plant Sale" on Saturday, May 13, at 9 a.m. at the Lighthouse Keeper's Cottage, Border St., Cohasset Harbor.

A large variety of gardeners' choice plants, including unusual and hard-to-find perennials, small trees, ground covers, herbs, ornamental grasses and houseplants will be on sale.

Hand-crafted items will be featured at the club's boutique table. Proceeds of the day will benefit the club's many civic projects and scholarship fund.

Plant sale at Abbey

A large selection of plants will be on sale on Saturday, May 13, from 9 a.m. to noon on the grounds of Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St. (Rt. 228), Hingham.

Perennials, ground cover, herbs, annuals, fruit and vegetable plants, house plants and bushes will be sold, including both seedlings and mature plants.

The plants are being donated from local private gardens in the Hingham-Cohasset area and many will be divisions of specimens grown in the Abbey gardens.

Proceeds will benefit the Benedictine Monks at Glastonbury Abbey.

Used book sale at library

A used book sale will be held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 106 S. Main St., on Friday and Saturday, May 5 and 6, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. On Sunday, May 7, from 2 to 5 p.m., any books that are left will be given away.

The sale is sponsored by the Friends of the Cohasset Library. Proceeds will benefit the library. Thousands of donated books and library discards will be sold for 50 cents each.

Watercolors on exhibit

Mural restoration

Elizabeth Crosby and Elise Brink have completed the restoration of the McIvor Reddy murals in the library rotunda. The costly restoration was made possible through the generosity of the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank. Ms. Crosby, restoration artist, said, "The murals were rapidly deteriorating and that if they had not been restored at this time, they may have been beyond repair." A special thanks to the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank.

CDROM service offered

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset, has two CDROM services for public use. The products are SIRS RESEARCHER and SIRS GOVERNMENT REPORTER.

The computer workstation and the two CDROM services are on loan for the summer from the Cohasset High School.

Each CDROM can hold nearly 190,000 pages of text.

SIRS (Social Issues Resources Series) RESEARCHER provides full text of thousands of articles selected from over 800 sources from 1988 to the present. These articles relate to the sciences, social issues, global events, historic, economic and political information.

SIRS GOVERNMENT REPORTER gives full text of selected articles from publications of federal government departments, agencies and commissions. It also includes a congressional directory, with information on U.S. Senate and House members and their staffs.

Both files are searchable by key word, or by subject category, or by names of persons or agencies. Summaries of articles or the articles may be read on screen or printed.

Science teacher earns state environmental award

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Since April vacation there's been more spring in James Franey's step than usual.

For 34 years, the Cohasset High science teacher has gone about the job he loves with quiet determination. So earning recognition for doing something that comes naturally is a nice surprise.

"This came right out of the blue," Franey says about the $400 state first-place award he received last month for "Excellence in Environmental Education" for his marine biology course and Gulf River project.

"It's fun to work with kids every day — and I don't aspire to be recognized but it's nice when it happens," the Abington resident says.

Trudy Coxe, secretary of Environmental Affairs and Piedad Robertson, secretary of Education, offered the award as a celebration of the 25th anniversary of Earth Day, April 20.

The marine biology course, and its outgrowth the Gulf River Project, involve lots of hands-on involvement in what Cohasset has an abundance of — wetlands, water and waterways.

The classroom segments focus on fish and frog embryology and plants — and the field work includes a range of activities from monitoring water quality and biological activity to becoming the caretakers of 75,000 seed clams which were donated by the University of Maine. The clams are put in wood-framed screened trays which are floated in the Gulf River to see if the river will support clams.

To Franey, there's no substitute for the great outdoors.

"Kids learn by doing," he says. "You have to get out and do science rather than read or hear about it."

In addition to the Gulf River, students study the environment at Sandy and Rocky beaches and Little Harbor in Cohasset and the North River in Scituate and Norwell.

The marine biology course at Cohasset High actually started as a summer enrichment program 20 years ago.

"We had such a good response and were at the time revising the curriculum, so we decided to try and find ways to work it into the regular science program," Franey recalls.

Now the program works in partnership with the Cohasset water department and board of health and the Gulf River Association, a private group dedicated to protecting the river that flows along Cohasset's border with North Scituate.

Franey says what makes this award even more special was being nominated by a colleague, Florence Ely, a special education teacher, who is a frequent visitor to the biology classes which her students attend.

"That more than anything means a lot," Franey says.

"I'm sure the award was given as much from the quality of the application — as the quality of the project," he adds with a smile.

In her nomination, Ely detailed what the course entails and its effect on students and the community.

"Many of the students develop a new respect for the area in which they live," Ely wrote. "They see the interrelationships of ocean, wetlands and estuaries as a reason for conservation of resources.

"They also develop an appreciation of the fragility and beauty of the ecosystem."

Franey was selected from dozens of nominees and was one of three first-prize recipients. Second- and third-place prizes and honorable mention certificates were also awarded at a ceremony at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel.

Franey says Cohasset has the best natural environment and geography that a marine biology teacher could wish for.

"Six minutes down the road is the beach," he notes. "We see Framingham students there every year and they drive a couple of hours.

"When kids grow up by beaches all their lives, it's nice to have them see things as a scientist would — to look at and see things they never realized were there," he says.

Luckily for Cohasset, Franey who graduated from Boston College's pre-med program, chose teaching.

"I was accepted to med school but said no to six more years. I wanted to get out and do something," he recalls.

Franey credits the administration with ensuring that the marine biology at the high school program flourishes.

"The administration is committed to the program which is fairly expensive. We require buses to go to the beach, for example, and in some schools that would be a real hassle."

The $400 was provided through one of the event sponsors, Veryfine Products, Inc., a fruit juice company.

Franey says the money will be well spent.

"I'll buy some stuff that ordinarily wouldn't be covered by the budget like boots for the kids to use and some chemical test kits," he says.

When he's not teaching, Franey — who is married and has three daughters and a 3-1/2 year-old grandchild — stays active in Abington affairs. He served as a selectman there for nine years and on the advisory committee for six. The day of the interview, Franey was looking forward to attending his town meeting that evening.

Workshop items needed

The following items are needed for the Wheelock Theatre's prop and costume-building workshop on May 11: clothes line, glue (Elmer's or other types), plastic containers from L'Eggs, foam rubber, scissors, old belts, old hats and yellow or orange felt.

There is a bag in the Deer Hill School office marked "Workshop Materials" where donations may be placed.

DHS gala art opening

The Deer Hill School will host a Gala Art Opening, Tuesday, May 9, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. The art show, entitled "Favorites 1995," represents the work of all Deer Hill students. Each child has chosen his or her favorite art work of the year to be included in the exhibit.

Refreshments will be served and there will be music. All are invited to attend. The show will continue through May 24.

In addition to this year's annual art show, Deer Hill will be celebrating the grand unveiling of a permanent clay installation created by DH sixth-grade students.

Thanks to Shawmut Bank

The Shawmut Bank of Cohasset has donated $600 to the Deer Hill School Music Parents Association for the purchase of T-shirts to be worn by the DH band in upcoming local parades.

The DH Music Parents' Association began in September, 1994 and has a membership of more than 75 parents.

New banner for DHS

The Deer Hill Music Parents Association would like to extend their thanks to Linda Bolster of the Deer Hill PSO for her successful efforts in purchasing a banner for the Deer Hill Band to carry in various parades. The school band will participate in the Cohasset Memorial Day Parade and will carry the new blue and white banner as they march.

Book Fair at Deer Hill

Don't miss the spring Book Fair starting Tuesday, May 9, at the Deer Hill School. The book fair is also on during the Art Gala from 7 to 8:30 p.m. that evening.

Drama workshop offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a Saturday morning Drama Workshop, to be taught by Elizabeth and Grace Deveney.

The class will meet from 9 to 10:30 a.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall for six weeks, beginning May 20. The fee is $24 per participant for the entire series of lessons.

The program is ideal for young people who have an interest in theater and the performing arts. At the end of the workshop the children will put on a skit for parents.

To register call the Recreation Department at 383-6791. Non-residents will be accepted on a space-available basis.

Win an autographed baseball

Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset and Buttonwood for Kids in Hingham are offering Matt Christopher fans a chance to win an autographed baseball or boxed set of his baseball books. No purchase is necessary and those interested in entering may do so at either shop. The drawing will take place on May 20.

Crazy Hat Day will be held in both stores on Saturday, May 13. Those wearing crazy hats of their own creation may take 10 percent off any one item. Buttonwood shops will be featuring their own collection of crazy hats for summer. For further information call 383-2665 or 749-2665.

Preschool screening slated

The Massachusetts Special Education Law (Chapter 766) provides for the screening of three- and four-year-old children whose parents feel may have a special need which might interfere with their future educational progress. The screening process includes a parent interview as well as a health, vision, hearing, motor and language screening.

Parents who feel that their child might have such a special need should call: Alicia Shea, Director of Student Services, Cohasset Public Schools, phone 383-6104.

If the child will be entering kindergarten in September, he/she will be undergoing a pre-kindergarten screening, and it will not be necessary for parents to call the Office of Student Services.

Flamethrowers slow softballers' first victory

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

How can you explain to the average person what sort of problems the 0-10 Cohasset High girls softball team has had at the plate this season? Imagine the Skippers having to hit in one of those batting cages against a pitching machine throwing baseballs 90 mph and the opposing squad in the box where the machine is set at slow.

Get the idea? Cohasset head coach Mike Gill knows exactly why the Skippers have been struggling at the plate in the majority of its games.

"They're not a bad hitting team," Gill said in generalizing the potential of his Skippers' squad when it digs into the batter's box. "They're hitting against fast pitching and the opposing team is going against slow pitching. That gives them the advantage right there."

Cohasset hasn't had particular success against those pitchers able to put some gas behind their offerings to home plate. Gill didn't expect a different scenario on Wednesday when the Skippers were scheduled to face Carver and one of the top pitchers in the state, Jen Connolly.

"She's one of the fastest pitchers in the state," he said.

The Skippers have pushed across 16 runs in their past two games. Unfortunately, the squad came up short against Norwell on Tuesday, 19-10, and was bested in a close affair at Provincetown last Thursday, 10-6.

Amy Terrio and Andrea Freeman provided the offense in the Clippers' game as they slammed three and two hits, respectively.

Norwell was also aware of the strong-armed Meghan Fahey who patrols center field for the Skippers. Several runners wisely avoided trying for the extra base when Fahey fielded a ball hit to the outfield. Provincetown obviously hadn't scouted Fahey well enough. She wound up throwing a runner out at home and another at third before the game was over. Kathleen Fitzsimmons played her usual strong game at shortstop, coming up with a number of putouts.

Despite their winless record, Gill believes the Skippers' first victory could come in the not-too-distant future. He's confident his squad should be right in the thick of things against East Bridgewater on Thursday and next week's matchup v.s. Scituate.

"They could go either way," Gill said.

Lax returns in time for laxmen's toughest week

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Ken Ekberg thinks back to the Skippers' first game against Wellesley this season as the game where Cohasset first played its best all-around contes. The Skippers, without the benefit of a preseason scrimmage, started the spring campaign slowly, but busted out with a four-goal win over Wellesley.

"That game was really a turning point for us," said Cohasset's head coach. "We had won a game and lost a game. It was really time for us to come together."

Since that win, Cohasset has played sporadically and currently owns a 5-3 record. The Skippers will be up against a Wellesley team that'll be out for revenge when the two squads meet this Friday afternoon in Cohasset. The Skippers will have to put together a solid, two-way game in order to beat Wellesley. The Redmen should be prepared for Cohasset, given the tough teams they've played over the past two weeks.

"They have obviously gotten better as well," Ekberg said. "We're not in a position to take any team lightly."

Cohasset finally has the all-important John Lax back in the lineup after missing 10 days with rib injuries. Lax will be forced to wear a flack jacket to protect his ribs, but Ekberg believes he is strong enough to make a big impact on the field for the Skippers, particularly as the extra man during power plays.

"During the course of the game that's about 30-percent of the time," Ekberg said.

As tough as Wellesley should be, the Skippers really dive into the heart of their season next week when they face two of the top-10 ranked teams in Eastern Mass. Add Sandwich, a squad that defeated Cohasset on the first go-around and the Skippers have a busy three games in front of them with fifth-ranked Beverly and 10th-ranked Falmouth standing firmly in their way.

"The most difficult part of the schedule is in front of us," Ekberg said. "At times we've played to our potential, but there have been times where we've been doing things a varsity team should overcome."

Summer baseball camp set

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a South Shore Baseball Club Summer Baseball Camp, Monday, June 26 through Friday, June 30.

The half-day program for ages five through 7 will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. The cost is $70.

A full-day program will also be offered for ages seven through 12, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for $120. Registrations are being accepted at the Recreation Office. Call 383-6791 for further information.

Joe Reardon

Dave McKee

by Joe & Dave

Like it or not, lacrosse is here to stay on the South Shore.

Known largely for its dominant high school hockey and soccer teams, this area is fast becoming a lacrosse breeding ground.

To get a better picture, take a look around.

The Hingham High boys' lacrosse team, under the sturdy direction of coach John Todd, has to be considered a favorite to capture the state title.

The 8-1 Harbormen have the state's top scorer in Rich Santoro (21 goals and 18 assists) as well as the state's fourth and fifth leading scorers (Mike Sheridan-20 goals, 16 assists and Tim Brett-30 goals, five assists.)

Last year the Harbormen made it all the way to the state tourney semi-finals before losing to eventual champion Lincoln-Sudbury. Two weeks ago the Harbormen were atop all the '95 lacrosse polls before dropping a loss to Winchester.

However, Todd said the Harbormen learned from the loss and still have a lot of room for improvement.

Hingham High also has a top-notch girls' team. Coached by former HHS graduate and Springfield College Lacrosse All-American Leigh-Ann Taylor, the Harborwomen missed the state tourney by one point last season.

But this year they are on-line for a tourney berth and are led by goalie Jill Sheehan, the daughter of Montreal Canadien Stanley Cup winner Bobby Sheehan. Jill is one of the toughest athletes around as she skated the last four seasons for the Hingham High hockey team.

Taylor knows her stuff and Hingham should be strong for years to come.

Another standout South Shore lacrosse team is the Weymouth High boys'.

The Wildcats are 5-3 on the season and have a great tradition of playing well down the stretch. They have already lost a game to Hingham, but the season is still young.

In addition, two schools are new to the lacrosse scene.

Marshfield High is playing its first varsity season in boys' lacrosse and has fared well under coach Dennis Bostwick.

The Rams jumped out to a quick lead against Hingham in an earlier game before the Harbormen awoke to gain the win.

Another new team is the Norwell High boys' team.

Under coach Jay Williams, the Clippers are playing a club schedule this year but should be on the varsity schedule very soon.

Many other schools are considering starting a lacrosse program and they should be applauded.

For those unfamiliar, lacrosse has great sports appeal.

It has the hitting and high intensity of football and hockey. It also has the running and athleticism of soccer and basketball.

Plus for those who don't like hitting

'Sea biscuit' masters Hull in Cohasset win

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset Skippers (3-7) played two games last week, one an emotional, gritty win, and one a heartbreaking loss. Both contests were decided in extra innings and both exacted excellent performances from the improving varsity squad.

The Skippers' triumph over neighboring rival Hull saw a stellar pitching performance from junior hurler Greg Stevens. Stevens mowed down the final 16 batters in an eight-inning match. Stevens, nicknamed "Sea Biscuit," is hitting the ball at the clip of .235.

The Hull game showed just what head coach Ron Ford's team could do, exhibiting the desire and the skill needed to win ballgames. The Skippers then packed their bags and road-tripped for 1-1/2 hours down to Provincetown to face the Fishermen.

Provincetown, whom Cohasset triumphed over during April vacation, proved to be a tougher match for the Skippers. Cohasset was playing without senior catcher Jonah Berger, first baseman and .269 hitter Kevin McKenna, and versatile eighth-grader Greg Taylor.

With freshman hurler Rob Moody on the hill, the Skippers took a lead in the top of the first when center fielder Grant Emde doubled to left. He was knocked in when shortstop Brendan Kinchla bunted and beat the throw. Kinchla then proceeded to steal second, third, and made a Jackie Robinson-like bid for the plate, but was doubled up when P-Town's catcher snagged a foul pop and threw to third.

Moody set down the side in the bottom half of the first frame, but in the second allowed a three-run dinger to right field. Showing guts and a strong arm, the young pitcher came back strong in the third to escape unscathed.

Cohasset bats weren't done either. The fourth inning saw senior captain Nick Welz launch a triple past the diving left fielder. He scored when Stevens smacked one into left field.

A nice play at second base by Rob Buckley, put the Skippers to within one run. Stevens' flawless tending of the hot corner, and Moody's baffling curve ball retired the side in the fourth. A Skipper-run parade in the fifth and a lone Fishermen tally made the score 6-4, in the visitors' favor.

The rally began when eighth-grade catcher Ben Smoot collected his first varsity hit with a line drive to left field. Smoot, who has subsequently appeared on the DL, due to an injured foot, advanced to second when Rob van der Pool laid down a perfect bunt along the foul line. Van der Pool beat the throw himself and the Skippers had runners on first and second with Kinchla stepping up to the dish. He proceeded to drive a shot into deep left field, easily scoring Smoot and van der Pool. Eric Henry's single drove home Kinchla. Henry kept with the fashion by scoring when Welz sent one into orbit over left field, good enough for a double.

Welz moved from first base to the mound in the fifth after Moody's solid performance. Stevens assumed the first base duties, and freshman Pat Hurley trotted out to third base.

Welz fanned the first batter he faced, got another out when Kinchla forced the runner at second, and struck out the final batter of the inning. P-Town picked up two runs in the bottom of the sixth, tying the score.

Kinchla cranked one deep to center and Henry legged out an infield hit, but Cohasset couldn't capitalize. Warmed up now, Welz sent three straight Fisher-

1995 Bay State Games registration opens

The Massachusetts Amateur Sports Foundation announced that registration for the 1995 Bay State Games has begun.

Registration information can be found at high school and college athletic departments, local libraries, town recreation departments, YMCAs and various sport organizations. Information also is available by calling 617-727-3227. This year marks the introduction of judo into the games, along with the expansion of archery and six-on-six field hockey.

Tryouts and qualifying tournaments start May 28 and run through June 24. The finals will be July 12-16 at five Boston area universities. Opening ceremonies will take place Thursday night, July 13, at Boston City Hall Plaza.

Race to benefit worthy causes

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Runners will be hard-pressed finding a road race where their entry fee goes towards better causes than the Scituate Fire Department * Local 1464 Benefit Road Race & Walk on May 14.

Proceeds from the second annual race will help "Camp Carole" and the "Vasquez Fire Fund." The camp is a non-profit organization which provides recreational activities for children with cancer. Its volunteer counselors are recovering cancer patients themselves.

A portion of the monies raised will also go into the "Vasquez Fire Fund." The fund was formed after three children died when a fire engulfed their Haterly Road home, last week in Scituate.

"We have some real good support," said race director Rich Walden. "Thirty businesses in town are supporting us and there are businesses in other towns supporting us as well.

"We're just trying to help them (Vasquez family) out. Hopefully we can raise them some money."

Walden said early interest in the race has been good. There have already been 160 runners who have pre-registered for the scenic 5K (3.1 mile) event. Walden said he expects a field between 300-500 runners.

Last year's race benefitted retired firefighter Thomas Snow who suffered a back injury and needed to get around on a wheelchair. The race raised $6,000 for Snow.

Walden's preparation for the race begins six month in advance as he works on lining up sponsors and puts out the first advertisements for the Mother's Day event.

Walden said last year's race was a huge success, despite the miserable weather. "It was well-received. We had a ball. It was a lousy day, but hopefully we'll have better conditions this year."

Several firefighters volunteer their services and run in the race. There is an award for the best combined times of three firefighters from the same town. Awards will be given out in seven categories, including the top-three Scituate residents.

The course is "real scenic and challenging," according to Walden and has some cross country mixed in with it. The 5K race begins at 10 A.M. on Bailey's Causeway and follows the streets through Minot to the ocean. The route then goes through the Glades Estate before heading back to the finish line. A portion of the race is run on dirt roads.

Walkers start from the common in Minot Village at 8:30 A.M. The 2.5-mile route will take them north on Glades Road, along the Atlantic Ocean and through the Glades Estate. A 1K race for kids kicks off at 9:15 A.M. Ribbons will be awarded to all who participate.

Donations for the walk and kids race is $5. Pre-registration for the 5K is $10 and $12 on the day of the race.

Applications may be obtained from any Scituate Fire Station or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: SFD Benefit Road Race, c/o Rich Walden, 28 Cherry Lane, Scituate, Ma. 02066.

Cohasset Golf Club to host tourney

Quincy Hospital will hold its Sixth Annual Golf & Tennis Tournament May 22 at the Cohasset Golf Club. The event benefits the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation and is open to anyone wishing to participate.

A day of golf, including greens fees, prizes, cart rental, box lunch and dinner costs $125. Tennis, including court time, prizes, box lunch and dinner, costs $75. You can attend the dinner alone for $50.

Sponsorships for the golf or tennis tournament are available at various levels: Sponsors ($500 or more) will be recognized by a sign at one of the 18 tees/holes or at the tennis courts and receive one free registration for either golf or tennis and dinner, as well as acknowledgment in the tournament program. Associate Sponsors ($250 or more) receive a complimentary dinner and acknowledgment in the tournament program. Friends of Quincy Hospital ($100) are acknowledged in the tournament program.

The Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation provides support for advanced medical technologies and services at Quincy Hospital.

The tournament is chaired by Quincy Hospital physicians Peter Barrett, MD and Peter Ambrus, MD. To play in or support the tournament, call Joan Schwartz at the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation at 617/773-6100, ext. 4016.

men back to the bench on strike outs.

Despite leaving dents in the ball, Buckley just couldn't get one to fall. Neither the Skippers nor the home team could score, and the game headed into extra innings.

With Provincetown runners on first and second in the eighth, Welz battled back and chalked up another strike, but the Fishermen finally prevailed.

Even though his team couldn't post a win, Ford was proud of its effort.

"We were missing three big guns, and the Fishermen were coming off a big win against Nauset, another excellent ball club," Ford said. "But, we played hard, we definitely hit the ball today, got some good pitching from Nick Welz and Rob Moody, and I think you'll start to see our team win more and more of these close games."

baseballs, tennis balls or running laps for the track team, lacrosse offers a chance for many athletes to keep busy in the spring season.

However, many see athletes running around with those funny looking sticks and helmets and think lacrosse will never make it.

People probably laughed at Dr. James Naismith too when he hung up a couple peach baskets during gym class.

Greg Stone of Hanover, a co-captain of Fairfield's hockey team, had an eventful four years for the Stags. The Indians' All-Star was a member of the Fairfield squad which qualified for the postseason Eastern College Athletic Conference Tournament (ECAC) with a 16-12 record during his freshman year.

Stone put together some great individual statistics during his collegiate years on the ice. He was the second leading scorer on the 14-6-1 squad. By this past February Stone was 21st on Fairfield's all-time scoring list with 105 points (55 goals, 50 assists), needing just seven more to crack into the top 20. He also notched a pair of hat tricks during his career.

Stone had 19 goals and 20 assists this season and Fairfield qualified for the the ECAC tourney for the second time in four years with its 18-8-0 record and 11-3-0 in the ECAC South.

It would have been interesting to poll the more than 35,000 people who showed up for Opening Day at Fenway Park, just to get an idea of how many of them originally said they would no longer attend a Red Sox game. It goes to show the fans, in these parts anyway, are willing to forgive and forget. However, it wasn't the same around the country as several teams set records for their smallest Opening Day attendance in years.

Much of the hoopla surrounding the Boston fans welcoming the team back lies squarely in the lap of the flamboyant Jose Canseco. One of the most flamboyant and likeable players in the game today, Canseco has become an instant media darling and a huge hit with the fans. His self-deprecating manner and sense of humor brings the larger-than-life personality to a level fans appreciate and can relate to. Lets hope he signs an extension to his one-year contract and stays with the Red Sox organization for several years to come.

Will the real Celtics please stand up. What can you make of this team? After a truly ripe performance in Friday night's massacre in Orlando the Green did a complete about-face in Game 2 to whip Shaq, Penny and the rest of the boys on the Magics' home court. Suddenly, in a city toasting "Jose Mania" people are beginning to notice the Celtics. With absolutely no pressure on them and a ton on the Magic, Boston could make this an interesting series, win or lose.

New technology at Noble's

Noble's Camera Shops has announced the purchase of new state-of-the-art electronic imaging and computer technology to better meet customer photography and video needs. Noble's has stores in Hingham, Norwell and Cohasset, with an electronic imaging and microfilm division based at its Hingham headquarters.

The purchase of a digital copyprint station allows Noble's to utilize the latest technology in reproducing photographs from existing prints, negatives and slides. The DCS delivers an image very close to original quality with a faster turnaround. The company also offers a complete photo restoration service.

Other technology purchases will enable Noble's to create high-quality, low-cost still videos.

Mercurio promoted at B.U.

Joseph P. Mercurio of Cohasset has been named executive vice president at Boston University, where he has served as senior vice president since 1987.

He first joined the administrative staff of BU in 1973 as associate budget director. In 1982 he was named associate vice president of business affairs and in 1984 became vice president for business affairs.

As executive vice president Mercurio will have responsibility for all non-academic programs of the university.

New manager is named

Buttonwood for Kids in Hingham has announced the appointment of its new manager, Marcia Babcock of Norwell. A North Carolina native, she received her BA in English from Wake Forest University and has taught high school English and worked as a computer programmer.

Babcock has been with Buttonwood since its inception, and has been the Cohasset shop's much-loved "Story Lady" for the past four years. A children's book specialist, she created Buttonwood's Teacher Enrichment Boxes.

She also sings with the Broad Cove Chorale and the First Parish Church, Norwell and volunteers for the Talking Information Center in Marshfield.

ASP yard sale is May 13

The Appalachia Service Project will hold a Yard Sale on Saturday, May 13, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church on Cohasset Common.

Proceeds will benefit the group's annual home repair mission in Virginia and Kentucky. Item donations are welcome. Call 383-9325 to arrange for pick-ups.

Band members needed

Rev. Ed Atkinson of the First Parish Church in Cohasset is organizing a marching band for this year's Harborfest parade. He is seeking persons of any age who may have played in a high school or college marching band and who would enjoy bringing their old instrument down for the attic to play one or two old familiar tunes.

Minimal musical talent is needed, and with a few rehearsals the band should be ready to march. Khaki pants and white shirts will be the uniform. Anyone interested in participating may call Rev. Atkinson at his office, 383-1100 or at home (383-1105).

Country line dancing featured

On Thursday, May 4, host Wigmore Pierson's guests on "Pierson to Person," shown on local cable television channel 53 at 8 p.m., will be the Downeast & Company 16-member country line dance team, performing six dances, including the two-step, waltz and the swing. Country line dance expert Paul Coffey of Hingham will narrate.

The second segment will feature Hingham criminal defense attorney Loretta McCabe discussing the criminal justice system and certain aspects of the O.J. Simpson trial.

"Pierson to Person" is broadcast live each week from Continental Cablevision's Gannett Road, North Scituate, studio. The public is invited to be part of the studio audience. Those planning to attend should arrive at the studio by 7:30 p.m.

For further information call the show's executive producer, Robert Belliveau, at 545-2500.

Kentucky Derby party

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club will celebrate the 121st Run for the Roses with its annual Kentucky Derby Party, to be held at a Scituate member's home on May 6 from 4 to 6 p.m.

Members and guests are asked to bring a favorite hors d'oeuvres. Beverages will be provided. The cost is $10 per couple, and proceeds will benefit the Make a Wish Foundation.

All new residents of Scituate or Cohasset or residents interested in meeting individuals with shared interests are invited to join the club. For further information call 545-0830 or write the club at P.O. Box 623, Cohasset 02025.

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate Dog Training Classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Tuesday evenings on Cohasset Common, beginning May 9.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. with intermediate-advanced classes held from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. The fee is $46 for the 8-week program.

Checks should be made payable to the Town of Cohasset and may be brought to the first class. Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months old. For further information or to register call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Pops concert is May 11

The annual Pops Concert will take place in the high school cafeteria on Thursday, May 11, at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited to enjoy the evening of vocal and instrumental music.

Refreshments are included in the $5 admission price. All profits from the event will benefit arts at the high school. Tickets will be sold at the door.

ASP will wash your car

The Appalachia Service Project will hold car washes on May 6, 13 and 20 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Leo's Exxon Station, Rt. 3A and Beechwood St. Proceeds will help support the group's annual home repair projects in Kentucky and Virginia.

Community Center news

The South Shore Community Center has planned several activities for spring.

On Thursday, May 11 (early release day), a Kite Day will be held at Deer Hill School from 1 to 3 p.m. for children in kindergarten through grade 6. Kites of Boston will visit the school and students will build their own Frustrationless Flyer kite. The cost is $15. Preregistration at the SSCC by May 4 is required.

"Free Play" will be held on Friday, May 12, from 10:30 a.m. to noon for children ages 14 months to three years. Children will be invited to explore the center's tot-size equipment. Admission is $5 ($1 for second sibling).

A Co-ed Babysitting Class will be held on four Tuesdays, beginning May 16, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. The cost is $30 for members, $40 for nonmembers.

Gymnastics Session IV will take place for five weeks on May 10, 11, 12, 15 and 16. The cost is $32.50. Call the SSCC for class ages and time.

Coupon Clippers will meet on Saturday, May 6 and 13, from 10 to 11:30 a.m. ($15/members, $18 nonmembers). Participants will learn how to save up to 50 percent on their weekly food budget.

A Gift Basket class will be held on Saturday, May 6, from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and on Tuesday, May 9, from 7 to 10 p.m.

For further information or to register for a class call 383-0088.

50 percent election turnout expected

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Railroad pundits will be watching Cohasset closely Saturday to see if two questions on the train win majority support among the registered voters who go to the polls.

But in addition to two questions on the train — one asking if voters favor restoration of the Greenbush line and a second asking if they'd use it for commuting — are two questions asking voters to override the Prop. 2-1/2 tax cap.

A general override of $358,000 is needed to balance the $14.6 million town budget approved at town meeting and will add about $108 (or 45 cents per $1,000 of valuation) to a typical Cohasset home assessed at $242,000. If passed, this would be a permanent tax increase.

Town boards seek to avoid clash over Shaw's proposal

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Planning board and some conservation commission members have informally agreed to try to work out their differences over the parking requirements for a Shaw's supermarket proposed for Cushing Plaza.

"I don't think either board wants to be obstructionist," Alfred Moore, planning board chairman, said last week during their third hearing on the Shaw's plan.

"We could be at loggerheads (over parking)" replied Thomas Callahan, who, along with Jeffrey Waal, had stopped by the hearing after that group's meeting finished Wednesday night. Both Callahan and Waal are on the conservation commission.

Shaw's plans 75,225 feet of retail space in three separate buildings. Under Cohasset regulations, that space would require 644 parking spaces.

VE Day brings memories of triumph and tragedy

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

As the bells toll across Europe in celebration of VE Day, one decorated Cohasset veteran looks back with pride and sorrow on the victory he helped make possible.

Fifty-years ago this week, Austin "Bud" Ahearn, Jr., 75, was sitting in a field near Germany's Elbe River drinking vodka with Russian soldiers.

"They were happy to see us and we were happy to see them. They broke open the vodka and we helped them drink it," the former Sgt. Ahearn recalled during an interview in the garden of his Clay Spring Road home.

Ahearn said that although none of his buddies in the 83rd Division of General Dwight Eisenhower's 9th Army spoke Russian and the Soviets did not speak English, they made themselves understood in the euphoria of having finally beaten the Nazis.

"Everybody was shouting at each other," Ahearn said.

The Yankees were fascinated to see the out-of-date equipment the enormous Soviet army had been fighting with.

"They had horse-drawn artillery," he said. "The men walked behind. They had World War I planes and wore leather helmets and goggles like Lindy (1920's aviation hero Charles Lindbergh)."

In addition, Ahearn remembers seeing the legendary Cossacks, who rode out of the steppes to face Hitler just as their forebears had ridden against the Kaiser and Napoleon.

For their part, the Russians appeared to look on the Americans as exotics, because, as Ahearn pointed out, "of course over there they think everybody in the US is

Absentee ballots ready

Absentee ballots are now available for the May 13 special election. Voters may apply for an absentee ballot if they are going to be out of town, have a physical disability, or cannot vote on Saturday May 13 due to their religious beliefs. Applications may be picked up during regular office hours at the town clerk's office until noon May 12. Voters may also apply for an absentee ballot by mail; please include name as registered, address, precinct, mailing address and signature. For information, please call the town clerk at 383-9900. Please note the town clerk's office will close at noon, Friday May 12 in preparation for the election.

Permit deadline is May 31

Recycling transfer facility permits will be sold on weekends at the Cedar Street RTF through May 31. No cash will be accepted as payment for the $65 fee. Checks must be made out to the Town of Cohasset.

Cohasset residents qualify for two permits per household for $65 by providing at the same time both motor vehicle registrations with the same Cohasset address. An additional $25 will be charged if information on the second vehicle is provided at another time.

The limit is two permits per household and the RTF permit fee for a single-person household is $33. To qualify as such, the applicant must sign an affadavit that he or she lives alone. There is no senior citizen discount.

For further information call 383-9900, ext. 121.

Water restrictions in effect

Effective May 1, all Cohasset water department customers are asked to follow an odd/even watering schedule. Those living in even-numbered houses are able to water on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Residents in odd-numbered houses may water on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday. There will be no watering on Mondays.

Summer water restrictions still remain in effect because all distribution improvements have not been completed, water department officials said.

Legislative breakfast slated

The South Shore Coalition will host a Legislative Breakfast on Friday, May 19, from 8 to 9:30 a.m. in the Osborne Room of Norwell Town Hall. The public is invited to join the Coalition in this opportunity to meet with South Shore legislators.

Topics to be discussed include local transportation vs. the Central Artery and strengthening local officials' lobbying clout.

The SSC members are selectmen and planning officials from Cohasset, Duxbury, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth who advocate for a range of regional policy and planning issues of mutual concern.

Founded in 1985, the SSC has organized hearings and workshops on groundwater protection, growth management, the Boston Harbor clean-up, housing, wetlands protection and solid waste management.

Bottled water to be sold

Selectmen said they will allow Brad Martinson, whose company name is Brad's Ice Cream, to sell bottled water along with novelty ice cream at Sandy Beach this summer.

Martinson is the third local businessman to obtain a transient vendor's license for Sandy Beach. Selectmen have already issued licenses to two vendors who will sell food and soft drinks.

The board has a policy not to allow ice cream vendors to sell soft drinks at Sandy Beach because it hurts business for the food vendors. But Monday, Selectman Michael Sullivan convinced this fellow board members that it was unfair to families with children to have to stand in line twice to buy a drink and so they decided to allow Martinson to sell bottled water.

The town restricts the number of transient vendors at the beach and Government Island and it explicitly states what each vendor can sell on the license. Martinson, who has two trucks, can sell soft drinks in the neighborhoods but not at the beach.

Use of field okay'ed

The Cohasset Police Association has permission to use Milliken Field June 3 for its fund-raiser, a softball game with the Boston Patriots.

Legal bill approved

Selectmen approved payment of $4,180.50 to Town Counsel Richard Henderson this week for professional services rendered the town in April.

Some boards reorganize

The planning board has elected Alfred S. Moore as chairman, William J. Good as vice chairman, and Jean Simonds as clerk. Richard P. Barrow was elected chairman of the recreation commission, Stephen C. Endris will serve as vice chairman, and James E. Carroll, Jr. is secretary of that board.

Selectmen Chairman Merle S. Brown said he hoped to see the chairman rotate they way they do on the board of selectmen.

"I don't believe in term limits for volunteer outfits, but I would like to see rotation of chairs more often," Brown said.

Ambulance billing update

The town collected $4,962.48 in ambulance fees last month, according to the fire department. So far in FY95, which ends June 30, the town has collected $76,342 out of a possible $84,887.29 — a collection rate of about 90 percent.

Dogs must be licensed

The deadline for licensing dogs in Cohasset is May 1. A $25 fine is due after that date. Town Clerk office hours are Monday through Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

If unable to go to the Town Clerk's office, a check for $8 (neutered and spayed animals) or $15 (male and female animals) may be mailed to: Town Clerk, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025 along with a note listing type of animal, owner's name, address and telephone number, breed, color, dog's name and a copy of the dog's rabies certificate.

Contamination removal set

Removal of transformers, tanks and contaminated soil in Hingham, Cohasset and Hull will be accomplished under the terms of an $18,025 contract recently awarded by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The remedial action, which will be performed by Franklin Environmental Services, Inc. of Wrentham, is expected to begin this month and take less than a month to complete.

The contract calls for the removal of one 5,000 gallon underground storage tank and its contents at the former Naval Ammunition Depot in Hingham.

At the former Naval Ammunition Depot Annex in Hingham and Cohasset, 12 transformers are slated for removal and disposal. One 500-gallon underground storage tank and its contents will be removed from the former Fort Revere in Hull and taken off site for disposal.

The remediation of the sites is being accomplished under the authority of the Defense Environmental Restoration Program. All construction activities will be performed under the supervision of a Corps of Engineers' management and inspection team to assure compliance with contract requirements.

Overrides, train are topics

On Thursday, May 11, from 9 to 10 p.m., host Wigmore Pierson's guests on "Pierson to Person," shown live on local cable Channel 3 only in Cohasset this evening, will discuss the issues surrounding both the override vote for town schools and services and two non-binding votes on the restoration of the train through Cohasset to the Greenbush section of Scituate.

Town leaders discussing these issues will be Merle Brown, chairman of the board of selectmen, Ralph Kidder, chairman of the school committee, and Nan Roth, chairman of the advisory committee.

Joining Pierson to pose the questions will be Mary Ford, editor of the Cohasset Mariner, and Molly Hochkeppel, Cohasset reporter for the Patriot Ledger. For further information about the "Pierson to Person" show call 545-2500.

Election returns will be aired live on May 13 from town hall beginning at 6 p.m. with Wigmore Pierson.

Ledgewood Estates expansion planned. . .

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Ledgewood Drive residents will soon be getting new neighbors and most of them appear to be pleased, although many have questions about their water pressure.

"I like the subdivision very much," said John Durkin, president of the Ledgewood Homeowners' Association. "I think it's going to clean the place up."

"The development is a good project. We'd like to see this come in," said resident Chip Steimle, who was one of about 20 people packing a planning board hearing two weeks ago on the plans.

The single family houses will cost at least $270,000 and several residents called that preferable to the low-income housing project, Crystal Woods, which had been proposed several years ago and was bitterly opposed by many Cohasset and Scituate residents.

A Scituate study determining that there were water pressure problems was one reason the high-density Crystal Woods was scrapped.

Engineer Neil Murphy explained that the plans for Ledgewood Estates were approved in 1961, when most of the development was built.

Property owners Walter Winchester and his son Mark have the right to proceed under those plans. However, Murphy said they were appearing at the planning board to amend the original proposal.

Four more houses are planned in addition to the original eight and Ledgewood Drive will end in a cul de sac, and not connect to Scituate's Gannett Pasture Lane as intended.

In addition, the Scituate planning board has already given the green light to the construction of three additional houses off Gannett Pasture Lane in Scituate.

There appeared to be widespread approval for ending Ledgewood Drive in a cul de sac, as most residents said that would limit traffic.

Murphy said a footpath would connect the two roads, so residents could walk into North Scituate Village. This also pleased many residents.

Most questions concerned poor water pressure and several speakers closely questioned Murphy over the effect of connecting Cohasset water pipes with Scituate's, a plan which has yet to be approved.

Murphy suggested that residents could improve their water pressure by installing pressure storage tanks, which cost under $1,000.

However, Dick Stevens maintained that the tanks dampen property values and suggested that it is the water flow, not its pressure, which is the problem.

Planning board chairman Alfred Moore assured residents that no development can proceed until the fire department determines that there is adequate water pressure to fight fires.

He stated that 2/3 of Cohasset lacks enough water pressure to fight fires at various times during the summer.

Murphy agreed that water is a perennial Cohasset issue.

"You're all complaining about a very real problem," he told residents.

Other neighbors were bothered by various aspects of the plan.

For instance Michaela Steimle wondered if a driveway running to two of the new houses could be moved away from the lot line of their house.

Murphy said the Winchesters would gladly discuss such particular concerns, which must be presented to, but do not have to be approved by the planning board.

The Winchesters' lawyer, Walter Sullivan, said, "They are trying to present something to you in a way that you will have impact. The Winchesters wouldn't want to miss this opportunity to hear what their neighbors are thinking."

Both the Winchesters were at the meeting.

Durkin also suggested that some areas of the subdivision, in particular the entrance, could be spruced up. Murphy nodded and appeared to agree.

Several other people pointed out that the rock ledge which gives the area its name is a prominent feature of the land and questioned the impact that blasting could have on their homes.

Planning board member Robert Sturdy said that blasting is done very carefully by skilled workers. He said that 15 years ago he had some blasting done on his property with no affect on his house at all.

He assured the group that incidents like the recent case on Jerusalem Road, in which blasting sent rocks flying through the air to land on a nearby house, are relatively rare.

The residents did not appear comforted by this information.

The planning board hearing was set to have continued this week.

No more burning allowed

The 1995 Open Burning Season in Cohasset, ended April 30., the fire department said.

First tel-a-thon is slated

The South Shore Community Center will conduct its first annual Tel-A-Thon on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 16 to 18. The fundraising effort will assist the center's capital improvements projects.

The SSCC seeks the support of the community in supporting its children's and adult programs, the nursery school, Gymnastics in Motion and special events hosted by the center.

50 percent election turnout expected

A debt exclusion is also needed to allow the town to borrow to pay for a proposed $752,000 public works garage to be built at the town Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF). Under Prop. 2-1/2 rules, this ballot question will not include the dollar amount because the dollar figure cannot report the full cost of the principal plus interest charges. If voters approve borrowing for the garage, the owners of a typical home will see about a $27 increase in property taxes and that figure would gradually decline thereafter until the debt is paid off.

The polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. Continental Cablevision will provide live coverage of the results with local talk show/news host Wigmore Pierson starting at 6 p.m. on Channel 3.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas, noting that the railroad should be a big draw Saturday, said a "turnout of 50 percent would be wonderful."

Applications for absentee ballots — which can be a gauge of voter interest in an election — have been running at a brisk pace.

"It's been crazy," said Douglas, noting that 116 had applied by 9 a.m. Wednesday. But she is quick to add that "Cohasset voters like to vote absentee."

At last fall's special town meeting, a non-binding resolution asking selectmen to do everything in their power to stop the train was advanced by a vote of 341 to 314. Selectmen decided last month to add the two train questions to the special election ballot to get a better idea of how the town stands on Greenbush. A 50 percent turnout would draw about 2,500 voters to the polls.There are 4,904 registered voters in Cohasset, Douglas said.

Last time the town voted on Greenbush was in 1991. At that time 1,324 favored and 754 voted against the railroad project. A second question on Greenbush failed by about 400 votes when it included wording asking if the voter would support the project "if such restoration required a significant portion of its total costs be paid by local taxpayers."

In the 1985 referendum on Greenbush, 1,192 Cohasseters favored restoration and 266 voted against it. When asked if they'd use the train, 1,053 said yes and 349 said no. At that time voters by a voted of 834 to 552 said they favor Greenbush even if the town had to subsidize its operating costs.

VOTE SATURDAY

Polls are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Town Hall Auditorium

DO YOU THINK DRIVING TO BOSTON IS GOING TO GET BETTER ??

Don't be fooled that there are any new alternatives:

It's CARS, AIR POLLUTION AND GRIDLOCK OR

MODERN, SAFE TRAINS that

- will improve air quality on the South Shore.
- will revitalize our economy.
- we will pay for whether WE get train service or it goes somewhere else.

WE URGE YOU TO VOTE "YES" FOR THE TRAINS on Sat., May 13, 8 A.M. to 6 P.M. ! !

The work of South Shore Art Center artist Claffy Williams is featured at the Landmark Building, 160 Federal St., Boston, through the month of June.

Her work is well-known in the region for capturing the abstract essence of the natural world. Collected by many private and public collectors, Claffy will be giving a demonstration at the public preview of the Two Collection at Studio A at WGBH May 14.

Claffy is a Cohasset resident, a gallery artist at the South Shore Art Center and exhibits there on a regular basis. To become a gallery artist, her work was reviewed by a panel of judges and artists who then accept member artists.

Hats off to Tracey Lahey, who was the gal behind the scenes at Hair Imports benefit cut-a-thon held April 24. The stylists worked on 15 customers between 5 and 8 p.m. and donated their time, offering haircuts at $20 apiece. They raised $400 for the Vazquez family (the family recently victimized in the fire in which the lives of three children were lost). What a great idea, and a nice thing to do; they are certainly a family that needs all the help that we can give. You and your co-workers should be proud of yourselves, Tracey!

Sr. Anne Monica, principal of Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, is pleased to announce the honor roll for the third marking period of the 1994-1995 school year. The Cohasset residents that made the grade were: Principal's List, Julie Catalano and Danielle Nohe; Second Honors, Jennifer Cellucci and Julie Smith.

Congratulations go to all of you for your efforts!

One of Cohasset's own was honored for service at Boston University recently. Antonio Mercurio was among the nearly 270 Boston University employees honored April 24 at the annual Service Recognition Dinner held at the University's George Sherman Union ballroom.

Mr. Mercurio, a project manager at the physical plant, received a silver Paul Revere bowl for his 10 years of service.

Here's hoping that Pam DeLorenzo is feeling much better as she reads this. Pam underwent surgery last week, and is recuperating at home — we understand that her husband, Jack, is doing a great job as "nurse" — another admirable trait to add to his list of specialities!

Get well soon!

Lots of you remember Phyllis Shultz, the former hygienist for Dr. Ed Seadale. Well, her daughter Laurie was married last weekend — naturally Phyllis and hubby Don were on hand for the occasion, they were happy to be back in the area.

As most of you know, they now make their home in Florida, they love it there !

We hear rave reviews about the Broad Cove Chorale this week, their reunion concert, held last Saturday, was a wonderful success.

Returning Cohasset members were Sarah deLima, Joni Jensen and Lisa Koed.

Current Cohasset chorale members were Diana Rousseau, Susan Cameron, Jane Forrer, Jo-An Kilgore (current member of Unicorn Singers), Paula Cuneo, Betts Murray, Anny Newman and Mary Ann Cushing.

It's nice to know that all of those rehearsals paid off; right, ladies? Congrats on your successful weekend.

The Appalachia Service Project will hold a yard sale Saturday, May 13, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset. The proceeds will benefit the group's annual trip to Virginia and Kentucky, where they will repair homes for needy families.

If you have anything to donate to this worthy sale, call 383-9325 (they will even pick up the items for you). Be sure to check it out, right after you vote!

After you do that, be sure to head to the Lightkeeper's Cottage for "Not Your Ordinary Plant Sale" that will be held by the Community Garden Club of Cohasset. Even if you aren't a gardener, you should go, there will be a boutique table featuring hand-crafted items. If you are a gardener, you will be in heaven, there will be many unusual and hard-to-find plants, trees, grasses, etc. Have fun!

Now that I have helped you plan your weekend days, won't you call and let me know what you did during the evenings? Or what you did during the week? Your news is our news!

Don't forget to vote!

Transplanted Cohasseter opens recording studio

Cohasset native Roger P. Stauss has found his groove in Vermont — a record groove that is. With nearly 20 years of audio recording and sound design under his belt, Stauss has opened Noteworthy Studios, Inc., a 40-track fully digital recording facility.

Stauss, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack B. Stauss of 60 Nichols Rd., may have sound engineering in his blood. His uncle, the late Frank Massa of Cohasset, was instrumental in the development of the sonar transducer, an acoustic device which is credited with helping the allied forces win World War II.

After graduating from Cohasset High School in 1970, Stauss received his degree in communications from the University of Hartford. He served as the audio director for Connecticut Public Television for several years before moving to New York City where he worked on a variety of shows including "Sesame Street," "Kate and Allie" and the "Cosby Show."

In 1989, he and his wife moved to a 260-acre farm just south of the Sugarbush resort area. Two children, several chickens and a small herd of Hereford cows later, the couple has turned half of their 19th century farmhouse into a 21st century recording studio.

In the past year Stauss has recorded four CD's at Noteworthy, including three on his company's own labels: The Record Company of Vermont and Shire-town Records. Noteworthy is attracting local as well as regional clients and Stauss is currently working on a CD with the Boston blues band, Walk That Walk.

For more information about Noteworthy Studios, call 1-800-214-4601.

Cohasset native Roger P. Strauss, a 1970 CHS grad, relaxes in his Vermont recording studio, Noteworthy Studios, Inc.

editorial

Hi, Mom

It's the oldest cliché in show business. An actor or singer or famous athlete about to receive an award for some remarkable performance looks out over the crowd, into the cameras, smiles at the 30,000 people watching him and begins his speech with "Hi, Mom."

And everyone watching the ceremony nods and smiles, because all of us know that at some point in that famous actor or singer or player's life there was only one person who thought there was anything at all remarkable about him, and that person was his mom.

She's your biggest fan. It doesn't matter who you are or what you do. You could be ugly, uncouth, uncoordinated or aesthetically impaired — and your mother would still believe you were the most beautiful, the most talented, and the most amazing person in the world.

You could have wild and improbable ideas, frivolous hobbies, or bizarre tastes. Your mother wouldn't care. Your mother would sell everything she had and give up every waking hour of her day to promote your ideas, support your hobbies, and indulge your tastes, and would shout down anyone who suggested she do otherwise.

She might slip in a little motherly advice from time to time — something experienced children often refer to as nagging — but she'll remain your friend and counselor whether you accept her advice or not.

No food in the world ever tastes as good as the food your mother makes, because no one else puts as much of her love for you into every knead and cut and roll and tuck as your mother does.

No barometer is better at telling how warm or cold it is outside than your mother, because your mother can tell whether or not you need to wear a jacket from 700 miles away.

And when you do succeed, and something in your life does happen that attracts the attention of 30,000 people — or even 30 — the only face in the crowd that really matters is your mother's.

It isn't because she gave birth to you (if she gave birth to you) or because she cooked for you or cleaned up your messes or ran the bullies out of your yard or took you to the hospital or sewed costumes for your play or took your team out for pizza or made you fill out those college applications or helped you move into your apartment though it killed her inside to see you go.

It's because she believed in you when no one else did and she loves you like no one does.

And although you can never repay her, it's nice to have the chance, once a year, to say thanks.

Hi, Mom. I love you.

Dog Etiquette

World's End provides us with a little bit of heaven. But this peace is being increasingly invaded by dogs who are misbehaving.

While World's End, a property of the Trustees of Reservations, a state-wide non-profit land conservation trust, provides the public with a place to enjoy a pristine nature preserve — it's not a place to turn your dog loose.

All being dog owners here at the Cohasset Mariner, we are not anti-dog and understand our canine friends are doing what comes naturally at World's End. They're chasing wildlife, frightening birds, and relieving themselves in paths, roadways, lawns and parking lots. They're also getting into altercations with other dogs and scaring children who are enjoying the reservation with their families.

Unfortunately, the situation has reached the crisis stage and the Trustees are considering an all-out dog ban at the reservation if current regulations don't curb the problem. Now at World's End, dogs must be leashed at all times and owners are asked to pick up after their animals.

Some dog owners have complained, prompting Thomas S. Foster, southeast regional supervisor for the Trustees, to draft a three-page letter explaining in detail to concerned individuals that the dog regulations were not hastily conceived measures but a response to a serious problem.

Mr. Foster even offers an alternative and suggests people run their dogs at Whitney & Thayer Woods, an 800-acre Trustees' property in Hingham & Cohasset where dogs can exercise unleased as long as they are under control of their owners.

We applaud the Trustees for taking steps to make sure that dogs don't disturb human, animal or plant life at World's End.

Now it's time for owners to be less selfish with their animals and make sure that their pets don't invade anyone else's space.

Thank you to Little League supporters

To the Editor:

The board of directors and I would like to thank everyone who attended the April 29 Little League ceremonies. The support for our programs is very gratifying. I would also like to take this opportunity to once again thank the following businesses, individuals and organizations for their support and generous donations: Ray Hanian, South Shore Sand and Gravel, Carpenters Union Local 40, David Mello, Bob Gledhill, Hingham Lumber, Frank Evans Company, Jim Magner, George Haley, Little Harbor Electric, R.G. MacKean Rug, Barry Waste Services, Hancock Paint, the Palone Family, the Tree and Park Department, Steve Wigmore, Larry Schultz, Mr. Biagini and the Deerhill School Band.

I would also like to thank Bob Fiori of Leo Fiori's Exxon for donating the flags and the red, white and blue buntings which covered the outfield fences. They were a great addition and really added to our hometown tradition. I hope everyone was as impressed by them as I was.

I especially would like to thank our state representative Mary Jeanette Murray for attending. It would not be opening day without Mary Jeanette throwing out the first pitch. For those who were unable to see, our state representative threw a perfect strike to Rangers' catcher Mickey Palone.

I look forward to seeing everyone at the games. The youth of our town need our support. These are their glory days, so let's get out and support them. Remember to bring a few extra dollars with you to enjoy our newly expanded snack bar.

Again, thank you for your support. I hope your children have an enjoyable year.

Earth Day editorial in poor taste

To the Editor:

I believe the editorial in the April 20th edition of the Cohasset Mariner to be in very poor taste.

This is not the time to make fun of Earth Day in such a silly way as it was done.

It just shows how cynical people have become to treat a subject with such triviality — an event which celebrates and gives hope for helping maintain the environmental gains which have been made in the past 25 years.

Sell off some Hagerty property

To the Editor:

Instead of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen and the Cohasset Advisory Committee "reluctantly lamenting" all of their recommended cuts if the $358,000 Prop 2-1/2 override May 13 is rejected by the voters, why don't they 'enthusiastically recommend' to Veneta Roebuck and her Hagerty Property Committee that they sell-off some of the former Cohasset Colonial property. This would certainly add money back into the town coffers.

Wasn't this the original intent when our taxes were raised to purchase this property how many years ago?

The Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee should realize that not every citizen and taxpayer in Cohasset owns a boat and cares about the Hagerty Committee and their wondrous plans for the future. Most citizens and taxpayers do care about adequate police and fire protection, teachers and all our classes, buses for all our students, and the basic necessities of everyday life to live in this town.

This constant budgetary whining by the selectmen has become tiresome when large amounts of money are 'tied up' in this Hagerty fiasco. Sell it and get on with the things we need in Cohasset — not the things a certain few want.

Schools Supt. Hart sets the record straight

To the Editor:

I feel compelled to respond to the misleading statements made by Mr. F. Roy Fitzsimmons in his letter to The Mariner published May 4, 1995. Mr. Fitzsimmons has not taken to heart the sound advice that we should learn from the past. Rather, he continues to submit letters that are reminiscent of the letter he wrote to The Mariner immediately preceding our last override vote. That letter made similar allegations about overspending on administration in the school system. The words that The Mariner editor wrote responding to this allegation deserve repetition at this time, "But in fairness to everyone, we should all be careful that we make that extra phone call to determine if the conclusions we have drawn are the correct ones."

Didn't Mr. Fitzsimmons have the same obligation to check his facts before writing his most recent letter? If Mr. Fitzsimmons had taken the time to check his facts he would have found that the school department does not spend $700,000 on administration as he alleges. He would have found, for instance, that accounts 1100, 1200, 1220, 2100 and 2200 contain, in part, the following items: professional development funds for teacher training; clerical salaries, labor negotiation fees, supplies and materials; advertising costs; a salary reserve account to fund non-union salary increases for bus drivers, clerical and instructional aides, postage, bookkeeper's salary, building level expenses including Xerox costs, work processing expenses, student supplies and graduation expenses. Had Mr. Fitzsimmons made the effort to research his allegations he would have also found that, contrary to his assertion that the town is mortgaging its future on pension costs attributed to teachers and administrators, the town actually makes no payments for pension costs for these individuals. Teachers and administrators contribute between 5-10 percent of their salary to the Massachusetts Teachers Retirement System, a contributory retirement program which receives no funds from individual cities and towns.

At our last town meeting, I suggested that individuals who questioned figures provided by the school department call another source to verify their perception of fact. The Education Reform Act of 1993 requires the Department of Education to develop for each school system a foundation budget. The foundation budget includes the minimum amount to be spent on education in each city or town in Massachusetts, based on their pupil enrollment and other pertinent community facts. The foundation budget for Cohasset estimates for F.Y. '96 that the school department should be spending $446,269 for central office professional salaries and for principals' salaries. The actual amount contained in our budget for these two areas is $376,929, or almost $70,000 less than the minimum. In contrast, the budget amount for teaching and support salaries far exceeds the minimum. We have then, in fact, done just what Mr. Fitzsimmons' suggested. We are spending our money on the direct instruction of students rather than on administration.

Up to this point I have chosen not to respond to an allegation contained in an earlier letter to The Mariner from Mr. Fitzsimmons. In that letter Mr. Fitzsimmons accused me of making a derogatory remark to him during the last town meeting. What I said to Mr. Fitzsimmons was, "You didn't have the courage or the decency" to check the facts before making statements to the town meeting that could have a dramatic impact on the education available to the students of Cohasset.

Mr. Fitzsimmons' statement that this was a derogatory remark reminds me of Cominius' response to a messenger in Shakespeare's The Tragedy of Coriolanus. Cominius responds, "Though thou speak'st truth, methinks not well." Perhaps Mr. Fitzsimmons did not feel that I spoke well of him but my words fell far short of being derogatory.

All of us, but most important, our children are served best when differences of perception or attitude are discussed openly and with the benefit of all available information. As I have done on many occasions in the past, I encourage any citizens who have questions about the school department to call or meet with me and I will do all that is possible to give them any pertinent information.

Selectmen say override is essential

To the Editor:

Saturday, May 13, Cohasset voters will go to the polls to vote on two very important override questions. The Cohasset board of selectmen believes that a YES vote on both questions is essential to the continued financial health and sound management of the town.

Question 1 asks for approval to borrow $752,000 to build a town garage. This new building, to be sited at the transfer station, would finally house tree and park, highway and landfill equipment and their offices under one roof. We would no longer have expensive vehicles outside in all weather and we would clear the way for removal of the dilapidated highway buildings in the town parking lot to permit additional parking there. Most important, we would be moving forward in our planning for a consolidated department of public works. The tax increase on a typical home would average $20 a year for 20 years.

Question 2 is a general override of Proposition 2-1/2 of $358,000 to cover increased costs in departments throughout the town. Your elected and appointed officials worked for months to come up with as low a figure as possible which would allow the town to continue to offer the services we all want and need. Failure of this override will result in cuts in town and school services, including loss of a police officer, a firefighter, closing of Paul Pratt Library Sunday, turning off 50 streetlights, loss of an elementary teaching position, elimination of bus service for students in grades 7 to 12, higher athletic fees at the high school and much more. The override would add about $109 a year to the property tax of a typical home.

We are not politicians. We are your neighbors, your friends, your fellow taxpayers. We are not asking any more of you than we ask of ourselves. We feel a responsibility to offer you the same things we want for ourselves: good schools, strong public safety, social services for our children and seniors, a well-run town of which we can be proud.

The Cohasset board of selectmen urges you to vote YES on Override Questions 1 and 2.

School board details reasons to back override

To the Editor:

Like our counterparts on the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee, the members of the Cohasset School Committee and the School Department believe that all voters in Cohasset deserve the information necessary to make an informed decision when they enter the polling booth May 13. To that end, we provide here a brief history of this year's budget deliberations, then outline the steps that will be required in order to cut $180,000 from the school budget should the override fail.

First, some background —

• Next year, enrollment will be 35 students higher than this year, with most of the increase coming in the high school, where lab courses, athletics, and textbooks make per-pupil costs the highest. That increase alone would add about 3 percent to this year's budget level.

• Contracted salary increases will add about 3 percent to the budget, and inflation is running at approximately the same level. Without any improvement in what we provide for students, which we call the "level service" option, the budget should go up then by an additional 6 percent.

• Improvements in critical areas identified by the schools' town-wide survey, such as computer skills, foreign language, adjustment counseling and upgrading the physical condition of our schools, would have added another 2 percent, for a total budget increase of more than 11 percent.

Over our two months of budget discussions, Supt. Hart, the principals, department heads, school councils, and the school committee cut out more than 50 percent of that initial budget increase. Among other measures, we eliminated the business education department, held total teaching staff steady despite the enrollment growth, and put off several opportunities to increase both staff productivity and learning opportunities through additional computer installations. As any of you who attended these meetings can testify, these reductions were made with both careful planning and considerable regret. The end result is a recommended budget increase of 5.1 percent, which was approved at town meeting.

Even this level service option, however, requires an override of the Proposition 2 1/2 levy limit. And that's the problem with this year's Cohasset town budget — and for that matter, just about every town's budget from now on: both the premise and the implied promise of Proposition 2 1/2 are flawed. The Prop 2 1/2 legislation led voters to expect that providing for both inflation and growth could be handled with property tax increases of 2.5 percent per year. That may be fine if lots of taxpayers move into town who don't want school, police, fire or municipal services, or if inflation is zero. It also might be fine if our schools were already doing everything that kids need now and for the next ten years. But that isn't the case in Cohasset this year. We have struggled to craft a budget which goes far toward maintaining the quality of education in Cohasset, but does little to improve it.

So now the question is, what happens if the override doesn't pass? For the sake of drama, it is tempting to list catastrophic, highly-emotional items — things which might get voters up in arms. Instead, the entire school team has worked very diligently to identify the least disruptive measures which will be taken if the override doesn't pass (keep that phrase, least disruptive, in mind as you review the list):

• Eliminate bus transportation for the jr./sr. high school, and the additional elementary school bus run which would have reduced the current bus overcrowding.

• Eliminate several sports and increase the user fee to $100 per participant. Eliminate discount for third sport per student.

• Postpone availability of adjustment counseling at the jr./sr. high school (listed as the top priority for the second year in a row by the school council), and eliminate half of the elementary level adjustment counseling.

• Eliminate one elementary teacher, selected from the least-populous grade so that the student-teacher ratio rises to only 28:1 or 29:1 for that grade (the state recommends 23:1), and eliminate one kindergarten

Hagerty showroom should be sold

(Ed.'s note: The following letter was sent to Hagerty Property Committee chairman Al Moore and a copy was provided to the Cohasset Mariner for publication.)

Dear Al:

At the request of Mr. Paul Trendowicz, a member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, members of our board of directors met with him to learn more about his plans for the property he currently owns on Parker Ave. and his proposal to purchase a portion of the Hagerty property. The Chamber has been following this project for the last two years and is interested in seeing this property fully utilized. As a result of our meeting with Mr. Trendowicz, the Chamber's directors voted unanimously to support the privitization of the house portion of this property.

Because Mr. Trendowicz's proposal is not fully developed, the Chamber is not promoting any specific action at this time. However, we agree in principal with the direction Mr. Trendowicz envisions. Further, we urge your committee to seriously consider any proposal that:

1. Gets the Town of Cohasset out of the rental property business, an activity we lack both the administrative and psychological expertise to conduct.

2. Returns the Hagerty property to the tax rolls to whatever extent is practical.

3. Provides much needed resources to both the commercial fishing fleet and recreational boaters in Cohasset harbor.

4. Provides much needed revenue in this time of fiscal crisis.

The Chamber will continue to closely monitor the progress of this project and stands ready to be of whatever assistance we can to your committee.

Tedeschi's regular buys the winning lottery ticket

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

Russell Stiles has played the lottery ever since it began in Massachusetts back in 1972, and this week he had the winning number. Stiles and his wife are "regulars" in the Tedeschi's on South Main Street, said Emily Barrett, the employee who sold Stiles the winning ticket.

"They come in every day," said Barrett. "It's fabulous for them, we're pretty excited."

Barrett said the Cohasset convenience store does a good business in lottery tickets but not nearly as much as some other Tedeschi stores.

"It's been years, since we've had a big winner," she said.

According to a spokesperson at the Massachusetts State Lottery Commission, the Cohasset Tedeschi's will receive a bonus of one percent of the $400,000 jackpot or $4,000 for selling the ticket.

Every Wednesday and Saturday, Russell said he's played Megabucks using for the numbers: his wedding anniversary; his wife, Lillian's birthday; and his own birthday. While he has won small cash prizes by hitting three or four of the six numbers, he's never hit on all six.

"It's the number he always plays and finally it made it," said Lillian.

Russell will have to share the $400,000 jack-pot with one other winner but he doesn't mind.

The $200,000 less the federal government's $56,000 cut and the state's $10,000 portion — amounts to a lump sum payment of $134,000.

"It's very good to get it in one lump sum," said Russell, who noted that as he is over 70 now, he can't count on 20 years of payments.

"I'm not sure what I'll do with the money," he said, but it will no doubt make a tidy retirement nest egg.

"Maybe I'll buy a new car," he added. "And upgrade from a Chrysler to a Cadillac."

Lillian said it was a very nice and unexpected surprise to win but she doesn't plan to go on any spending sprees. Forty-year residents of Scituate, they tend to be home bodies, she said.

"We don't travel. We have just about everything we need. Maybe we'll buy a few things for some family members," Lillian said."We're very grateful."

Lillian's not sure whether her husband will continue to play the lottery or not.

"Maybe we won't play anymore and let someone else have a chance to win," she said. "We haven't really thought about it, it's still a shock."

But Barrett at Tedeschi's said she thinks they will. "Maybe not as often, but they probably will."

Boards seek to avoid clash over Shaw's proposal

Shaw's has only asked for 440 spaces, with the additional 204 in reserve, to be built if necessary.

There are now 363 spaces in Cushing Plaza, which contains 73,803 feet of retail space.

The conservation commission has been concerned that some of the spaces would be built in the buffer surrounding the considerable wetlands area at the back of the site.

The issue illustrates a long-simmering difference between the ways the two boards look at development.

The planning board insists that all commercial projects in Cohasset have enough parking so that even during extremely busy periods — such as Christmas — no vehicles are forced to wait for a space or to park on the street.

On the other hand, the conservation commission wants to reduce the amount of surface — both pavement and building structure — which will create runoff into wetlands.

The planning board favors organized paved parking areas and ample space for vehicles to maneuver. In contrast, the conservation commission likes to see driveways made of gravel or other surfaces which let water drain through without creating runoff into wetlands.

The conservation commission has sent a letter to the planning board and Shaw's executives, asking that the supermarket seek and be granted, a waiver from Cohasset's stringent parking requirement.

Moore indicated that 1/3 of the parking spaces would not have to be built now, but could be set in reserve for future use if necessary.

However, he cautioned that spaces in reserve must useable, they cannot simply plotted on a plan in unrealistic areas.

"We will undoubtedly forgive 30 percent of the parking," Moore said. "But that doesn't mean that the 30 percent can underwater. In the future it may be built."

Planning board member Robert Sturdy said that simply reducing the parking requirement alone may not be enough.

"That is not a solution to the problem," he stated, and suggested that Shaw's may be planning to build too much at the site.

"We're not permitting a supermarket, we're permitting a building," he stated. "It won't always be Shaw's. Parking has got to be consistent with what's on the site."

Sturdy went on to explain that the board must remember that in the future that building could have a different use and that all the parking spaces could be required eventually.

Moore also indicated that some of the parking spaces might not need to be paved, but that the substitute surface must be strong and durable enough to support a fire truck or other heavy vehicle.

But it was not only the number of spaces that brought comment during the two-hour hearing.

In mind-numbing detail, consultants, board members and other business people reviewed the parking scheme and its potential impact on the flow of traffic on both Beechwood St. and Rte. 3A.

The situation will be reviewed by the planning board and other town boards in upcoming weeks.

Engineer John Modzelewski said that parking plans can be interpreted in various ways. "This is where it becomes and art form," he told Moore and promised to take a closer look.

He was speaking in response to intense questioning from Super Stop & Shop developer Donald Staszko, who said he is concerned about the impact a disrupted traffic flow on Rte. 3A could have on his nearby businesses, which include Stop & Shop in the north and South Shore Chevrolet/Geo, to the south.

Staszko grilled Shaw's traffic consultant, Steven Mitchell, about the effect of changes in the traffic light at Rte. 3A and Beechwood St.

"We know this will generate more traffic," he said.

Several times he asked if the light is planned to stay green longer for Rte. 3A traffic.

"That's the third time you've asked me that question," snapped Mitchell, who said the light would be green for Rte. 3A traffic longer than on Beechwood St.

He also explained the pattern for left turn signals, based on their traffic studies.

"We've answered every question you've put forward," Shaw's engineer Larry Wagner told Staszko.

"We can agree to disagree," Moore said. "That doesn't mean we have to stay here until four in the morning." Several times Moore asked that comments be kept brief and addressed new information in order to speed up the lengthy hearing.

In addition, the Shaw's team submitted written replies to a list of concerns presented last week by

Complaints dog Trustees at World's End in Hingham

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

The Trustees of Reservations have received numerous complaints regarding their dog leash policy that went into effect May 1 at World's End.

Thomas Foster, Southeast Regional Supervisor for the Trustees, said this week he has received 40 phone calls and 13 letters over a three-week period from dog owners who object the new regulations.

Two people requested a refund of their membership dues, he said. Those requests were granted, because "we don't want to create any more unpleasantness." Annual membership is $65, he said.

He added that most telephone complaints he has received have been satisfied when the reasons for the new regulations are explained, although many people are also disappointed that they will no longer be allowed to let their pets run free at World's End.

Under the new regulations, dogs must be kept leashed at all times at World's End, and dog owners are required to clean up after their pets.

Foster said these requirements were implemented as a compromise, rather than an outright ban on dogs, as other conservation agencies have done at their properties.

He also said the trustees rejected other suggestions, such as limiting dogs to specified times or days of the week, or limiting them to certain areas because to do so would "concentrate the use" in that area and for particular time periods. These restrictions could also increase the number of animals on the property at those times.

In a letter sent in reply to complaints about the leash policy, Foster wrote, "Based on our observations, we felt that the number of dogs that lacked the discipline to respond to their owners' efforts to keep them within a designated area was too large for this alternative to be effective."

The Trustees of Reservations owns the 250-acre World's End property, purchased with donations in 1967 from the Brewer family, who had hired landscape architect Frederick Law Olmsted to design plantings and paths there in the late 1800s.

The area has become a popular spot for hikers, birdwatchers, and cross-country skiers, as well as dog owners who have been able to exercise their pets there.

According to a statement that accompanied the new guidelines, the trustees have received a growing number of complaints that dogs have fouled the paths and lawns at World's End. In addition, other visitors have complained that "unleashed dogs jump up on them, soil their clothing, and sometimes even knock them off their feet." This has been a particular problem when children are involved.

Last year, new guidelines were posted, asking dog owners to clean up after their dogs, and to keep the pets leashed at the park entrance, to better control them when encountering other animals there. However many dog owners did not comply with that request, forcing the new regulations, Foster said.

Beechwood St. resident Wayne Shawchuk, which included a number of traffic and safety concerns.

Wagner also addressed, in exhaustive detail, drainage questions asked by Dr. Jerome Carr, who is representing Julie Hassan, owner of Hassan Sign, which is south of the site.

She has been concerned about the impact drainage from the plaza could have on her property.

Town consultant Modzelewski agreed with Wagner that the drainage plan will likely result in less water on the Hassan property.

"I agree with you," he told Wagner. "It would benefit the Hassan property."

There was some discussion about water flowing south on Rte. 3A from the Beechwood St. area in heavy storms.

"Somebody has to address the issue of flooding on Rte. 3A," said Carr.

He also suggested that the water could cross Rte. 3A, causing icing in winter and new flooding at other times.

While agreeing that could happen, Moore said that it wasn't Shaw's responsibility to solve existing water problems not connected to the plaza.

The planning board voted to close the public comment portion of the hearing. Starting May 3, it now has 21 days in which to make a decision, unless it asks Shaw's to agree to an extension.

Beechwood St. resident Frank Hamilton, who is suing the board of appeals over the permit it granted to Shaw's, said that petitions about the project are now being circulated on King St., whose residents are concerned about added traffic.

Moore said that while residents will no longer be able to speak on the issue at future meetings, letters and petitions will be accepted.

The conservation commission considers Shaw's Tuesday, May 16.

'Annie' is delightful fantasy for the entire family

Orphans in the Hard Knock Life orphanage sing their hearts out in the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of the Broadway hit musical 'Annie' which is on stage this weekend and next in the Scituate High School auditorium. 'Annie' is based on the comic strip "Little Orphan Annie."

Taylor Strecker as Annie sings of a better life with Scott Gage who portrays Daddy Warbucks. The cast includes 89 actors and actresses all under the age of 18.

In the role that Carol Burnett made famous in the movie based on the Broadway smash, Kristen Vose as Mrs. Hannigan yells at the children in her orphanage while Oliver Warbuck's lovely secretary Grace Farrell (played by Liz Cannavo) observes. The orphans are Melanie Duval, Becky Stockbridge and Elizabeth Zembruski.

Ronnie Nicynski (as the conniving, deceitful Rooster Hannigan) and Mary Bolotin (Rooster's girlfriend Lily) rehearse for 'Annie'. Tickets may be purchased at Buttonwood Books in Cushing Plaza, Cohasset; Front Street Books in Scituate Harbor; and Wilbur's Ice Cream in North Scituate.

ASP yard sale is May 13

The Appalachia Service Project will hold a Yard Sale on Saturday, May 13, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church on Cohasset Common.

Proceeds will benefit the group's annual home repair mission in Virginia and Kentucky. Item donations are welcome. Call 383-9325 to arrange for pick-ups.

Jr. Voices to present pop opera

The South Shore's Children's Chorus Junior Voices will present a unique children's pop opera, "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," on Tuesday, May 16, and Sunday, May 21 at 7 p.m. in Wilder Hall, 666 Main St., Hingham.

The concert will feature a brief appearance by Crickets, a chorus made up of very young children. Both groups are directed by Margo Euler.

Excerpts of Britten's "Ceremony of Carols" will be featured. "Joseph" will be sung with costumes, staging and choralography and will feature Hingham sixth-graders Caitlin Marshall as Joseph and Margo Littlefield as Pharoah, loosely disguised as Elvis. 25 other members of Junior Voices from communities all over the South Shore will participate.

11 members of the group will portray the 11 sons of Jacob who conspire in very amusing ways to get rid of Joseph and his fancy coat because they are jealous of his "favorite son" status.

Tickets are $2 in advance at Hingham Public Library and Noble's and $3 at the door. The Tuesday performance is intended for family members, but seats may be available at the door. The Sunday performance will include a reception for the audience.

Band members needed

Rev. Ed Atkinson of the First Parish Church in Cohasset is organizing a marching band for this year's Harborfest parade. He is seeking persons of any age who may have played in a high school or college marching band and who would enjoy bringing their old instrument down for the attic to play one or two old familiar tunes.

Minimal musical talent is needed, and with a few rehearsals the band should be ready to march. Khaki pants and white shirts will be the uniform. Anyone interested in participating may call Rev. Atkinson at his office, 383-1100 or at home (383-1105).

Retreat planned for May 17

A spirit-centered ritual, "A Rushing Wind," will be held at the Sisters of St. Joseph Retreat House, 339 Jerusalem Rd., on Wednesday, May 17. Supper will be served at 6 p.m. followed by a presentation at 7:30 p.m.

To register for the dinner and presentation or the ritual only, call 545-5351. The evening is sponsored by the Catholic Church Women of the South Shore. All are welcome.

Plant sale at Lightkeeper's

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will host "Not Your Ordinary Plant Sale" on Saturday, May 13, at 9 a.m. at the Lighthouse Keeper's Cottage, Border St., Cohasset Harbor.

A large variety of gardeners' choice plants, including unusual and hard-to-find perennials, small trees, ground covers, herbs, ornamental grasses and houseplants will be on sale.

Hand-crafted items will be featured at the club's boutique table. Proceeds of the day will benefit the club's many civic projects and scholarship fund.

Black Rock Beach clean-up

There will be a Clean-up Day at Black Rock Beach on Saturday, May 13, from 9 to 11 a.m. Volunteers should bring gloves. Garbage bags will be provided. For further information call Lori Merliss at 383-0232.

Mother's Day plant sale

The High School Youth Group of First Parish of Cohasset Unitarian Universalist Church, 23 North Main St., will hold a Geranium Sale at the Parish House on Sunday, May 14, at 11:40 a.m., following church services.

Plants will be available in a variety of colors. Last year's customers reported that the plants wintered well in a sunny window and have begun blossoming again this spring. Proceeds will help fund youth group activities.

Williams exhibit opens

The work of South Shore Art Center artist Claffy Williams of Cohasset will be featured in the Landmark Building, 160 Federal St., Boston through June.

Williams' work is well-known for capturing the abstract essence of the natural world. She will give a demonstration at the public preview of the Two Collection at Stud[illegible] at WGBH May 14.

Williams is a gallery artist at the SSAC. For further information call 383-ARTS.

VE Day brings memories of triumph and tragedy

wealthy."

Ahearn said that the Americans actually arrived in central Germany before the Russians and could have entered Berlin if not for President Franklin Roosevelt's agreement to allow the Soviets that honor.

"We were over here for two weeks," he said. "We could've gone straight up the road to Berlin. Well, the politicians made a deal."

AWARDS FOR VALOR

The victory party marked a bittersweet triumph, having capped six months of continuous fighting for Ahearn, a grueling ordeal of courage and tragedy, during which he killed a number of men and saw many of his own friends die.

For his valor, Ahearn received the Purple Heart, Bronze Star and two Battle Stars.

As he described the experience, Ahearn made it clear he agrees with the cliche: war is hell.

"I went on constantly for six months. You said you were going to die any minute and you didn't care," he stated. "It's very hard to explain that to people. You constantly feel it's going to be you next. My buddies were killed. Some got captured, some got wounded and some got killed."

It began with their landing at the French port of Cherbourg, where they were assigned to coastal patrol. A tank commander, Ahearn explained that he had to stand up in the tank, to set the sites on the target.

The gunner, who was inside with the other troops, fired the 50-caliber machine gun.

When a tank was hit, it did not exactly blow up as in the movies.

"Those tanks were so massive," Ahearn remarked.

Instead, the impact usually stunned the occupants. Within seconds, the heat of the impact invariably started a fire, incinerating the unconscious soldiers.

If someone did try to escape?

"If they scrambled to get out, well you'd shoot them. It's not a nice thing to do, but it's either you or them."

Since he was always standing up Ahearn was an especially constant target.

"You'd go in like that, exposed," he stated flatly.

'They had horse-drawn artillery. The men walked behind. They had World War I planes and wore leather helmets and goggles like Lindy.'

— Cohasset WWII vet Austin Ahearn on the out-of-date equipment the enormous Russian army had been fighting with.

As the hated pro-Nazi Vichy French regime started to collapse, the Ahearn's battalion moved on to Fontainbleu, outside Paris.

After a short time, the Battle of the Bulge, one of the most savage of the war, erupted to the north.

"When the Bulge broke through, they needed everyone, so they sent us in," he said.

LIVING IN THE SNOW

The subsequent push through Belgium was particularly tough.

The men slept in pup tents, which accommodated two, but barely had room for one. Ahearn said they would dig a trench through the middle of the tent, where they would put their feet, so their legs wouldn't go numb sitting cross legged. They couldn't lean back, against the flap, because the tent would leak.

"We lived in the snow," the former soldier said. "We hardly ever got inside."

There were three other Cohasset boys in his battalion: Frank Rosano, who now lives in Warwick, Rhode Island; Vincent McNeil; and Joseph DiVito of Hingham, whom he saw periodically.

Looking through his album of war photos, Ahearn pointed to places he had seen in Belgium: whole towns reduced to rubble, with only a frame still standing, leaving a Medieval outline in the sky; his tank mates posing in snowy fields and yes, the humble graves of some who didn't make it.

He also showed his pencil sketches of landscapes done while in Belgium. Ahearn said he didn't know where the drawings were done.

He pointed to a photograph of a boy of about 12, with curly blonde hair, who had never seen a toothbrush or an orange until the American troops arrived.

Ahearn's group was quartered with his family, the Schyns, who didn't mind putting up with soldiers. "They were so grateful to be freed."

The Allies' successes forced the Germans to scramble and retreat. The Yanks could often see the departure in the distance.

"The German soldiers were kissing their girlfriends good bye," Ahearn remembered, and the tanks raced in pursuit, ahead of the army, often ending up deep in enemy territory.

"Sometimes we were 350 miles behind the lines," he said, adding that since they were so far from the main supply sources, they had to bring their own food and water on wagons which followed the tanks.

"Did you ever see a tank going down the road with a bunch of wagons after it? We looked like a bunch of Gypsies." He smiled slightly at the memory.

A SHELL EXPLODED

Retreating German troops blew up a bridge across the Rhine, "so we couldn't be the first ones over," Ahearn said ruefully.

The division crossed the Rhine west of Dusseldorf and fought its way across the crumbling Third Reich.

He recalled that the devastation was horrific and the fighting fierce.

At the German town of Steckby, he received the Purple Heart. "A shell blew up in front of me. I got shrapnel in my face. I went to the medics and got a band aid on my face," he said, noting that they just kept going. "You didn't go to any hospital unless it was a serious wound."

Ahearn is 20 percent disabled because of the shrapnel wound and another ten percent disabled from a

ANALOG VS. DIGITAL INSTRUMENTS

A conventional (analog) hearing instrument is primarily an amplifier. It takes incoming sound impulses and amplifies the analog signal, which is an imitation of the original acoustic energy pattern. A digital instrument assigns numerical values to the incoming sound that allow it to be controlled and modified using much of the technology that is applied to musical recordings on compact disc (CD). While a true all-digital hearing instrument is not yet available, present digital technology in hearing instruments allows for greater clarity and precision of each frequency. Although analog instruments may employ special circuitry intended to reduce background noise, digital circuitry better recognizes noise and separates it from speech. Computer chips also enable digital instruments to automatically adjust for loudness.

It is important to check with a qualified hearing loss professional to see which type of hearing device will best suit your individual needs. Whether analog or digital, at THE HEARING CENTER, we can help you with your hearing aid. We support and service most major brand-name hearing assistive devices, and service warranties are always available. If you would like more information on how we may be able to help you, please call us at 1-800-339-9316. We are pleased to announce that we are now located at 62 Derby St. in Hingham. We know you will enjoy the convenient parking and larger location. For your convenience, we are still located at 470 Southern Artery (Rte. 3-A), Quincy. Happy Mother's Day!

P.S. A "hybrid" hearing instrument combines analog components with certain digital controls.

knife wound in the leg, which he received in combat in Germany, but declined to discuss it further.

He received the Bronze Star in another incident.

"It was just before we knocked a tank out. The adrenalin was moving. The shell singed my eyebrow," he said, not needing to add that they kept going. "We knocked the tank out at least."

Near the Elbe River, deep in what would become the Soviet zone and later East Germany, Ahearn had yet another close encounter with death.

A German patrol suddenly appeared in "marching fire," which means they were shooting as they approached.

"I fired three rounds of high explosives. I don't know how many were killed. I could see body parts everywhere. We got out of there."

After VE Day, Ahearn was stationed in Germany's Harz Mountains, "looking for SS troops. They'd get out of their uniforms and walk home." The Allied troops interrogated all men young enough to fight, whom they encountered in the mountains.

DEER HUNTING IN THE FOREST

Ahearn said many of the Germans were friendly and clearly favored the Americans over the Russians.

"We weren't supposed to fraternize with them (Germans), but we did."

In the town of Weidalah, Ahearn's group was quartered at the Schafer's house. The entire three-generation family was moved to smaller lodgings, except for an elderly aunt, who was too sick to be moved."

One day, one of the American soldiers shot a deer in the woods and brought it to the house. Ahearn showed a picture of the animal about to be skinned.

He said that when she saw the deer the old aunt began to chatter excitedly in German. They finally figured out that she wanted to eat the animal's brain, which they gave to her.

After getting one good meal out of the deer, Ahearn said they smuggled the rest of the animal to the Schafers, who were extremely grateful.

"People couldn't hunt, only the landowners could hunt in Germany before the war," he stated.

"I don't know what happened to those people. It was in the Russian zone."

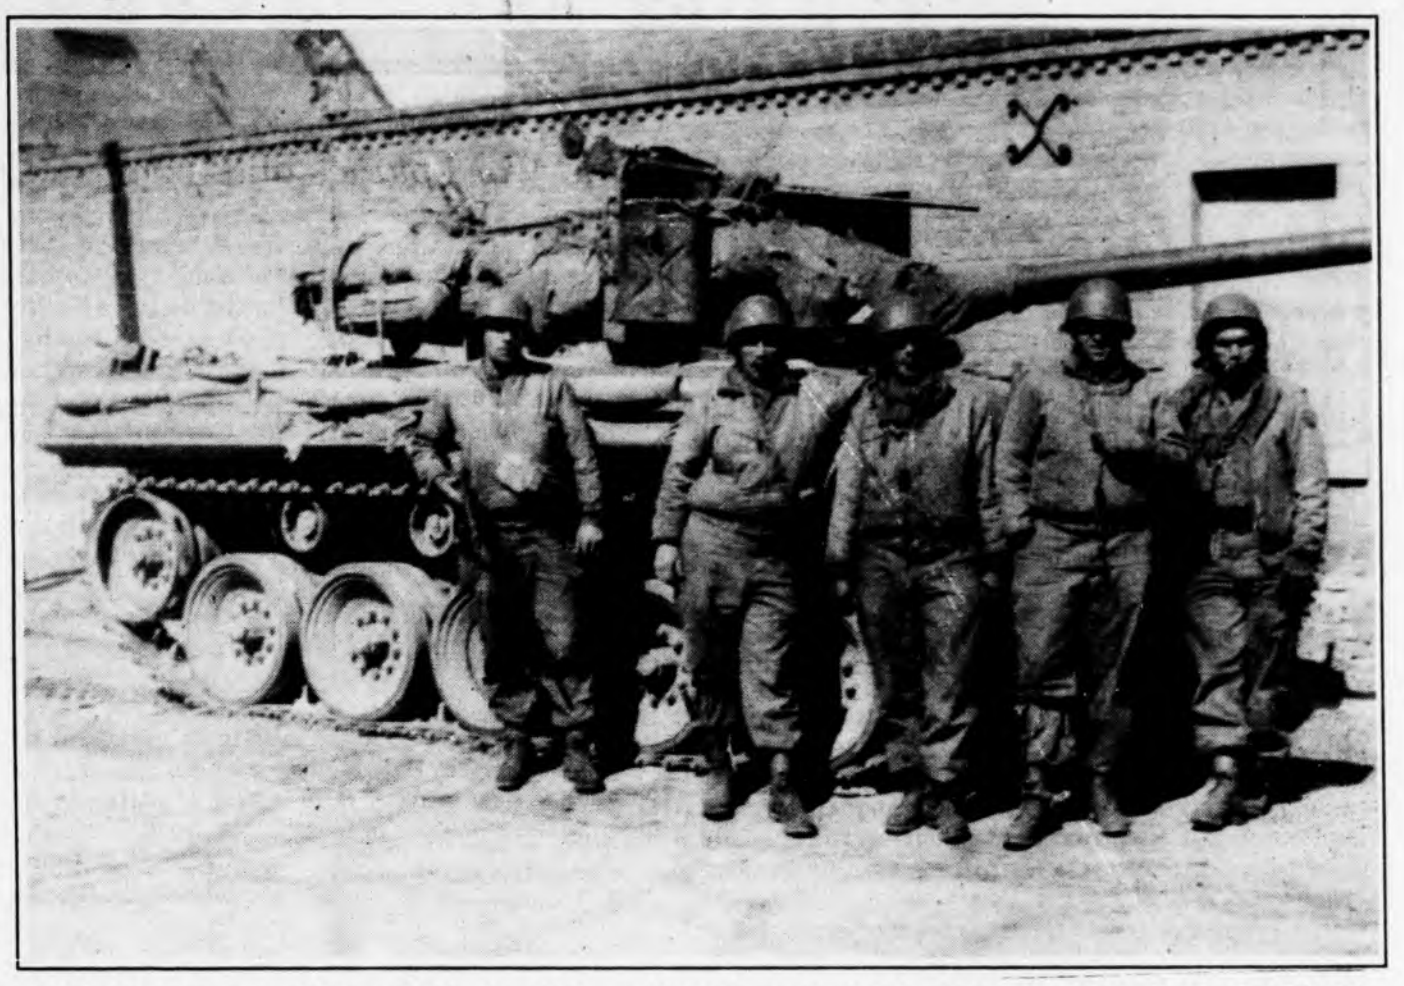
Once, an elderly German man came up to the American soldiers and they somehow understood his sign language: he was telling them to go to Moscow.

Ahearn reflected on how history would have changed if they had.

"If the world had done what that little peasant said, there would have been no Communist Russia, no Vietnam, no Cold War."

Although the Nazi defeat ended the war in Europe, the Pacific battle blazed on. After a 30-day furlough in the US, Ahearn said the division was slated to begin preparations for to ship to the Pacific.

News of the atomic bomb delighted the soldiers, who had dreaded the planned land invasion of Japan.



Austin Ahearn, second from right, stands by an M-18 Army tank, 50 miles west of Berlin during World War II.

"I was in Kokomo, Indiana on VJ Day," he said. "There would have been millions of men killed if they didn't drop it (the atomic bomb). Harry Truman was good to do that, I think."

Asked if he had ever considered a permanent military career, Ahearn laughed. "I wanted out as fast as I could."

COHASSET NATIVE

A Cohasset native with deep roots in town, his grandfather was the first immigrant from the Azores to settle here, Ahearn returned to start a jewelry and watchmaking business, which he sold not long ago to Cohasset Jewelers. His wife Dorothy worked in the store. They have three children, Maribeth, of Hingham, Larry of Newport, Rhode Island and Leslie Demers of Bolton and two grandchildren.

Ahearn is busy working in his garden, building model boats reading about the war and is active in several veterans' groups. He marches every year in the Memorial Day parade, wearing his old uniform. "I can still get into it," he said proudly.

Garage will increase efficiency

To the Editor:

The Town of Cohasset needs a new garage, not just to house and maintain expensive equipment now spread all over town in dilapidated buildings, but more importantly to cause the realignment of town departments. Currently, four public works departments, each with their own managers and budgets live in different quarters. We have the highway department with six men, the tree and park department with four men, the one man wire department, and the 2 1/2-man recycling and transfer facility department. In this little town we have four managers managing only 11-1/2 employees. Each manager has his own budget. That's four budgets for 15 employees!

When I was on the board of health, I became aware of the lack of any method by which the town's employees could be used effectively. For instance, the RTF is open four days a week. Saturdays and Sundays, the RTF requires three men. Every other day, only one man is required except when equipment is being operated. Because of the town's method of budgeting various departments, it is not possible for the board of health to assign excess manpower on off-days to another department or to require an employee from another department to work at the RTF Saturdays or Sundays when someone is sick or when the work load is particularly heavy.

This lack of efficient management control goes even further when heavy equipment is involved. Each department purchases the equipment it needs to accomplish its work. We own at least two pieces of heavy equipment which cost hundreds of thousands of dollars for the use of separate departments when one piece of equipment managed properly could be used for all departments.

I urge you to vote for the new town garage to be located at the RTF. This is more than an opportunity to build a new garage, it is a real opportunity to increase the efficiency of town public works.

Don't diminish town services

To the Editor:

To keep Cohasset the lovely place it is, we need to pass the Override May 13.

Our town spending is frugal, but inflation and capital projects such as sewer improvement plans and land purchases have increased the cost of running our town to a degree greater than that permitted under Proposition 2-1/2.

The Advisory Committee has reviewed every dollar the town spends. The vast majority of us have concluded that if the Override fails, consequences for the quality of town services will be serious. All operations of town government will be diminished. A total of $360,000; $180,000 from the schools and $180,000 from town budgets approved at town meeting will be cut. Personnel and services will be reduced in all major departments: police, fire, harbor, library, Council on Aging, recreation, landfill, tree and park, highway, town hall and the schools.

Passage of the Override will maintain these town services at their current level. The average tax bill will increase by around $100 or $25 per quarter.

The advisory committee strongly supports passage of the Override. We ask your help in maintaining current services to the town of Cohasset by voting for the Override May 13.

Nan Roth
Chairman, Cohasset Advisory Committee

More letters page 28

Vote yes on override May 13

To the Editor:

When I read the daily papers or watch television nightly I sometimes think, "How lucky I am to be living in Cohasset," a town where our streets are maintained in good condition, summer and winter, our trees are trimmed and parks kept beautiful, the response time and services of our fire and police departments is swift and efficient, our transfer facility easily accessible, our library and school systems among the best. Yes, of course, we pay for these good services. This cost is arrived at, after close scrutiny, by department heads, the selectmen and advisory board.

Again this year the selectmen and advisory board have hammered home the need to keep the cost under control. Despite this effort and the cooperation of department heads, the facts screech out that we must face reality, there is a price to be paid for good services. That price this year, calls for an override vote of $358,000 on May 13. Not only should we consider the good service that we enjoy at present but the confusion, inconvenience and ill will that will develop, if the override does not pass.

Please join me for voting yes on the override. Let's vote to keep Cohasset like it is.

Gerard Keating, Chairman
Cohasset Council on Aging
10 Black Horse Lane

aide.

• Reduce in-school teaching supplies such as spelling workbooks, markers and science materials by an additional 10 percent (after the 5 percent reduction from the initial budget cutting).

• Eliminate the system-wide achievement testing used to measure how well we're teaching basic skills.

• Eliminate 25 percent of teacher training budget, one half of the Deer-Hill budget for new computers, and a new PA system to replace the ancient and often unintelligible unit at the Osgood.

Recall that we said these were intended to be the least disruptive cuts if an override fails. Yet these cuts are serious and will hurt, because that's how far we've already reduced the budget.

The choice for voters is really quite simple: the override is not about providing funds for some elaborate or questionable expansion effort, it's about not reducing service for our children and our community any further. The quality of our schools is cited by families moving to town as the number one criterion for having chosen Cohasset. As a small system, we're especially challenged to offer a solid range of courses for our students, and to maintain the quality of teaching and learning which supports some of the highest property values in the Boston area. Whether we look at the schools as an investment in property values or an investment in our children's future, passage of the override is necessary if we're not seriously to jeopardize both of these investments. We urge all citizens to vote "YES" May 13.

'Build it and they will run'

That's what Emmons hopes will happen when new track is built

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Come next spring, Cohasset High girls track coach Ron Emmons would be as happy watching a large group of athletic hopefuls emerge over the hill leading up to Milikken Field as Kevin Costner was when Shoeless Joe Jackson appeared from out of the corn field, ready to have a game of catch.

Emmons is hoping more Cohasset High athletes will be attracted to the school's track program once the new, all-weather facility is ready for the '96 South Shore League season.

"One of my big hopes is that with the new facility we'll be able to keep people and draw from the other sports," said Emmons, who has been coaching track in Cohasset for 15 years. "I'm probably more excited than they are. I'm really looking forward to it."

Because the Skippers have no track, their "home" meets are held at Scituate High School. Emmons and the entire team has nothing but good words for Sailors' head coach Bill Smith, who lets the team use the track for their meets and for practices when his squad has an away meet and the track is not being used.

"Bill Smith has been very good to us," Emmons said.

The Skippers have managed to win one meet this season with their 22-member squad and lost two meets by a total of six points. But a closer look at the team reveals it is a club definitely worth keeping an eye on in the next few years.

Cohasset is loaded with young talent and doesn't have a single senior on the team. As for juniors, there are just three. What Emmons does have is a crew of underclassmen who have already shown signs that with a little more depth, the Skippers could move up drastically in the SSL ranks.

Without a doubt, the "Queen of Track" in Cohasset is two-time SSL All-Star, Faye Menis. The Skippers' leading scorer every season since the seventh grade, Menis holds a slew of school and class records. She also qualified for the State Class D meet in the long jump, high hurdles and 200 meters. Emmons said Menis will compete in the high hurdles at the meet.

Menis is only one of several Skipper girls to earn a seat on the bus for the class meet.

"Individually we're having a great season," Emmons said. "As a team we don't have a lot of depth or experience but that will come."

Seventh-grader Tara Hettstrom, a SSL gymnastics All-Star, has put together a strong spring on the track. Not only has Hettstrom qualified for the class meet, but she has also set the junior high record in the 100 meters with a 13.1 clocking.

Junior Tammy Maitland qualified in the 400-meter event, as did Elena Tosi in the high jump. However, whether or not Tosi competes in the meet is still up in the air due to a knee injury she sustained against Norwell. Emmons said the injury could possibly be just a strained knee but doctors are still examining it to be sure it isn't something more serious.

Another All-Star gymnast, ninth-grader Kristen Reynolds qualified for the class meet in the low hurdles and put on a stellar performance in the Carver Invitational Meet last Saturday. Reynolds took home a pair of second-place finishes in the triple jump and low hurdles, and looks to be building momentum for the SSL Meet this coming Monday at Carver.

With the overwhelming majority of the team made up of young athletes, the Skippers' weakest events are understandably in the weight and throwing events. But Emmons is confident the younger girls will become stronger with age and see their performances improve along the way.

Tennis team on verge of tourney

Take a look at the South Shore League boys tennis standings and you'll see Cohasset tucked nicely, smack dab in the middle of the surrounding teams. Above the Skippers are the elite squads. Below are the not so elite. So where does that leave Cohasset? Hopefully with a .500 record and a tournament berth by the end of the season.

And head coach Chum Steele knows it's the success against those weaker clubs the Skippers must exploit to reach the postseason.

"We're having a kind of middle of the pack year," Steele said.

With three remaining matches on the season, the Skippers look to be a good bet to get into the tourney. They face two teams, Abington and Carver, that they've already defeated this year by a combined score of 9-1.

Cohasset split both its matches last week and again on Monday and Tuesday. The Skippers rolled past Carver, 5-0, before hitting a 4-1 roadblock against a tough Norwell team.

The same scenario played itself out again this week. After winning four of its five matches against Norton for a 4-1 win. Chip Moore, who has lost just one match this season, was the lone Cohasset winner in the Skippers' 4-1 loss to Scituate. Moore, along with Joe Slotnick, Justin Golden and the doubles team of Dan Steele and Tom Grecco all registered wins in the Lancers' match.

Fiore sinks hole-in-one

Cohasset High golfer Jordan Fiore shot a hole-in-one in the Skippers' April 25 match against Abington at the Strawberry Valley Golf Course in Abington. Fiore's shot, which head coach Clark Chatterton believes to be the first hole-in-one ever in the South Shore League, came on the 132 yard, seventh hole, a par 3.

Hingham seventh-grade hockey player Kevin McGowan, 13, recently completed an 11-day tour of Kiev and Helsinki as a member of a team of Select and Metro hockey players.

While in Kiev, McGowan and the other American players stayed with Ukrainian host families.

McGowan took many photos and kept a journal of his trip which began on Friday, April 14 and lasted to Monday, April 24.

And while the Ukrainian and Finnish players did not have the latest equipment, they played solid hockey and were more than friendly toward McGowan and his teammates.

When asked what he learned most from the trip, McGowan said: "The major thing was how much we have in the United States. They didn't have much in Kiev but they were very proud of what they had."

The following are some excerpts of McGowan's journal. The entire journal ran in a story in our Hingham paper.

*"For breakfast (in Kiev) we had chicken and rice with cucumbers, tomatoes and oranges. The chicken was pretty good but it is still a lot better than borscht."

*"I took about a half hour shower at around 9:30 p.m. I used my soap, shampoo and other stuff and then just left it in the bathroom for them to have."

*"We ate breakfast at about 10:15 a.m. It was very good. We had spaghetti, chicken, some weird apricot drink and for dessert had chocolate cake. The apricot drink was pretty good."

*"After the museum a bunch of kids went to where Matt is staying. We hung around and then we played some (Ukrainian) kids in basketball and soccer. We got killed in soccer but then we killed them in basketball."

*"Walking home after our hockey game today, me, Kenny and Joey saw these Russian Mafia dudes beat up these two guys. First they were yelling at each other and then one guy stepped toward the Mafia guy and the guy head-butted him. Another guy stepped up he head-butted him too. The guy was on the ground and they punched and kicked him. Afterwards, they just got in their car and drove off like nothing happened."

*"Tomorrow we are leaving and it should be really sad because I doubt I will ever see the people I stayed with again."

*"While the adults were at the casino right in the hotel (in Finland) our team was playing manhunt with two teams around the whole hotel. It was wicked fun until our coaches got complaints that we were running around the hotel. After that we had to stay in our rooms. Me, Robbie and Anthony went back to our room at about midnight. We watched some TV and saw on the news that Oklahoma City was bombed. We couldn't believe it. After seeing the report we went to bed."

*"(The Finns) were really fast skaters but did not check at all. We knocked them around but they still beat us 4-3.

Cohasset baseball roundup

with Jim O'Sullivan

Skippers scramble for tourney berth

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner staff

The Cohasset Skippers are racing for the final spot in the state tournament. With five games left to play, the Skippers are 6-9. They must win four of their last five to slide into the tourney.

Headcoach Ron Ford was excited about his team's chances. "If we keep playing baseball the way we're playing it now, hitting the ball, making the plays, and getting the pitching, it's going to be very tough to stop us," Ford said.

Ford's squad, led by seniors Jonah Berger, Brendan Kinchla and Nick Welz has pulled its style of play up a level. Despite losing to Norton, possibly the best team in the league, and East Bridgewater, another excellent team, the Skippers are playing great baseball. The Skippers have been getting excellent pitching from Berger, Welz, Ron Moody, Greg Taylor and Greg Stevens.

Berger pitched an outstanding game against Carver last week and has also been the team's catcher. His speed and hustle have made him an integral part of the squad.

Welz, the team's third baseman and clean-up hitter, is the team's leader on and off the field. If he's not providing a Caribbean drumbeat on a road trip, he's lining a double into left field or scooping up a worm burner at third base.

Moody has been a pleasant surprise for Ford this year. A poised pitcher with flawless mechanics, Moody is one of Ford's aces of the future.

Another young player for the Skippers is eighth-grader Taylor. Taylor patrols left field and has also played the role of fireman this year, occasionally coming in and mowing down his elder opponents.

One of the keys to Cohasset's success this year has been the mound service of Stevens. Stevens, a junior pitcher, who also DH's and plays third, possesses a hard fastball and tricky curve. He surrendered only two runs against Norwell last week and held Scituate to three runs this Tuesday.

Cohasset's first baseman Kevin McKenna is the team's third hitter and a flawless fielder. McKenna is a coach's dream. He can hit, field and he doesn't complain. A very tough hitter to strike out, the sophomore can usually be relied upon for a hit.

Second baseman Rob Buckley is another Skipper who has been doing double duty for Cohasset. Buckley caught when Berger was spending his time on the DL, and also plays second. Buckley's solid performance behind the plate caught Ford's eye, and one gets the feeling that Buckley might be seeing some action there after Berger's graduation.

While Buckley was blocking heaters and benders, freshman Pat Hurley took over second base duties. Hurley played a solid second base and has found his groove at the plate. Another player for the future, Hurley is one of the Skippers' promising young prospects.

Shortstop Kinchla is one of the squad's best ballplayers. A great hitter and one of the best fielders in the league, Bubba is a complete player. Kinchla's slashing gap-finding shots and diving backhand stabs have resulted in uncountable runs for Cohasset.

Sophomore Grant Emde, a fleet center fielder with a quick bat, is an asset for Cohasset's lineup. His speed comes in handy on the basepaths and in the field, where he reaches balls that most outfielders would concede as doubles.

Eric Henry, a junior right fielder with a strong arm and a good set of wheels, bats second in the order. Henry, who took a brief hiatus from the game last season, has returned to the team with a vengeance. His hitting and fielding have both been outstanding and he will only get better.

Ron van der Pool is another of the speedy Skippers. van der Pool plays a solid outfield, and swings the bat well. His good baseball sense and quick thinking help him get a good jump on fly balls.

Cohasset is a young, speedy team with excellent potential and an explosive offense. The Skippers stole seven bases against Scituate and Ford created three runs with double steals, a potent weapon that should come in handy during the tournament.

Cohasset hosts Abington Thursday and the Carver Crusaders Friday. If Ford's boys can take those two games and win two of their next three contests, then they've clinched a tournament slot.

Welz was optimistic about the tournament. "This is the most wins I've ever had on the varsity. If we play the brand of baseball that we played against Scituate, watch out for us to be the Cinderella story of the tournament."

Cohasset's Cinderella story is coming to a climax, and it will be decided soon enough.

Several coaches have told me this they are either too busy to talk during the course of the school day or would rather I'd call them at night. I've run into two problems with this system. The first is these coaches can sometimes be just as hard to get in touch with at night. The second is the time I spend trying to hunt these coaches down, I could be out interviewing an athlete for a feature in an upcoming issue.

But, alas, I believe I've figured out a solution that should solve the problem. For those coaches who don't have a free period at school, I'll call and leave a message to get back to me during the time between the end of classes and the beginning of practice. I was on enough teams in high school to know coaches aren't so busy during that time span to make a 10-minute phone call. It's not going to make or break their afternoon schedule.

Rec. dept. to offer lacrosse clinics

The Cohasset recreation department will accept telephone registrations at its office, at 383-6791, for an evening lacrosse skill development program designed for youngsters entering grades 4, 5 and 6 in September.

Lacrosse clinics are designed to teach fundamental skills and concepts of lacrosse and will meet Tuesday and Thursday evenings, 6:30 to 8 p.m., at the Osgood School field beginning Tuesday evening, June 13 and ending Thursday, June 29.

This specialized developmental program will be instructed by local college and high school lacrosse players and the fee will be $26 per person for the six lessons. Participants will need a helmet and lacrosse stick to enroll. Other equipment will be unnecessary as no contact scrimmages will be held.

Registration for soccer camp

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8-18. This is South Shore Soccer Camp's fifth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering, visit the Cohasset Recreation Department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791, in the near future, to be assured enrollment.

The camp will be offered to both girls and boys during the weeks of Monday through Friday, July 31-August 4, and August 7-11. Should a camper wish to attend both camp weeks, this will now be possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camp weeks must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Mondays through Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The cost is $165 per week with discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children available. South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players from the New England area.

Baseball camp to begin in June

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages five through 12 at the recreation office, first floor of Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Club has been contracted again this year to provide baseball camp, which will begin the week of Monday, June 26, Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full day, 8;30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. camp for ages seven and over; and a half-day, 8;30 to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5-and 6-year-olds.

The week-long camp cost $120 per child for the full-day program, and $70 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Friday, June 30.

VIP soccer registrations set

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp for children ages 4-7.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, aged 4-7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for a 4- and 5-year-olds and meets from 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, July 17-21. The cost is $40 for the week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour per day program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 17-21, for 6- and 7-year-olds. The cost is $70 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year the front field of Cohasset High School.

Marine exams set for May 20, 27

Flotilla #1203, United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, highlights National Safe Boating Week (May 20-26). Saturday, May 20, free Courtesy Marine Examinations (C.M.E.'s) for in-water and trailered boats will be offered at Nantasket Beach Salt Water Club and Hull Yacht Club, Nantasket Avenue, Hull, from 8 a.m. to noon; and at Donohue's Waveland Marina and the A Street Boat Ramp, both on A Street, Hull, from 1 to 4 p.m.

Saturday, May 27, free Courtesy Marine Examinations (C.M.E.'s) will be offered to in-water boaters at Landfall Marine Center, Lincoln Highway (3A) Hingham from 8 a.m. to noon.

Coast Guard qualified examiners will provide safe boating advice and National Safe Boating Council literature.

Cohasset Golf Club to host tourney

Quincy Hospital will hold its Sixth Annual Golf & Tennis Tournament May 22 at the Cohasset Golf Club. The event benefits the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation and is open to anyone wishing to participate.

A day of golf, including greens fees, prizes, cart rental, box lunch and dinner costs $125. Tennis, including court time, prizes, box lunch and dinner, costs $75. You can attend the dinner alone for $50.

Sponsorships for the golf or tennis tournament are available at various levels: Sponsors ($500 or more) will be recognized by a sign at one of the 18 tees/holes or at the tennis courts and receive one free registration for either golf or tennis and dinner, as well as acknowledgment in the tournament program. Associate Sponsors ($250 or more) receive a complimentary dinner and acknowledgment in the tournament program. Friends of Quincy Hospital ($100) are acknowledged in the tournament program.

The Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation provides support for advanced medical technologies and services at Quincy Hospital.

The tournament is chaired by Quincy Hospital physicians Peter Barrett, MD and Peter Ambrus, MD. To play in or support the tournament, call Joan Schwartz at the Quincy Hospital Charitable Foundation at 617/773-6100, ext. 4016.

Police status report

In his monthly report to selectmen, Police Chief Brian Noonan said there were ten arrests in April: four for outstanding warrants, one for operation under the influence of alcohol, one for operating a motor vehicle after license suspension, one for operating a motor vehicle without a license, one for being a minor in possession of alcohol and two for protective custody.

There were also three breaking and enterings reported; all were businesses, he said.

Noonan said that every member of the Cohasset police including the Animal Control Officer has been issued a bullet-proof vest. The total purchase price for the vests was $7,011. Arrangements were made with the vendor to seek reimbursement directly from the Executive Office of Public Safety.

9-1-1 training conducted

Ten dispatchers, 13 police officers, one police civilian employee and two firefighters have completed E-9-1-1 NYNEX training over the past two weeks, police said. The full-time and weekend dispatchers have started working for the town, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

Noonan said that the cut-over date of 9-1-1 has been changed from May 10 to June 7.

"Although we are anxious to begin the E9-1-1 service, the extra time will allow us to do additional training and make up for equipment delays," he said.

Public works garage is needed

To the Editor:

As I reported at the recent town meeting, I would like to express the Cohasset Capital Budget Committee's approval of the proposed public works garage for Cohasset. The capital budget committee has reviewed the proposal, and we feel that the garage is necessary for Cohasset and an effective use of the town's budget resources.

The public works garage will provide three benefits for Cohasset. First, it will contribute to an extension of the useful life of the town's equipment, including the trucks, tractors and plows. This equipment, because of very limited facilities, is generally stored outside year round, thus the weather is contributing significantly to the aging of the equipment. This problem will be resolved with the garage.

Second, the garage provides for space and facilities to conduct more effective in-house maintenance and repair of the equipment, which, like the storage benefit, will directly contribute to extending the life of the equipment.

Third, the garage will ultimately provide the means for the long-term consolidation of three town departments: highway, tree and park, and the RTF. This consolidation will allow for more effective sharing of equipment (ultimately reducing the amount of equipment purchased in the future), and allow for a more effective management of staffing issues.

These benefits will have a direct financial benefit to Cohasset, as the garage will pay for itself over the long run. The public works garage is a unique opportunity for Cohasset to invest in a facility which will provide a greater long-term financial return than its cost to the town.

letters

The design of the garage is appropriate to meet these benefits now and in the future without being excessive or requiring significant future maintenance. The garage study committee has successfully accomplished its goal to design a building that meets the competing needs of space versus cost control. We compliment the committee on their excellent work.

The public works garage should be built for Cohasset.

Mark A. Baker
Chairman, Capital Budget Committee

Keep library open Sundays

To the Editor:

As a trustee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, I would like to point out the kind of impact the defeat of Question #2 would have on Cohasset's library services. Although the library's budget would be cut only $8,000, salaries, and therefore hours the library is open, constitute the only line in our budget we can. The library is currently open 33 Sundays of the year, three hours in the afternoon. Because we are paying higher salaries for Sunday work, this is our most expensive open time and Sundays would need to be eliminated. In addition, the library would be required to close three more hours during the week.

The taxpayers, the librarians, the staff, the trustees and the Friends have worked hard to provide an excellent small library for Cohasset. We can only make these resources available to citizens and students during open hours.

Schools need 'yes' vote

To the Editor:

A "yes" vote on the override May 13 will cost us. The annual cost to the average homeowner will be $109 (based on an average assessed value of $242,000 in Cohasset).

As an active realtor in this community I am struck over and over again by the expressed concerns of potential homebuyers relative to the quality of the schools in this community. Simply put, a family who is willing and able to spend $365,000 (the current average list price in Cohasset) for a home wants and expects good schools. If they get the impression that the schools do not measure up (as compared to communities with similarly valued homes) that factor can be reason enough to buy elsewhere.

The decision of one family to not buy a home in Cohasset because of their judgment about the schools does not, of course, impact the overall market. But if that decision should be multiplied, the impact would be felt. While you or I may have no plans today to sell our homes, for most of us that day will come, and on that day we would come face to face with the long term financial consequences of a "no" vote. Believe me, it will cost us.

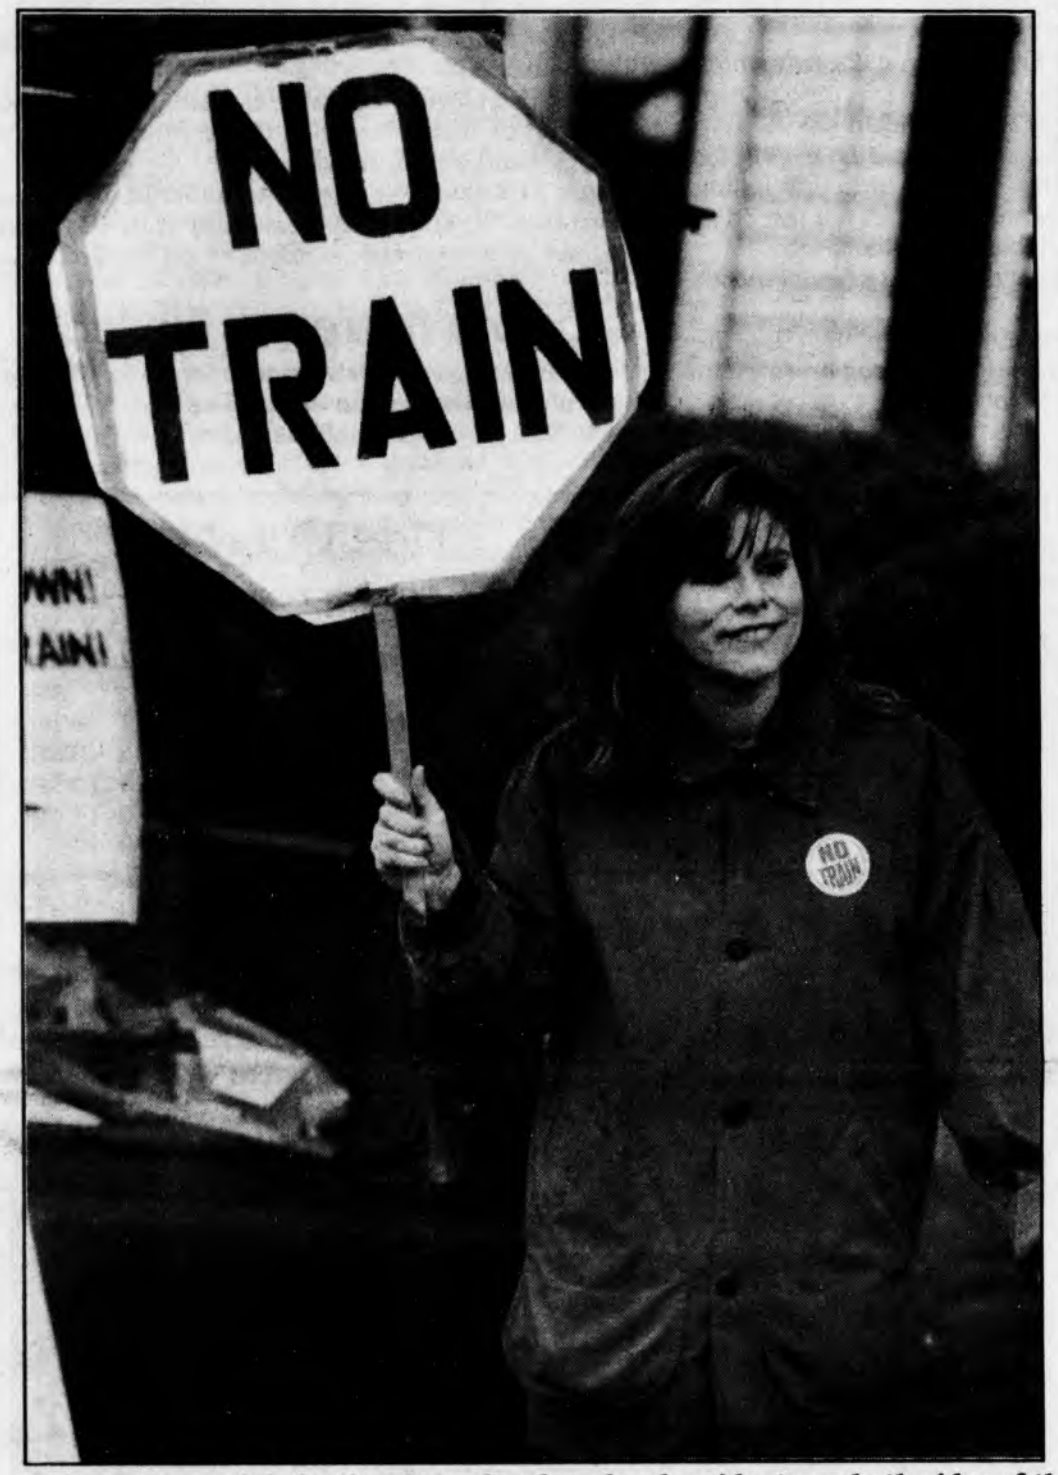
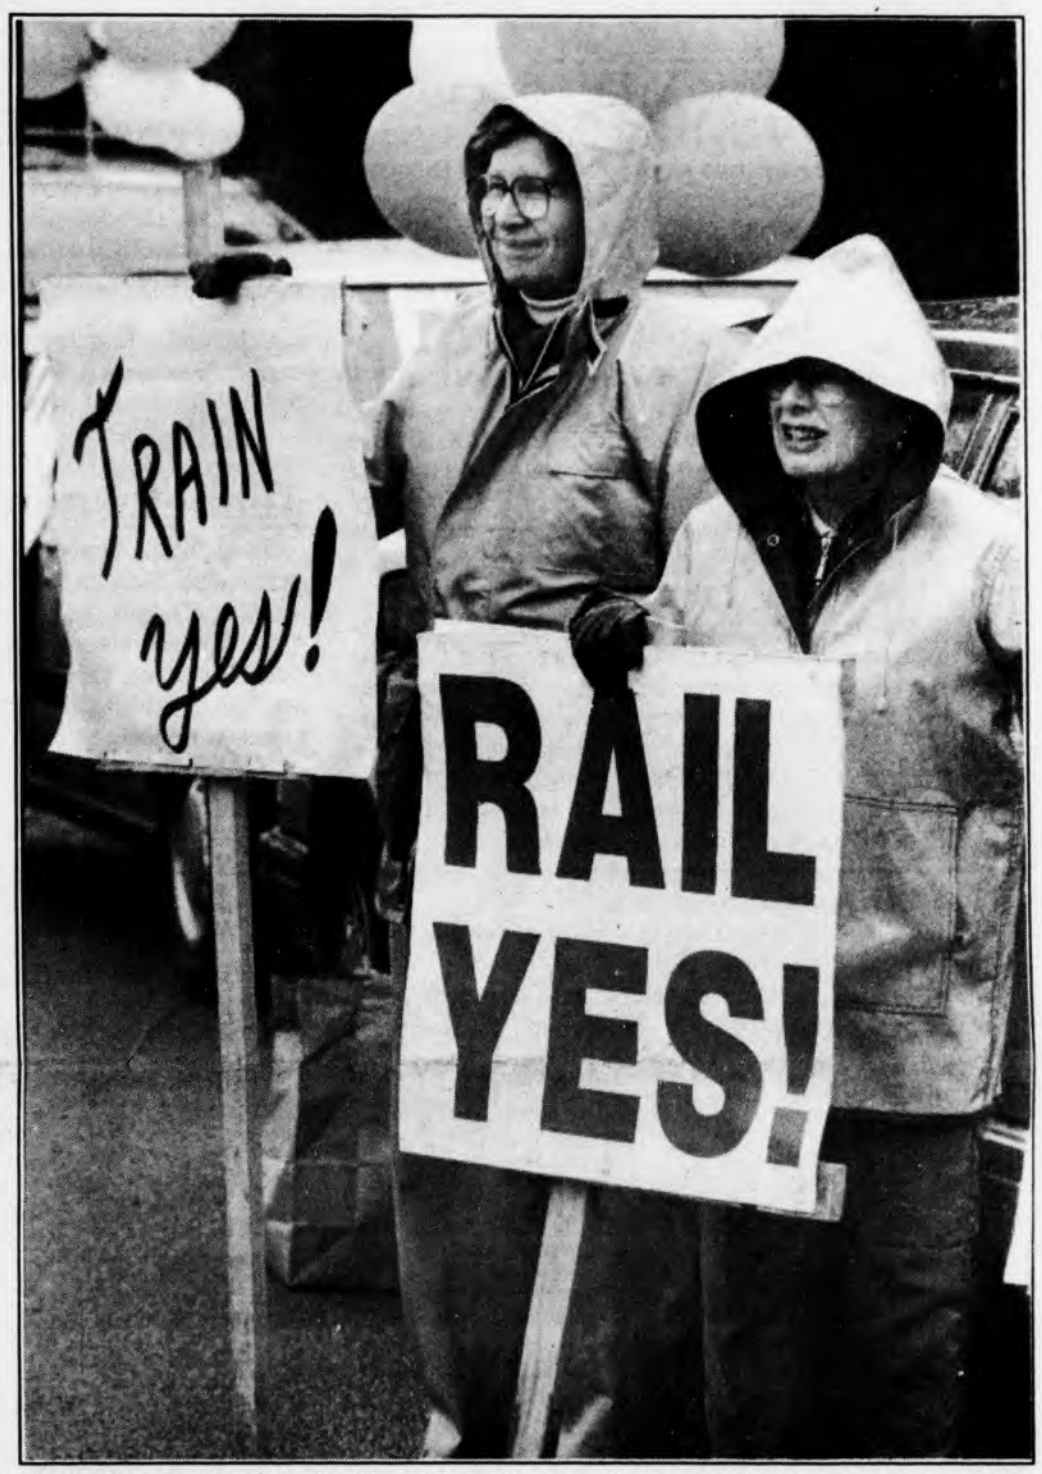
Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XVII, No. 29 | Thursday, May 18, 1995 | 1-800-649-6661 | 75 cents





Cohasset's special election Saturday drew local residents on both sides of the train issue. At left is Barbara Crowley who is opposed to restoration of the Greenbush Line and at right are Sheila Evans and Jacqueline Whipple campaigning for yes votes. The 'yes' votes edged out the no's by the slim margin of only three votes.

Selectmen's storm overshadows Edison meeting

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

When they came to town hall Tuesday night, Eastern Edison officials had intended to discuss power outages during weather emergencies, and wound up getting caught in a storm between selectmen.

There was smooth sailing for the first hour and fifteen minutes of the meeting, as the officials outlined their efforts to improve service during bad weather.

But, when selectman Peter Pratt asked what the town could do to enforce the company's promises, it was time to post storm warnings.

"We're a small town and don't have the staff," Pratt said, asking if the town's situation could be brought to the attention of the Department of Public Utilities, which regulates utilities and the state attorney general's office, which enforces regulations.

"Why are you asking this?" selectman Michael Sullivan wanted to know. "They're doing everything they

Shaw's moves parking to avoid wetlands

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

In an effort to reduce the impact on the substantial wetlands on the site, consultants for Shaw's supermarkets have proposed moving some of the parking.

They plan to locate 48 parking spaces behind the Bergson Ice Cream building. The spaces were originally slated to go behind what is called Retail C, a small building to be built south of the Bergson site.

Speaking to the conservation commission Tuesday night, consultant Larry Wagner said the change was made in an effort to keep parking as far from wetlands as possible.

Railroad prevails in photo finish

By Mary Ford

Saturday's election didn't put an end to the Greenbush debate.

In the only train referendum so far this year in a Greenbush corridor town — Cohasset voters sent a mixed message to the Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority (MBTA) which is expected to decide the rail line's fate in June.

The question asking if voters favor restoration of the train passed by the narrowest of margins with 1,383 saying yes and 1,380 saying no.

However 1,329 voters said they'd use the train to commute if such a service was available. That's about four times the number the MBTA has projected for Cohasset.

"That number is significant," said Selectman Martha Gjesteby, a rail proponent.

But Coastal Coalition founder Nancy Buckley said regardless of what percentage of people want the train "it's a financial travesty, a disaster."

Nearly 59 percent or 2,829 of the town's registered voters cast ballots Saturday.

Forty-five percent voted in the last Greenbush referendum in April 1991. At that time 1,324 favored and 754 voted against the railroad project. A second question on the 1991 Greenbush ballot failed by about 400

Cohasset's week

Water restrictions in effect

Effective May 1, all Cohasset water department customers are asked to follow an odd/even watering schedule. Those living in even-numbered houses are able to water on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Residents in odd-numbered houses may water on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday. There will be no watering on Mondays.

Summer water restrictions still remain in effect because all distribution improvements have not been completed, water department officials said.

Discoloration may occur

The Cohasset Water Department has announced that during the next two weeks the inside of the water storage tank will be cleaned, which may result in temporary discoloration of the water. The condition is only temporary, and the water is safe to drink.

Town bond rating is up

Cohasset's bond rating has been upgraded from A to A1, selectmen learned this week.

"Cohasset is a primarily residential coastal community 20 miles south of Boston, with wealth and housing values approaching twice the Commonwealth average," Moody's said in an informational release on the rating change. Moody's is a rating service which is based in New York but has an office in Boston.

"Per capita income is growing faster than the state. Unemployment rate has historically been low, a majority of the residents commute to Boston for employment.

"Debt burden and debt per capita are very low relative to medians and debt is retired rapidly. There is a limited amount of debt relative to size and affluence of tax base. Capital needs appear modest, with the largest need (sewers) to be funded in part from low-interest loans and subsidies from the Massachusetts Water Pollution Abatement Trust.

"Cohasset maintains satisfactory reserves and good liquidity. A trend of rising free cash indicates larger surpluses being generated, and a willingness to override Proposition 2-1/2 periodically provides additional flexibility. Debt serves comprises a modest portion of operating revenues."

Treasurer/Collector Elizabeth Ripley said the rating upgrade will help the town get a better borrowing rate and therefore save the town money.

Clerk's hours increased

In a majority vote this week, selectmen okayed increasing the ambulance billing clerk's hours from 15 to 20 per week.

The increase will cost an additional $2,790 which will come out of the fire department's overtime budget next fiscal year, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

The increase in hours makes the position eligible for health insurance and other benefits although billing clerk Jane Henderson has said she does not intend to take the health insurance benefit, Lincoln said.

"I desperately need help with clerical work," Lincoln said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby voted against the increase. She said it was sending the wrong message in light of the recent override vote.

Tebbetts named to board

Selectmen appointed Edwin H. "Ned" Tebbetts, 9 Jerusalem Rd., to the mosquito control board this week.

Vacancies exist on the Hagerty Committee, Personnel Committee, Common Historic District Committee, and the call firefighter study committee. Citizens interested in serving should call the selectmen's office at 383-9900 for information.

Spofford is appointed

At its meeting last week, the school committee named Robert Spofford to the school facilities committee. He replaces Richard Grinnell, who resigned because he is moving.

Schedule change protested

At the next school committee meeting, Tuesday, May 30, students will be given time to discuss their reactions to the new schedule changes, which have resulted in the loss of a week's vacation.

School committee chairman Ralph Kidder said he received a call from a high school student who requested the time. He said a petition will also be presented to the committee.

Kidder said the student was intelligent and pleasant to talk with. "It was a wonderful call."

The other members said they would enjoy talking with the students.

"I would welcome a dialogue with the students explaining to them the educational reasons for the changes," said Nancy Sandell.

James Kirk said, "We missed a wonderful marketing opportunity. We should have announced this as a way to extend your summer vacation."

Step rate increase OK'ed

Selectmen approved a step rate increase for Mary M. Farrell of the town accountant's office from $9.70 per hour to $10.14 per hour effective June 14.

Dog hearing sequel has same ending

Selectmen have rejected a compromise which would allow a dog that has allegedly frightened its neighbors on several occasions over 18 months to stay in town.

Attorney Steven Weiss, who represents dog owner Matthew Fitzpatrick of 68 Pleasant Street, suggested the town enter into non-binding mediation with Fitzpatrick and work into a "win-win situation." He said Fitzpatrick would install an electric fence and agree to keep the animal permanently restrained. Penalties for violating the agreement would include fines and jail time, he explained.

Selectmen initially banished Maui, who is described as a boxer/Rottweiler mix, last June after the dog was reported loose. Prior to that order after earlier complaints, they ordered Fitzpatrick to keep the dog penned or on a leash at all times or the dog would be banished from Cohasset.

But the dog has remained in town pending Fitzpatrick's appeal of the order.

The compromise would be an alternative to a long court process involving the serving of subpoenas to all five selectmen and the Fitzpatrick's neighbors who have complained about the dog, Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson said.

He explained that currently the town is having trouble getting over "the preliminary hurdle" involving appeals because of the way the statute is written. Under the statute the town must prove that the dog is a nuisance because of viciousness or excessive barking.

Weiss warned that the issue is solely whether the dog is a nuisance "if you can't find a violation of the statue — the dog can't be banished at all."

He said judges have found that a dog does not have a vicious disposition even when it has bitten.

That prompted an incredulous Selectman Michael H. Sullivan to interject: "it has a friendly disposition but likes to bite?"

"The statute means a certain thing and that is all that is before you," Weiss said.

But if Fitzpatrick is willing to admit a violation of the board's order to keep the dog restrained is subject to criminal penalties — selectmen wouldn't be involved in the court process, Henderson said.

Selectman Sullivan dismissed the compromise stating that there was nothing to stop Fitzpatrick from appealing again.

"(That's assuming) he has an unlimited amount of money and would enjoy being a criminal defendant.

"Fitzpatrick has not enjoyed being a party to litigation at all," Weiss said.

Selectmen conducted a hearing which lasted 2-1/2 hours this week in which several neighbors said Maui had acted in a threatening manner frightening them in their yards and driveways. The testimony, which was more detailed than in the hearing last year, will be used to bolster the town's case alleging that the dog is vicious.

At the end of the proceedings, selectmen ordered the dog banished again.

"Take steps to do it immediately under any law we can get out hands on," Sullivan said.

Henderson said the town would issue a written decision and would seek other remedies including seeking a way to take the dog into custody until the matter is resolved.

Cohasset letter carriers collect food for pantry

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

United States Postal Service letter carriers didn't just deliver mail on Saturday. They collected food—1-1/2 tons of it in Cohasset alone.

Postmaster James Hooley said Monday that 2,902 pounds of food was collected "and more is still coming in."

This is the first year that Massachusetts letter carriers joined with their colleagues in other parts of the country to collect non-perishable food items for local food pantries. The National Association of Letter Carriers is in its fifth year of conducting the annual drive to re-stock the shelves of their community groups who feed the hungry, shelter the homeless, and give a hand to people during hard times.

"The response was fantastic," Hooley said, adding that it will now be an annual event in Cohasset.

Hooley extended his thanks to people of Cohasset for their generosity and to the volunteers who made the food collection a success.

All food items collected in Cohasset were donated to the Cohasset Food Pantry located at the Second Congregational Church on Highland Avenue.

Marjorie Steele, the food pantry director, said Tuesday that 25 Cohasset families use the food pantry. It is open for an hour Tuesday morning and a hour in the evening, with six to ten families coming in each week.

Neither the letter carriers nor the food pantry volunteers knew what to expect, Hooley said. One volunteer arrived at the post office in a station wagon, expecting that vehicle would be adequate to pick up the donations.

Instead, the letter carriers' shop steward and a clerk had to use trucks to carry away the rest.

Hooley said he learned from the food pantry volunteers that the food collected on Saturday would keep the pantry stocked through August. Local pantries have reported that donations peak at Thanksgiving and Christmas and fall off dramatically during the summer. This collection by the letter carriers comes at the best time of year, Hooley said.

Steele concurred, saying, "Everyone thinks of us in November and December. This food will hold us for months."

She said the collection produced a "wonderful variety" of items that showed her that donors were aware of the pantry's needs. Popular—and needed—items were spaghetti and spaghetti sauce, condiments, canned fruits and vegetables, cereal, juices, tuna, peanut butter, jelly, and snacks.

With these recent donations of non-perishable foods, the pantry is able to use any cash donations to purchase meats and fresh produce, Steele said.

Similar success was reported in Hingham and Hull, where a total in excess of 16,000 tons of food was collected. Three tons collected from Hull was donated to Wellspring in that town. The five tons collected in Hingham was used to stock the Interfaith Food Pantry at the Second Parish Church, Friends of the Homeless, the Mary Martha Learning Center, and Project Turnabout.

Hooley said next year he hopes to involve local schools, churches, and community groups to publicize the food collection drive.

Steele said that anyone who may have missed the food drive on Saturday can drop off donations at the Second Congregational Church, Monday to Fri[illegible] 9 a.m. to noon.

Voters say yes to tax hike for garage, general budget

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The two overrides in Saturday's special election both won with about 56 percent of the vote.

The general override for $358,000, which will go into the town's general fund and cover operating expenses, passed muster by those who voted with a margin of 1,584 to 1,116.

With almost the same vote the public works garage requiring a debt exclusion override passed 1,589 to 1,115.

While Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown sympathized with the 1,000-plus who voted no — and who may be on a fixed income and concerned about the tax rate rising — he said the town "unfortunately can't run under 2-1/2."

Prop. 2-1/2 is a state law that caps the amount taxes can go up by 2-1/2 percent without an override.

In March town meeting approved a fiscal year operating budget that was in the red. Without a successful override, a special town meeting would have been needed to cut the budget. Selectmen could have also called another override election to see if a smaller override would have been palatable with the voters.

The override will add 45 cents per $1,000 in valuation or about $108 annually to the taxes of a home valued at $242,000.

Bruce Edmonds of the Public Works Garage Study Committee was pleased that the garage, which will eventually consolidate the tree & park and highway departments, will finally become a reality.

"I want to thank the people for the vote of confidence they gave us," he said.

The garage estimated to cost about $752,000 will be paid through a bond issue and will add about $27 (6 cents per $1,000 valuation) to the tax bill of the typical Cohasset home.

Special Election: 2 1/2 override

OVERRIDE QUESTIONS

Question 1: Shall the town of Cohasset be allowed to exempt from Proposition 2 1/2, so called, the amounts required to pay the bond issued in order to design and construct a public works garage on property owned by the town of Cohasset off Cedar Street adjacent to the recycling and transfer facility?

votes when it included wording asking if the voter would support the project "if such restoration required a significant portion of its total costs paid by local taxpayers."

This year during discussions about the referendum, Selectman Jane Goedecke persuaded her fellow board members to make the Greenbush question as "non-editorial" as possible.

"The more qualifiers that are put in, the muddier the results will be," Goedecke said.

Selectman Peter Pratt was unsuccessful in getting "intermittent freight" inserted into the restoration question.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan said since there's more information out there about the train, it would be advantageous to get a more up-to-date idea about how the townspeople feel. He favored asking the two questions: one if the voter supports the train and the second if the voter would use it to commute.

This week selectmen approved the town's response to the Environmental Impact Report on Greenbush. The response, which was prepared by consultants Camp, Dresser & McKee, was paid for through a special town meeting appropriation. Selectmen are working on a cover letter which they said will include the results of the referendum and a statement from the board on Greenbush.

Wedding parking updates

Parking restrictions will be suspended on Linden Drive during a wedding reception at 480 Jerusalem Road from 3:30 p.m.. to 12 a.m., May 27.

Amanda Sweeney wrote to selectmen who approved her request this week. Sweeney said she would hire a police officer to direct traffic if necessary and will contact all the neighbors.

In another request, selectmen said they cannot approve use of Government Island for a wedding August 26 until the applicant brings a traffic proposal to the board. There is another wedding scheduled that afternoon at the Lightkeeper's residence and selectmen said there will not be enough parking on the island for both events.

Janice M. Wassmouth, who grew up in Cohasset, would like to hold her wedding on Gov't. Island near the Minot's Light Replica. She said guests could park at Kimball's by the Sea where her reception will be held.

Stop & Shop prepares wetlands removal

Donald Staszko, developer of Stop & Shop, was again before the conservation commission Tuesday night, this time explaining his plan to remove species from the wetlands are that is being moved from the ter to the back at Cohasset Plaza.

Two weeks ago the commission fined Staszko $7,500 for not following the approved work order the commission issued on the project.

Much of the discussion centered on safely catching and moving the animals, primarily turtles and frogs, now living in the area to be moved.

The animals will be caught in nets and released in the wetlands near Sohier St.

Thomas Callahan, conservation commission member, insisted that a biologist be on site at all times. Dr. Jerome Carr is handling the design of the project.

In addition, the commission asked for a plan on the site as built, since what is there now was not exactly what was originally approved.

Whelan served as delegate

Ann Whelan of Cohasset was recently named by Congressman Joseph Kennedy as a delegate to the 1995 White House Conference on Aging (WHCoA), held May 2-5, in Washington, D.C. The 1995 WHCoA was the fourth such conference in history and the last of this century. More than 2,250 delegates from all 50 states and the U.S. territoriesv gathered at the Washington Hilton Hotel to develop resolutions which will shape aging national policy over the next decade. Whelan is a council member of the Boston College Institute for Learning in Retirement.

The theme of the conference was "America Now and Into the 21st Century: Generations aging together with Independence, Opportunity, and Dignity." The agenda consisted of four issues: (1) Assuring Comprehensive Health Care Including Long Term Care, (2) Promoting Economic Security, (3) Maximizing Housing Support Service Options, and (4) Maximizing Options for a Quality Life.

around town

by Sallyann Chatterton

We must start out with an inspiration to all, a poem written by Elinor Whitney Kennedy, who resides at Thayer House in Hingham and will soon be 93 years old! It is entitled "The Old Oak Tree" and goes like this:

It was September '95
I came to reside
At Friends Victorian Manse
Created like God's Kingdom
Top of Mount Turkey Hill.

One day as I was walking
The Old Oak Tree said to me,
How old do you think I am
Dear Lady of 93?

Just multiply your age by three
Then multiply three more by three
I started from an acorn
Dropped by friend squirrel
Grew to a tender seedling
As God gave me strength to unfurl.

Spring came along, my leaves came out
Branches grew and extended throughout
My trunk got wider, my arms bulged
Birds seemed to like me, as a home above.

Wind and rain took over
Gave me food and drink
Now, I'm a Stately Tree
Rooted, strong, sturdy, stupendous and in the "pink".

Old ladies still walk in front of me
Stop and admire me, myself a Tree
The Old Oak Tree.

As for me, myself and I gather strength
As I hobble by for I am that old, old Lady, almost 93
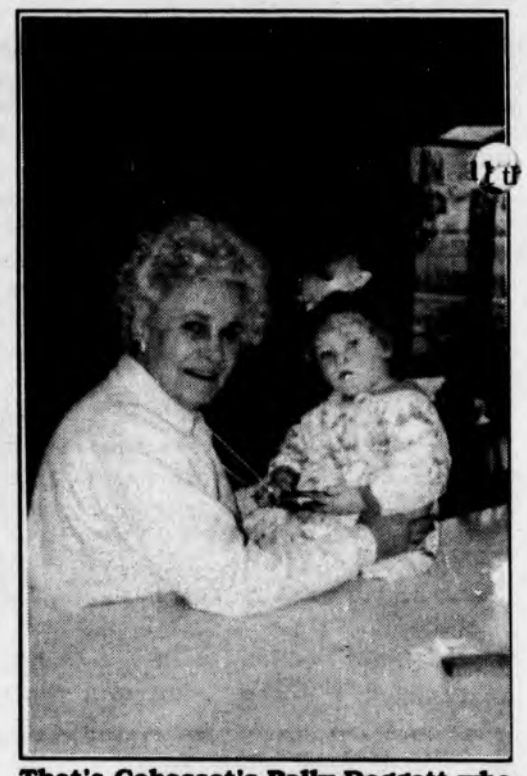
Given strength from the old, old Oak Tree.

The Rev. Gary Ritts, center stage in straw boater, joins the chorus line in practicing the hilarious movements routine of "My Favorite Son" segment in rehearsal for Congo Capers of '95 to be presented at Cohasset High School, May 19 & 20. Others (L-R) are Jack DeLorenzo, Ami Argus, Dotty Myers, Tom Myers and Annette Sawchuk. Tickets are $5 and are available by calling 383-1129.



That's Cohasset's Polly Doggett who traveled to Orem, Utah last month to visit with her 22-month-old granddaughter Alexandra (shown here) and her son and daughter-in-law, Dana and Chris Doggett.

The South Shore Art Center is pleased to announce the appointment of Rhonda Corey Myers of Cohasset as director of public relations for the center. Rhonda received her degree in communications from Boston University and has worked for the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau and US Trust Company. She was a prior member of the SSAC Board of Directors and Board of Advisors. She's busy adjusting to her new position at the SSAC and chairing the June Festival on the Common. It's the 40th anniversary for the festival so we expect a great weekend of events.

Rhonda lives in Cohasset with her husband Michael and children, Elizabeth, a seventh-grader at CHS and Tommy, a fourth-grader at Deer Hill.

Some of you have asked if we could give Fran Walton's new address, here it is: Fran Walton, Queen Anne Nursing Home, 50 Recreation Rd., Hingham, O2043. Drop her a note, she'd love it. It still seems strange not seeing her "around town" with a car full of dogs!

Don't forget that this is the weekend that the Second Congregational Church is presenting "Congo Capers II," to be held at Cohasset High auditorium the 19th and 20th at 8 p.m. We all know about JoAnn Fictner's enthusiasm and prowess as a director, she's at the helm for this one, with all of the music under the direction of Bob Leavitt. We are even hearing of people purchasing tickets for both nights (they are $5), so call 383-0345 to get your good seats now.

We certainly hope that Phyllis Leighton will soon be up and about very soon! The good news is that she is home from the hospital, she had to have more knee surgery. Lets hope that's the end, right Phyllis?

We must extend congratulations to our postal service this week, they went above and beyond the call of duty as they collected non perishable goods last Saturday, to be given to those in need. It was reported that they received a lot of food — their efforts should be recognized by all of us, and we certainly hope that their backs didn't ache on Mother's

Cohasset Diversity Committee fund-raiser is enlightening event

By Diana Kinch and Nancy Herlin
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Diversity Committee, recently affiliated with the Cohasset PSO, hosted a successful fundraising event Sunday, May 7. It was well attended by a wide range of people in our community and was successful in creating an atmosphere where people can learn about themselves and others in a positive way.

The South Shore Arts Center was a wonderful backdrop for this gathering, accentuating the global nature of this multi-cultural event with a wide variety of art from the current exhibit "Myth, Meaning, Metaphor: Artists works in process." Different foods from countries such as Poland, Ukraine, Lebanon, Italy, Israel, Great Britain, Hungary and Mexico were supplied by many of the over 100 attendees. A courtesy bar served wines and beers from around the world. Music highlighted the countries of South Africa, Ireland, Brazil, China and Peru.

Many thanks to the local merchants who showed their support of the committee and its mission by supplying donated items. The merchandise was handsomely arranged in baskets that were raffled at the end of the evening. "Diversity Enlightens" T-shirts and sweatshirts were sold and are still available. Donations are still being accepted and suggestions for events or projects that would support the mission are encouraged. Please call Susan Etkind at 383-6602 or Nancy Herlin at 383-1463

Day!

Did all of you golfers hear about Jordan Fiore? Well, he is an eighth-grader at CHS and a member of the golf team. When they were at the Strawberry Valley Golf Course last month, he shot a hole-in-one. It was on the seventh hole, 132 yards, par 3. All we can say is WOW!

If sales are any indication, gardens in Cohasset should be spectacular this year. The Community Garden Club of Cohasset had the Lighthouse Keeper's Cottage full of unique plants, and they were all sold by early afternoon! After yours have taken root, why not give Ginger Ferenz a call to take a photo, so that we may all share in the beauty (383-2863).

Hope everyone had a great Mother's Day — what did you do? Or, what did they do for you? Call me, and we will tell all about it!

Workshops at Pratt Library

The Paul Pratt Library will present the fourth in an annual series of workshops this spring. Artist Nancy Connolly will teach children how to create three-dimensional scenes and characters for tiny dioramas, inspired by favorite animal stories. Materials will be provided but children are encouraged to bring their own favorite craft items, including beads, old jewelry and bits of fabric.

Four two-hour workshops are planned. Space is limited to the first 20 children who sign up for each class.

Workshop dates are Monday, May 22 (gr. 1-3), Tuesday, May 23 (gr. 4-6), Tuesday, May 30 (g. 1-3) and Thursday, June 1 (gr. 4-6). Workshops will be conducted from 3 to 5 p.m. Children should sign up for only one workshop each at the children's room of the library.

The classes are sponsored and funded by the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council, supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council. There is no fee.

Hats off to the Post Office

The post office and its participating patrons in Cohasset deserve a big pat on the back this week.

Local letter carriers in town collected nearly 3,000 pounds of food Saturday from residents who responded to a mailing asking for donations of non-perishable food items for the Cohasset Food Pantry housed in the Second Congregational Church.

This is the fifth year that the National Association of Letter Carriers — which collected 32 million tons of food in the drive last year — helped restock the shelves of community groups who feed the hungry, shelter the homeless, and give a hand to people during hard times.

Along with its counterparts in rest of the state, the Cohasset Post Office joined the program this year and plans to make it an annual event.

Postmaster James Hooley said the food drive comes at the best time of year because local pantries report that donations peak at Thanksgiving and Christmas and fall off during the summer.

Letter carrier Richard Leach said next year plans are to involve school children to help get the word out by making posters to advertise the drive.

This program provides a great service and we're proud that Cohasset letter carriers have decided to make the food drive an annual tradition.

Lots of letters

We want to thank all who wrote to the Cohasset Mariner over the past two weeks on the train, override, issues surrounding Cohasset Heights Landfill and other topics. Last week, we received a record 36 letters and while we allotted one full page and three half pages for letters —there just wasn't enough space to fit them all.

We apologize to those whom we told their letters would appear. If it's any consolation to the pro- and anti-train forces — citizens on both sides of that issue were mad at us. We made the decision not to run any train letters last week because running one would mean running two (one on each side) and there simply wasn't space. Obviously, since override was to be decided Saturday it was important to squeeze those letters in for them to have any relevance.

Although the Cohasset train referendum has been held — the train issue hasn't been resolved and therefore, we feel many of those letters are still pertinent and will appear in the weeks ahead along with other letters.

Appalachia Service Project thanks volunteers

letters

To the Editor:

Last Saturday we held the annual Appalachia Service Project yard sale. Although it was an undisputed success financially (more than $3,500 was made on yard sale and silent auction items), it also gave a wonderful opportunity for families, individuals and local businesses to reach out and help our efforts in a major way.

I am so thankful for all the adult and student volunteers for their hours of work setting up during the week and cleaning up after it was over. In addition, without the terrific donations from local individuals and families, we would not have enjoyed such a record-breaking success. And a special thank you must go to our local businesses. You have embraced and supported the Appalachia Service Project and I want to thank you for that support and for your donations (worth more than $500) to our silent auction.

Whether you donated items, purchased treasures or worked at the yard sale, each of you participated in the Appalachia Service Project experience by helping to make our 1995 trip to Kentucky a reality. Thank you.

Thanks to those who helped with Walk

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children — South Shore Friends Association, I would like to thank the following Cohasset High School students for volunteering their time to help us launch the first Walk for Children: Chris Adams, Alia Afshar, Jemilah Afshar, Holly Brennock, Kate Cibelli, Whitney Cook, Caitlin Connolly, Megan Connolly, Dave Cristoffel, Lauren DeVito, Missy Gallant, Maggie Goedecke, Caitlin Hurley, John-Paul Laugelle, Andrea Mercurio, Nicole Peterson, Elaine Tosi and Julie Workman.

The Walk for Children would not have been possible without the help and support we got from these outstanding students. The proceeds from the walk will benefit MSPCC's Goodstart Program, an early intervention child abuse prevention program.

May thanks to all of you for your dedication and commitment to children and families.

Central terminal should be looked at

To the Editor:

May 4, Mariner Newspapers admirably summarized my "Accord Terminal" proposal as an alternative to Greenbush train service. It is my hope that this proposal may broaden a pre-defined polar debate to include the real possibility of better commuter-rail service.

Some important conclusions reached in comparing the MBTA Greenbush proposal with a multi-modal central rail terminal for the South Shore are as follows:

A central commuter-rail terminal at Route 3 would save about one-thousand travel hours per day for the Greenbush service-area population as defined by the MBTA, when compared to the Greenbush train. This figure results arithmetically from the MBTA's own time and projected ridership figures, and rises dramatically if more realistic travel-times for the Greenbush trains are assumed. It also allows a ten-minute transfer time from shuttle buses for half of the project area commuters, and considers effects of crossing gates on local traffic.

About one-thousand additional commuter-hours are saved every day by the expanded population served by a Route 3 central terminal. Ridership, as compared to Greenbush service restoration, would be increased by about 60 percent.

A central-terminal alternative, with or without shuttle-bus services, significantly reduces area-wide "vehicle-miles of travel" and resulting vehicular air pollution, when compared to the MBTA Greenbush proposal. It should be noted, however, that commuter-rail services have not in the past resulted in any long-term improvement to air quality.

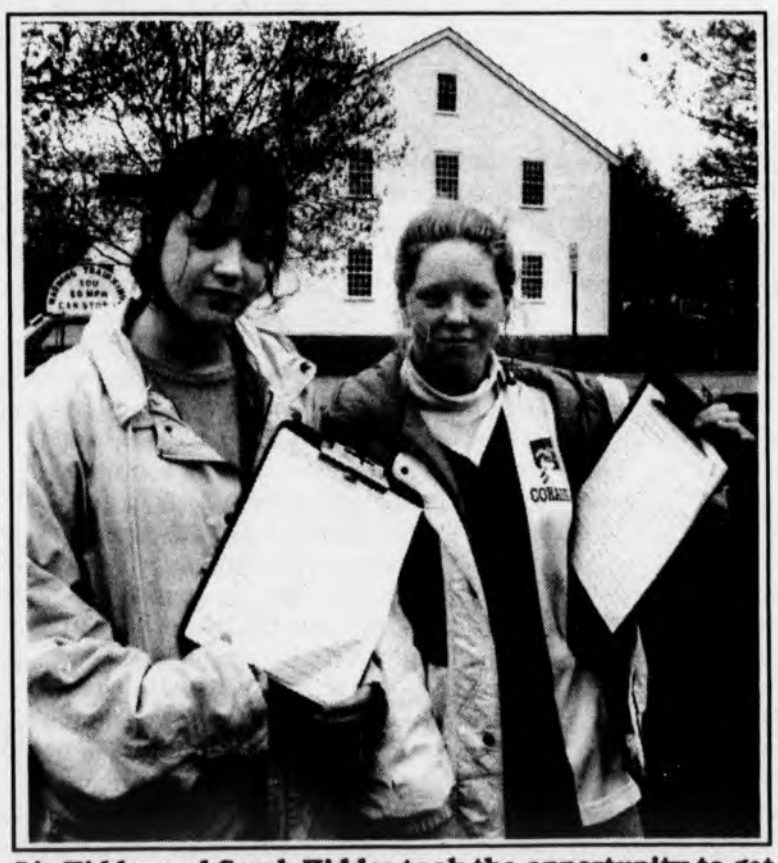
Election day in Cohasset draws a crowd

Kara Lea Cogill looks for support for the two overrides on Saturday's special election ballot. Kara got her wish. Both overrides passed muster by winning majority support among the nearly 60 percent of registered voters who went to the polls.

Staff photos/Alan Chapman

Election worker Dorothea Parmenter accepts ballots in town hall. Voting was steady during the 10 hours the polls were open.



Lis Kidder and Sarah Kidder took the opportunity to get signatures for their petition to restore school vacations next year. The school committee has combined the February and April vacations into one in March.

Max (owned by the Coastal Coalition's Melissa Macri) suggests an alternative to the train. The question asking if Cohasseters favor restoring the Greenbush Line passed by three votes.

City planner reflects on two visits

Resident finds Russia is at a fork in the road

By Laura Ricketson Doherty
Mariner correspondent

While most townspeople followed the transition of the Russian people from Communism to Democracy in the news media, resident Burk Ketcham was experiencing it, firsthand. Expect the unexpected was the rule of the day for the two-time volunteer city planner sent by the Citizens Democracy Corps (CDC) of Washington, D.C, Ketcham was the first American to live in Novaya Ladoga in at least 70 years. This city of 13,000, located 75 miles northeast of St. Petersburg, had been closed to Westerners to protect its military base and defense industries.

When he first arrived there, in January, 1993, its deputy mayor asked if he had been afraid to come. He immediately replied "No," but as an afterthought asked, "Should I have been?"

Although he had taken the precaution to receive the necessary shots, had armed himself with various medications for medical emergencies and even a package of syringes having learned that Russians recycle them — preparation for his first trip was rushed with very little time to learn even the most basic Russian phrases.

He spent his first weekend in St. Petersburg, alone, his CDC contacts were out of town. Coffee had to be made using bottled water because tap water is so polluted. Just exiting his apartment was a major test of endurance. There were a total of five different locking devices. Crime is a major problem especially in large cities. The influence of the Russian Mafia is pervasive with most business owners having to pay for "protection," Ketcham explains,

It was during that weekend while waiting to continue on to his assignment, Ketcham first was introduced to the unique experience of food shopping. Waiting in line at the local supermarket is nothing compared to the three lines he experienced.

"First, you line up to make your selections, next you proceed to another line to pay for them and receive a chit which describes what you have bought and finally, there's another line where you present your chit and get your order, unbagged," he recalls.

On the second day of his stay, Ketcham decided to attend the ballet that evening. Buying a ticket was an ordeal especially when he found that his sign language had resulted in two tickets. During the day, he admired the public buildings now completely restored to their former splendor, visited the renowned Hermitage Museum and stopped for dinner in the Crystal Room of the Astoria Hotel, recently renovated by its new foreign owners. Clientele in the dining room, according to Ketcham, was a "United Nations of people, with the exception of Russians who can only afford to work there."

When he returned to the theater and the curtain went up, he discovered a movie screen and that the ballet was actually the movie, "Scent of a Woman," with Al Pacino.

Finally, he arrived in Novaya Ladoga but only after several mishaps including dealing with a drunk driver and a meeting with a Russian of questionable motives who claimed to have influence in the "right places."

"Not the kind of guy I would like to meet in a blind alley," Ketcham recalls.

Lunch was with the mayor, deputy mayor and his recently assigned translator, Tanya. It included cold cuts, salad, borscht, chicken and cappuccino. Toasts of vodka followed. Politeness dictates that these must be tossed down quickly rather than sipped.

He was then taken to the flat where he was to live for the next several weeks, a second-floor walkup in a five-story apartment block. His shared entry was dirty, needed to be painted and smelled of cat urine .

The units, usually leased from the city at a very low rent, sometimes are sold to private individuals as a type of condominium ownership. Examples of shoddy workmanship were everywhere especially in the bathroom where the sink rested on a steel support from the wall on one side and on a piece of wood resting on the bathtub on the other. The drain hole fit into the drain pipe but was not fastened. The faucet system served both the tub and the sink with a long reaching spout. There was no caulking. Stains from malfunctioning facilities in the apartment above were evident on the ceiling.

Because of conditions at city hall, Ketcham did most of his work at his apartment. His assignment, to develop a tourism feasibility study, was made difficult for several reasons. Without a computer or even a typewriter, all work was done in long hand. Requests for even the most basic information were, at first met with obvious suspicion by the mayor and the city architect. They, products of the former communist system, were still learning to be open and helpful. Eventually a rapport was developed and Ketcham feels that by the time he left, they realized he "was not a CIA agent in city planner clothes."

The completed report consisted of six maps and 120 pages of handwritten text on yellow-sheet pad. It had to be laboriously translated and even today Ketcham is unsure of the result. He describes how many of the words he had been using for years in planning reports have different meanings in Russian. For instance, as one way of increasing tourists, he suggested the introduction of bed and breakfast operations. This translated to be some sort of medical procedure.

Even copying his proposal presented a problem. Not a single copy machine existed in the area. It was necessary to go to St. Petersburg.

Ketcham did find the potential for tourism in Novaya Ladoga, the older part of which dates back to 1703. Most of the residential buildings located near the river waterfront are wooden with interesting facade details. Public buildings are of masonry construction and seem small replications of St. Petersburg architecture. The river opens into a very large lake.

There is even a yacht club, now public but with thoughts of changing to private. Its fleet included several sailboats sleeping up to seven.

The city, according to Ketcham, in many ways resembles Newport, R.I., the rehabilitation of which, ironically, he helped plan.

"The difference," he says, "is Newport had money, these people did not." For this reason, it was necessary to scale down what they could do.

MINUS 28 DEGREES

Even though Ketcham is a longtime New Englander, being in Russia during winter was definitely a challenge. Walking on sidewalks covered with inches of ice was treacherous. He resorted to taking baths even though the water was coffee-colored because it was the only place he was ever warm. But when the temperature dropped to minus 28 degrees, the city turned off the hot water to conserve fuel.

Even though Ketcham is a longtime New Englander, being in Russia during winter was definitely a challenge. Walking on sidewalks covered with inches of ice was treacherous. He resorted to taking baths even though the water was coffee-colored because it was the only place he was ever warm. But when the temperature dropped to minus 28 degrees, the city turned off the hot water to conserve fuel.

Despite this, it is obvious Ketcham was inspired by his experience and hopes to return to the area again, hopefully at a different time of year. His stories are numerous and varied. For instance, when the deputy mayor discovered that he was a widower (Ketcham was married to the former Helen Ketcham who wrote under the pen name Meg Haviland) she decided to play matchmaker and introduced him to not one but two women, both of whom were named Galina. There was Galina, the artist, and Galina, the librarian.

There were also many field trips, some to area schools where students pressed him for information on life in the United States, and celebrations such as his interpreter's name day,

One especially touching occasion was the 50th anniversary of the breaking of the German army's 900-day siege of Leningrad, now St. Petersburg. Novaya Ladoga played a role in breaking the siege by taking refugees and was a transshipment area for food and supplies.

When the mayor learned that Ketcham was a veteran of World War II, he was invited to speak.

"We lost many lives but nothing can compare with your losses and the determination of the people and the Russian armed services," he told them. During the siege the population declined from three to one million.

Many of those present told him of their hopes for peace between the two countries. An older man wearing the uniform of an admiral with great emotion presented Ketcham with a medal which he took from his chest. Other veterans followed.

"Three years in the United States Navy — no medals and I never saw an admiral," Ketcham recounts. "Two weeks in Russia, I meet an admiral and have four medals."

BACK AGAIN THIS YEAR

This year, once again Ketcham returned to Russia to Rostov-On-Don, a city of a million people in the south. He was to conduct an economic development study on how to use available resources.

The area surrounding the city, Ketcham notes, is adjacent to the Ukraine and agriculturally very rich. Industrially, however, the city is in terrible shape. Efforts in making the transition from a command to demand economy are Herculean.

Unlike the previous trip, Ketcham lived with a family consisting of four generations. The 80-year-old great-grandmother was a former engineer and designer of bridges, the 60-year-old grandmother was a water quality engineer. Her daughter, at 30, was a widow like the others and the mother of a four-year-old son. Average life span for the Russian male is only 59, that of women, a little longer. Ketcham feels this is due to stress, poor eating and drinking habits and inadequate medical care.

This lack became especially evident to Ketcham when he himself became seriously ill. Still uncertain as to the cause, he thinks it could have been a result of brushing his teeth in untreated

O'Keeffe's proposal makes sense

To the Editor:

I applaud the effort of Kevin O. O'Keeffe to develop a transportation plan for a commuter rail from Routes 3 and 228 in Rockland through the South Weymouth Air Base to the Plymouth line to South Station. It avoids the many problems of the MBTA Greenbush proposal and provides a viable alternative to automobile travel into Boston for a far greater number of South Shore residents than does the MBTA Greenbush Rail plan.

The hardships endured by commuters to Boston are horrendous. Relief is needed! The O'Keeffe proposal gives that relief without the hazards that the MBTA Greenbush Project carries. The MBTA Project is not a resurrected Old Colony Railroad — It is an experiment whose economic and aesthetic legacy will be with us for a long time whether or not it relieves the commuter problem.

It behooves all of us, and especially those who have been charged with making the final decision on the Greenbush Project, to study carefully Mr. O'Keeffe's alternative proposal. It is well thought out, carries detailed documentation and will cost significantly less in real dollars as well as in environmental upheaval.

Bring back the train!

To the Editor:

Hey, Cohasset! You are being offered a free beautiful modern train line — the kind that's been built and is being built all over the United States, not to mention every other part of Boston. It won't cost you anything more than you will be paying anyway to Uncle Sam, Massachusetts and Cohasset. Any information to the contrary is not true!

Why are we being offered this free wonder? Because for more than 30 years the South Shore has been polluting the air and clogging the city with our cars.

Some folks are trying to persuade you that the "sky will fall" if Greenbush is restored. We haven't been fooled yet by Chicken Little, have we?

'Greenbush support erodes'

To the Editor:

The Greenbush restoration ran into heavy opposition last week. Some interesting developments indicate that support for this project continues to erode. For instance, Mr. Joe Norton, former chairman of the CAC, publicly condemned the MBTA's EIR and now opposes the train.

The majority of Cohasset's selectmen are against the train. The MBTA accepted, then days later declined, an on-air debate with Ilana Marks of the Coastal Coalition. Wig Pierson blasted the MBTA's arrogance and their refusal to debate.

Ballot support in Cohasset was 82 percent in 1985, dipped to 64 percent in 1991 and dipped again to 50 percent in 1994 and 1995. The figures in Scituate indicate an even steeper drop in support. The longer the Greenbush debate goes on, the further support for this financial sinkhole erodes.

Railroad will be helpful

To the Editor:

As a lifetime resident of the South Shore, I recommend the restoration of the rail service between Boston and Greenbush.

I commuted every school day from Cohasset to Hingham between 1929 and 1935. Some years later I commuted from Cohasset to Boston every working day. During World War II, with gas rationing, the railroad provided our only means of transportation to jobs in Boston.

For commuters, like my father, who rode the train every day from 1920 through 1959, it was a reliable and relaxing way to travel. It was helpful to people and less harmful to the environment.

Eleanor G. Bleakie

Central terminal. . .

These basic improvements to the Greenbush proposal are achieved with one large station, three miles of track, and virtually no impact on residential neighborhoods. A central terminal at Route 3 allows significant improvements in every category and within every criterion applied by the MBTA in its own Environmental Impact Statements for "Transportation Improvements in the Greenbush Line Corridor." These benefits are realized simply by conceding a function to existing roads. The MBTA Greenbush proposal, even by standards deliberately chosen to favor it, is functionally defective. The service was discontinued with some wisdom.

Stranded with a high fever, 1,000 miles from western medicine in an area where half the hospitals had no running water, Ketcham recalls how he just didn't know what to do. He was flown to Moscow and placed in an apartment where two doctors treated him at midnight. They found his blood pressure abnormally high, a first for Ketcham who has always been healthy.

Because of this, Ketcham was forced to return home. He feels badly that he was unable to complete his study but nevertheless has sent officials an outline of his ideas.

On the return trip, he was accompanied by an export/import consultant, who had spent much time on business in Russia. He told Ketcham of a recent visit to an airplane factory which hadn't received an order for three years. Despite this, when he suggested to management that they convert to making metal parts which he knew to be in demand, his idea was refused.

"It's beneath us," he was told.

As a safety net, workers still received 75 percent of their salaries from the government.

"How long can they keep it up?" he asks.

Ketcham's final thoughts on his experiences as a volunteer are both a warning and a hope. Russia, he says, is a country where because of its past, an intelligent population suffers a third world existence.

"It is at another fork in the road. One can only hope it takes and sticks to the path which will place an individual's rights above those of the state," he says.

ROCKLAND TRUST, THE PREFERRED LENDER FOR SMALL BUSINESS

BIG ADVANTAGES FOR SMALL BUSINESS

You don't think small when it comes to your business. And neither does Rockland Trust. In fact, 79% of our commercial loans are to small businesses.* Recently, the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) recognized our contributions and service to growing businesses by designating us an SBA Preferred Lender. Five banks in the state hold this distinction and Rockland Trust is the only one headquartered in Southeastern Massachusetts.

As a Preferred Lender we have been delegated the authority to make SBA-guaranteed loans right in our offices rather than sending them to the SBA for review. This means that you get the funds you need, when you need them. To start your business or expand it. Our SBA lending team is ready to explain all the details and help you on your way to do what you do best. Growing your business.

Cohasset Health Board adopts Title V regulations

The board of health voted unanimously to adopt/amend the following regulations at its recent hearing held April 25 and May 2. Copy of entire document is on file at town clerk's office or may be purchased from board of health for $5.

SUMMARY:

Cohasset Board of Health Supplemental Regulations to 310 CMR 15.00 Title 5 of the State Environmental Code, 310 CMR 15.000 Standard Requirements for the Siting, Construction, Inspection, Upgrade, and Expansion of Onsite Sewage Treatment and Disposal Systems and for the Transport and Disposal of Septage.

SUBPART A: GENERAL PROVISIONS AND ENFORCEMENT

To obtain a disposal system installers permit a person must pass with a score of 80 percent on a test administered by the board of health.

When a Disposal System Construction Permit (DSCP) is transferred from one applicant to another, a "Transfer of Responsibility" form will be filed with and approved by the board of health. Applications for a DSCP are complete only when a signed DSCP application along with the appropriate fee, plans for construction and a certified list of abutters with certified mail receipts are received by the board. Applications for a DSCP must be received at least two weeks prior to a posted meeting to be considered at said meeting.

To receive a Certificate of Compliance, the applicant must present two copies of an As-Built plan with a certification by the engineer supervising the installation. The As-Built must show the lot on which the construction occurred; exact location of septic tank, distribution box(es) and the four corners of the soil absorption system; elevations of top of foundation; garage floor, inverts of septic tank and distribution box(es) and inverts of the ends of the pipes in the soil absorption system.

SUBPART B: SITING OF SYSTEMS

For new construction there shall be two deep observation holes in the primary and reserve areas of the proposed soil absorption system sewage disposal systems. Two percolation tests in the primary and one in the reserve area shall be performed for all new construction. For upgrades, testing requirements beyond those stated in 15.104 shall be at the discretion of the health agent.

Selectmen's storm overshadows Edison meeting

can. They're doing a fine job."

"How do you know?" Pratt demanded. "Do you have the technical background?"

"Peter, you are being a pain in the ass," Sullivan replied.

"I really appreciate that," Pratt said. "I'm being personally attacked."

Selectman chairman Merle Brown, who was sitting between the two men, covered his eyes and mumbled something, presumably telling them to stop.

Sitting at the other end of the table, selectman Martha Gjesteby started talking in a loud voice, in what appeared to be a thoroughly unsuccessful attempt to divert attention from the others.

Selectman Jane Goedecke, who had had her own fiery clash with Pratt last week over his complaint to a state agency without knowledge of the other board members, was absent.

The battle continued after the meeting.

Brown told them selectmen should not call each other bad names in open session. "Not here in public," he said.

"You called me a divisive name last week," Pratt told Sullivan.

"You were out of line, everything was going well," Sullivan replied.

TREES ARE THE PROBLEM

The meeting had gone smoothly and selectmen universally praised the efforts by Eastern Edison top brass, four of whom attended the session, including company president John Carny; Marc Mahoney, director of operations; Barbara Hassan, vice president; and Ruth Stetson, public relations executive.

The session was a continuation of the discussion selectmen started after the Christmas Eve storm, which left large parts of Cohasset without power for hours.

Officials admitted that the town was badly hurt in the storm. Cohasset has 1.8 percent of Eastern Edison's 174,000 customers, but the town suffered 9.5 percent of the power outages in that storm.

The executives explained that they very things which make Cohasset so popular: the ocean, the trees and distance from urban areas, all conspire to make the town susceptible to storm damage.

Mahoney said that tree damage is the biggest cause of lost power, with Cohasset being hit harder than most towns.

"When I think of Cohasset, I think of trees, which isn't a positive thing in my business," he told selectmen.

He said that 14.8 percent of Cohasset outages are caused by trees, compared with only 8.5 percent in the average community. (The utility provides electricity to 22 communities in Massachusetts for much of Rhode island through two sister companies.)

In a storm, 95 percent of outages are caused by trees, making Cohasset especially vulnerable.

"The town of Cohasset can expect to be hit twice as hard in a storm," he said.

Mahoney said the company has launched a massive effort to trim and cut down potentially hazardous trees.

One hundred and forty-four trees have been removed or pruned so far, he said, including 70 on South Main and North Main alone.

They are now working on Beechwood St., with other streets which face repeated outages — Atlantic Ave., Cedar St., Church St., Forest Ave. and Nichols Road slated for attention next.

He called "mature urban forest," large trees, often close to the road, the major culprits. These trees are also a major reason Cohasset is so popular.

But Mahoney said Cohasset's architecture is nice too. "Trim the trees and let the architecture show."

ANOTHER NEWPORT?

Mahoney said the firm has hired Peter Simpson of Hingham, a former tree warden in Newport, Rhode Island, to direct the tree-trimming effort. Workers have been told to talk with homeowners and make prudent cuts, avoiding unsightly chopping which bothered some residents in the past.

He said the two communities have a lot in common.

"When I think of Cohasset, I think of Newport," he stated, adding that the mansions here are not as big, but the storm-prone cliffs and tree-lined streets are similar.

The company has also worked to with two other major causes of Cohasset power outages: Norwell and Scituate.

Because Cohasset is at the end of the line, literally, its power must come through Norwell and Scituate. When those towns face public safety emergencies because of downed power lines, the power is turned off to allow workers to fix them.

When both towns turn off their power at once, Cohasset is automatically shut down.

"Cohasset was a victim to those communities," Carny explained.

However, he said that technology has improved communications, so that instances when an entire town's power must be turned off to fix wires are increasingly rare.

Repair crews now have cellular phones, enabling complete conversations with headquarters during storms, when previously they depended upon often incomplete radio communications.

If Norwell is shut down in the future, attempts will be made to keep the Mt. Blue St. transformer operating, so Cohasset power could continue to flow.

The officials said however, that they could not install a separate line which would be unaffected by a total outage in those towns.

In addition, Hassan outlined the company's new phone system, designed to improve their ability to receive complaints from customers during emergencies.

She said that starting in August, Eastern Edison will use a back-up phone system. Whenever Eastern receives a large volume of calls, or a storm knocks out power to its switchboard, a computer will switch calls to a giant switchboard in Ohio, capable of receiving 1,000 calls per minute. Currently, Eastern can receive 70 calls per minute.

Hassan said that as the switchboard processes calls, Eastern officials and repair crews will automatically be told the location and nature of the call.

NEW EQUIPMENT

The officials said that some equipment was replaced after reviewing locations where outages have been a particular problem.

A new conductor was installed on Beach St. and Forest Ave. received some new fuses. Aaron River Road has been reconnected to receive its power from Scituate, it had been getting power from Norwell, but there was an apparent problem on the line for that street.

The Beechwood St. and Hillside area has also received new equipment. That area usually suffers blackouts during lightning storms.

In an effort to increase response time, the districts have been altered. The executives said that one truck is always on call for repairs in each of the three districts. Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Pembroke and Halifax were all in the same district. By removing Halifax, response time to the other towns can be increased.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE
BURGLAR-PROOF EXTERIOR DOOR
QUESTION: Our home was robbed last night. The burglar entered through a back door by using a credit card to slide the pin back, according to the police. What's the best kind of a burglar-proof lock for exterior doors?
ANSWER: On all hinged exterior doors you should use a dead-lock. A separate pin on the flat side of the latch tongue stays stuck in the strike even when a burglar pushes back the latch tongue.
For maximum security, equip exterior doors with an automatic dead-lock plus a separate night lock. In the latter, the lock and strike fit together like a mortise and tenon joint No way a burglar can pry apart.
USE A DEADOCK on exterior doors. There's no way a burglar can pry them open with a credit card

Planning board stands firm on parking, traffic light

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Because two of its five members missed parts of the public hearing on the Shaw's supermarket proposed for Cushing Plaza, the planning board may have to start the lengthy process from scratch.

"We may have to go back to square one and do it all over again," planning board chairman Alfred Moore said last week.

The absences of the members change the complexion of the board, he said.

Member Robert Sturdy was away on business and missed the two of the three sessions of the public hearing, while member Robert O'Toole was in the hospital during the last session.

Shaw's attorney Martin Healey stated that it is inappropriate for Sturdy to participate since he missed the sessions. Healey also accused Sturdy of being biased, since he criticized the proposal before it was formally presented.

Sturdy and O'Toole have been the planners who have seemed the most critical of the proposal.

The other three members Moore, Jean Simonds and William Good, have attended all hearings.

Moore said that Henderson's research on the matter is taking some time because of the conflicting and ambiguous case law on the subject.

NO BACKING OFF ON PARKING

Also during their marathon session last week, planning board members last week refused an informal conservation commission request to reduce the parking spaces required for Cushing Plaza.

"In no way are we going to reduce the amount of parking," said Moore.

Sturdy agreed, saying that all parking, including reserve spaces, must be indicated on the plans since the spaces may be required in the future.

The conservation commission had wanted to reduce the amount of paved area at the proposed shopping center in an effort to minimize runoff to adjacent wetlands. The commission favors the use of gravel and other pervious materials which will allow water to seep through.

During a conservation commission hearing on Shaw's last month, member Thomas Callahan called Cohasset's stringent parking requirements "stupid," a remark which has not apparently sat well with the planning board.

Last week Sturdy said of the conservation commission, "I don't know why they're so nutty about pervious services. There's no way to keep the water table down."

Moore and Sturdy both said that reducing the parking is not the solution to reducing the size of the plaza.

But that was one of the few times during the more than two-hour long meeting that Sturdy and Moore did agree. On other issues there appeared to be some tension, as Sturdy repeatedly grilled Shaw's executives on fine points about the proposal.

Sturdy lost a three to one vote requiring Shaw's to further delineate the reserve parking on the plans. Members Moore, Simonds and Good felt the current plans were adequate.

BERGSON SITE TO LOSE ITS FLAVOR?

Sturdy also suggested that the other retail stores which are currently planned to be adjacent to the supermarket, could in fact be located in another building. He said changes in the design of the site plan would make the supermarket less intrusive on Beechwood St. neighbors.

He also said that since the plan would replace the green space in front of Bergson Ice Cream with parking, that building would lose its flavor and becomes "just another blob of a building surrounded by asphalt." He suggested rebuilding it elsewhere on the site.

"Try and open up the thinking a bit," he told the Shaw's team.

"We've put together one of the most complete applications ever," said Shaw's engineer Larry Wagner. "If we're coming back to - "

"It is the most complete application," interjected Brian Leahy, a Shaw's real estate executive.

"The fact that you have gone through six to eight months of extensive review, does not mean that this board is a rubber stamp," Sturdy replied. "This is the first time this board has had a chance to comment." (The lengthy three session public hearing, which allowed comments from the public ended two weeks ago. The board members themselves are now reviewing the plans.)

In addition, Sturdy said Shaw's could have come before them for a preliminary site plan review, during which the planners and the applicant could have discussed their ideas in a less formal forum.

Member William Good asked Shaw's executives to reconsider the loss of green space in front of Bergson.

Sturdy also asked about the sewage system for the third building, to be located south of the Bergson ice cream parlor.

Wagner said the building can be connected to the other system.

Martin Healey, Shaw's lawyer said the planning board could approve it subject to the board of health's approval.

"Of course any approval we do would be on condition of the board of health," Moore said.

"We usually have a letter from the board of health," Sturdy stated.

Sturdy also chided Shaw's for what he called violations of regulations at the current plaza, part of which Shaw's owns.

He said there has been trash and garbage behind one of the buildings at the plaza. He also reported seeing presumably disconnected electric boxes without proper covers and an apparently spilled oil can.

Although he reported it to the building inspector and the situation has been rectified, Sturdy said, "I don't want to see this sort of situation in the future."

Moore said that the "point was well taken," but suggested that a tenant moving out could have left the debris.

Sturdy replied that it is nonetheless the responsibility of the owner of property to ensure that regulations are complied with.

Shaw's moves parking to avoid wetlands

they have heard, conservation commission members were mildly enthusiastic about the change.

The parking in question will be unpaved, therefore reducing runoff.

Conservation commission members have also complained about Cohasset's stringent by-law outlining the number of parking spaces required for a commercial development.

They have asked the planning board to reduce the number of required spaces, which planner have refused to do (see related story.)

Thomas Callahan, conservation commission member, asked the Shaw's team, "Did you ask the planning board to waive the parking restriction?"

Martin Healy, Shaw's lawyer, said the planning board agrees to hold one-third of the spaces in reserve, but that the spaces could be built in the future.

Health board member Robert Davenport, who was at the meeting, said the planning board lacks the authority to waive a requirement spelled out in a by-law. Only the zoning board of appeals has that authority, he said, adding that to change the requirement would also be unfair.

"That was an issue with the Stop & Shop. If they turn around and change it, I think Don Staszko (Stop & Shop developer) will be right in court and I don't blame him."

During the meeting, in which consultants responded to a variety of questions on drainage, conservation commission chairman Roseanne McMorris read two letters from neighbors questioning the potential affects on their property.

David and Juliana Hassan, who own rental properties and a business on Rte. 3A to the south of the proposed Shaw's, wondered if increased drainage could raise the level of Bound Brook and possibly endanger their property's septic system.

The letter also charged that Shaw's executives were showing different plans to town boards and to them.

"We hate to imply trickery," the letter stated.

Shaw's consultants smiled after the letter was read and told the commission that the plans have been revised several times to incorporate suggestions made various boards, accounting for different versions.

They explained that the retention pond to hold drainage was moved 45 feet away from the Hassan property after fears about excess drainage were raised. Some earlier plans show the pond in its original spot.

They said the town would be presented a complete set of plans when the changes were finished and restated their suggestion that Shaw's will decrease flooding to the Hassan property.

It was also mentioned that the Hassan's have been using part of land owned by Shaw's for a parking lot. Wagner said they were using a location, "they have no right to use."

Healy said, "They are parking on our land, but we're leaving it there."

The second letter was from Beechwood resident Ellen Sanchez, who wondered if the supermarket could be moved away from Beechwood St., or turned away from it. She asked if wetlands could be infringed upon or replicated elsewhere.

Callahan said that the site is not big enough to move wetlands elsewhere.

"Speculative complaints about noise and unsightliness does not justify filling in wetlands," he said.

"It's unfortunate that she's encouraged by comments in the paper from other town officials to do that," Callahan added, in apparent reference to previous articles about the planning board hearing on Shaw's, in which those ideas were discussed.

McMorris replied that she brought the subject up because Beechwood St. is a residential area.

Wagner said that the wetlands were not the only obstacle to moving the building.

He explained that the supermarket and the septic system had to be on the same grade, which had also dictated the site plan.

Healy added that if the building were closer to 3A, it would be on a higher grade, towering above the street.

"It's sitting on a mountain," at that spot, he said.

There was also some further discussion of plantings and wild animals in the area.

After the consultant read a list of animals likely to inhabit the wetlands, he admitted that conservation commission member Veneta Roebuck undoubtedly knew more about the wildlife than he did.

Roebuck gracefully accepted the compliment with a nod and apparently agreed with his list, since she did not add any other species.

She asked the Shaw's representatives to comment on planning board engineer John Modzelewski's suggestion that the entrance to the plaza be placed north of Bergson's, instead of south as currently planned.

Wagner explained that a northern entrance would make it harder to enter Bergson's and would not allow a smooth traffic flow.

Robin Grinnell asked that as many as the large white pines along the back of the site be kept, She suggested that this might save money since the supermarket will be screened once construction is completed.

Healy said that they would save what they could.

The hearing was continued to Tuesday, June 20 at 7:30 p.m. Shaw's agreed to submit revised plans by the end of May, so conservation commission consultants could return their comments to the company by June 6, allowing enough time for the company to respond.

Cohasset Health Board adopts Title V regulations

ately adjacent lots; demonstrate by contours or narrative explanation that drainage patterns will not be detrimental to adjacent property; the statement, "No changes are to be made in the field without the approval of the Cohasset Board of Health and the design engineer"; the statement "This plan is designed in strict conformance with 310 CMR 15.00 and the Cohasset Supplemental Rules and Regulations to 310 CMR 15.000"; the location and size of underground storage tanks; required inspections shall be noted.

In new construction where shared systems are proposed or new construction, expansion or upgrade of disposal systems with flows greater than 2,000 gallons per day, an hydrogeologic report to include an estimate of groundwater mounding will be prepared by a professional engineer experienced in this field.

All plans for pump systems shall have two alternating pumps. Plans will show the capacity of the pump chamber in gallons; distance from bottom of pump off to pump on; distance from first pump on to both pumps on; size of weep hole; calculations relative to obtaining the dosing schedule as required by 15.231; valving and piping schematics.

General construction requirements for all system components shall show that proposed grading shall divert surface water away from dwellings to prevent standing water and soil saturation detrimental to the dwelling, soil absorption system and existing disposal systems on adjacent lots. The board reserves the right to request an evaluation of the plan by a consulting engineer. The fees for such to be paid by the applicant. Interceptor devices for surface water diversion shall be considered only if they can be tied into an existing drainage system. Demonstration that these devices will perform as designed is required prior to the issuance of a DSCP.

When pumping to a septic tank, written approval of the board of health is required. All disposal systems must be designed for garbage grinders. All pump systems shall have a 48-hour holding capacity either within the pump chamber or in a separate chamber. The reserve area shall not be built upon except for such things as tool houses, above ground swimming pools.

SUBPART D: INSPECTION AND MAINTENANCE OF SYSTEMS

All sewage disposal systems with dosing chambers and pumps shall have the pumps inspected annually by the owner or the owner's qualified agent. A written report shall be submitted to the board of health detailing the findings of such annual inspections. All system inspectors must be licensed by the Cohasset Board of Health and pay the associated fee designated in the Annual Fee Schedule. As part of all system inspections in the Town of Cohasset the following is required: a) The septic tank will be pumped to determine structural integrity and leakage; b) Groundwater shall be physically determined. Inspections not done during the official Deep Hole Testing period must be determined by a soil evaluator utilizing soil mottling criteria, unless groundwater documentation from information after 1985 is available. Subsurface Sewage Disposal System Inspection Reports must be stamped and initialed by Cohasset Board of Health prior to issuance to the buyer or seller.

SUBPART E: PROCEDURES FOR SEEKING AND RECEIVING LOCAL UPGRADE APPROVALS AND VARIANCES FROM THE PROVISIONS OF SUBPARTS B ANC C OF 310 CMR 15.000.

When seeking a variance, immediate touching and across the street abutters must be notified.

SUBPART F: TRANSPORTATION AND DISPOSAL OF SEPTAGE

All septage haulers must submit monthly reports to board of health on forms provided by the board. Failure to report could result in permit suspension or revocation.

Allen and Volungis qualify for class meet

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset could have a new look in next year's South Shore League Track Meet. Head coach Joel Antolini had a roster of 19 entered in the meet, but expects to have more in the spring of '96 when the Skippers will be competing regularly on their new all-weather track.

Antolini can fully understand why the track team's roster has been so small over the years. That, he believes, will all change.

"Absolutely," said Antolini, when asked if a new track will attract more kids to the sport. "I think the biggest problem we've had the last few years is the kids not wanting to get on a bus and go to another town every time we have a meet. If we have a home track, we'll attract a lot of students."

Antolini has been particularly pleased with the performances of his athletes this season. Though only two placed in the league meet, a handful of others improved their personal bests in varied events.

Tom Allen and Dean Volungis were the only two Cohasset runners who placed in the top five in their events. Allen finished second in the 100 meters with a time of 11.5. Volungis' leap of 38'9" was plenty long enough to claim fourth in the triple jump. Both finishes qualified the pair for the State Class D Meet at Weston High on May 27.

In the two mile, Mike Baird and Bob Morgan both pushed their way to new personal bests, as did Mark Equi in the intermediate hurdles. Eric Show had his best meet of the season, kicking past the finish line with a personal best in the 400 meters.

Antolini said the fact the Skippers have to train on a dirt track makes the performances that much more noteworthy.

"I think the students have done stupendously trying to keep up with the other kids who have tracks," Antolini said. "Next year we'll be on the same playing field."

Don't you mean a spanking, brand new all-weather running surface, coach?

Legion tryouts May 20, 21

Hingham Legion baseball tryouts for Hingham, Hull and Cohasset for players ages 16 to 18 will be held Saturday, May 20, at 6 p.m. and Sunday, May 21, at 6 p.m. at Cronin Field in Hingham.

For further information, call Vin Murray at 720-4411 or 749-4455.

Just another Manic Tuesday

Buses filled with Cohasset High athletes rolled out of the high school parking lot on Tuesday as 11 Skipper sports teams sprung into action in seven different towns on a particularly busy afternoon of athletics.

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said he can't remember any other school having so many different teams playing on the same afternoon. He also believes it says a lot for the high school sports program, particularly one the size of Cohasset's.

"That's something when you think of it," Chatterton said. "I don't think any other school had 11 teams playing at the same time."

There was one slacker in the bunch. The girls track team didn't have an event scheduled. But the Skippers were expected to be back in action on Wednesday evening in the South Shore League Meet at Carver High.

I thought I'd seen it all on the baseball diamond.

But Friday's Atlantic Coast League battle between Hingham and Duxbury demonstrated once again why baseball is such a fun sport to watch.

Let's set the scene for Freaky Friday.

The Harbormen, under the direction of long-time coach John Garrigan, were trying to hold onto first place in the league and clinch a tourney berth with their tenth win.

However, Garrigan and the Harbormen were not in the best condition for the game. Garrigan was battling a nagging cold, the team was in the middle of a two-game losing streak and the pitching staff was worn thin from a spate of several games that week.

Garrigan decided to give the ball to a sophomore pitcher called up from the JV's and roll the dice.

On the other side of the diamond were the Green Dragons, under the direction of young coach Barney Earle (Hanover High class of '85.)

Duxbury was searching for its seventh win to stay in the state tourney hunt but Earle was not happy as the game approached.

After several missed grounders and wild throws during infield warm-ups, he pulled the Duxbury players off the field with several choice words.

And when coach Earle, who stands 6'4" and weighs at least 230 pounds, isn't happy, no one is.

Anyway, Earle's actions seemed to inspire the Green Dragons as they jumped out to a quick 3-0 lead in the first inning.

A Hingham error brought the Green Dragon clean-up hitter to the plate with two runners on and only one out. The Hingham sophomore hurler quickly fell behind in the count 2-0 and had to groove a strike. A double to left-center brought two runs home and a deep sacrifice fly to the next batter made the score to 3-0.

As for the Harbormen, they could not do a thing with Duxbury hurler Dave Pearson, who masterfully moved the ball around and changed speeds on the free-swinging Hingham batmen. Early on he pitched like a high school Luis Tiant.

After three innings, the Harbormen trailed by three and hadn't managed a hit.

In the fourth inning the Green Dragons added three more runs as they had a bases loaded sacrifice fly, a fielder's choice and a double.

After the last run scored, Garrigan made a pitching change and brought in Luke Davenport who got out the inning without any further damage.

But now the game was 6-0 and the Harbormen looked sunk as they went down in the fourth and fifth innings without a runner even reaching base.

Pearson was now six outs from a 6-0 shutout no-hitter against first-place Harbormen on their home field.

But the real fun started in the Hingham sixth as Pearson grew tired and

Bunstein's putt sinks Indians

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

After losing its top-four players from last spring, the Cohasset High golf team looked to be in dire straits entering this year's South Shore League season.

But with three wins in eight matches, the Skippers have hardly rolled over and played dead on the links. In fact, Cohasset made some noise earlier this week by dropping Carver on Tuesday, just one day after Nevin Bunstein's 12-foot putt led the Skippers to an upset win over Hanover. Cohasset was victorious in both matches by close, 5-4 scores.

The Skippers' win over Carver at the Plymouth Country Club didn't come easily. They found themselves in the hole early when they had to forfeit three points because Ryan Sawchuck was unable to compete. The conflict arose when Sawchuck had to meet with the principal interview screening committee on which he sits.

Cohasset, though, showed its resiliency and left with the win when Jamie Kondrat's strong performance in his match sealed victory No. 3 this spring for the Skippers.

Jordan Fiore, who recently sunk a hole-in-one against Abington, played well in both matches, as did Brian Riley, who is seeded in the No. 1 position for Cohasset. Former baseball players Joe Magner and Justin Buckley have added depth to the team this year.

Redfield breaks up scoring binge

Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Cohasset and Falmouth had so much fun firing home goals in their varsity lacrosse game on Friday, the two teams decided to play beyond the end of regulation.

Leave it to the Skippers' Ben Redfield to end the party.

Redfield whipped home the winning goal less than a minute into overtime to give Cohasset a big 11-10 win, upping its record to 6-4.

Heading into this week, head coach Ken Ekberg's squad had four remaining dates left against Bedford, Sandwich, Xaverian and Beverly.

With the tournament coming up, the Skippers showed they are primed and ready to score. Seven different players found the back of the net in the Falmouth game, led by Ken Leahy's hat trick and assist. Chris Adams and John Lax netted a pair of tallies and added three and two assists, respectively. Andy Collins, Kevin Smith, Chris McKenna and Redfield all had one goal each.

"The kids played very well today," Ekberg said. "Falmouth must have been disappointed because they've had a couple of overtime losses."

The game may have been decided before an overtime period was necessary if not for the play of Cohasset's Eli Kahn in net. Kahn, who thwarted 25 Falmouth shots, came up with a number of brilliant saves throughout the contest. Kahn saved his best for last and was particularly "outstanding" in the closing minutes of the second half, Ekberg said.

Rec. dept. to offer lacrosse clinics

The Cohasset recreation department will accept telephone registrations at its office, at 383-6791, for an evening lacrosse skill development program designed for youngsters entering grades 4, 5 and 6 in September.

Lacrosse clinics are designed to teach fundamental skills and concepts of lacrosse and will meet Tuesday and Thursday evenings, 6:30 to 8 p.m., at the Osgood School field beginning Tuesday evening, June 13 and ending Thursday, June 29.

This specialized developmental program will be instructed by local college and high school lacrosse players and the fee will be $26 per person for the six lessons. Participants will need a helmet and lacrosse stick to enroll. Other equipment will be unnecessary as no contact scrimmages will be held.

VIP soccer registrations set

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp for children ages 4-7.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, aged 4-7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for a 4- and 5-year-olds and meets from 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday through Friday, July 17-21. The cost is $40 for the week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour per day program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, July 17-21, for 6- and 7-year-olds. The cost is $70 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year the front field of Cohasset High School.

Registration for soccer camp

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8-18. This is South Shore Soccer Camp's fifth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering, visit the Cohasset Recreation Department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791, in the near future, to be assured enrollment.

The camp will be offered to both girls and boys during the weeks of Monday through Friday, July 31-August 4, and August 7-11. Should a camper wish to attend both camp weeks, this will now be possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camp weeks must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Mondays through Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The cost is $165 per week with discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children available. South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players from the New England area.

Baseball camp

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages five through 12 at the recreation office, first floor of Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Club has been contracted again this year to provide baseball camp, which will begin the week of Monday, June 26, Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full day, 8;30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. camp for ages seven and over; and a half-day, 8;30 to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5-and 6-year-olds.

The week-long camp cost $120 per child for the full-day program, and $70 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Friday, June 30.

Marine exams set

Flotilla #1203, United States Coast Guard Auxiliary, highlights National Safe Boating Week (May 20-26). Saturday, May 20, free Courtesy Marine Examinations (C.M.E.'s) for in-water and trailered boats will be offered at Nantasket Beach Salt Water Club and Hull Yacht Club, Nantasket Avenue, Hull, from 8 a.m. to noon; and at Donohue's Waveland Marina and the A Street Boat Ramp, both on A Street, Hull, from 1 to 4 p.m.

Saturday, May 27, free Courtesy Marine Examinations (C.M.E.'s) will be offered to in-water boaters at Landfall Marine Center, Lincoln Highway (3A) in Hingham from 8 a.m. to noon.

Coast Guard qualified examiners will provide safe boating advice and National Safe Boating Council literature.

Track Club begins

Once again the South Shore Track Club will begin this spring introducing to youngsters, ages 6-18, the basic training skills of track and field.

Chuck Martin, Norwell High School's cross country and track coach, plans to continue his youth program beginning Monday, May 22, at 6 p.m. as both new and previous members are invited to register at the Norwell High School outdoor track facility.

Hoping to expand on its 65 members last season, the S.S.T.C. will hold practices every Monday and Wednesday from 6 to 7:30 p.m. through August 2.

Along with the weekly practices, which are not mandatory, youngsters will be able to compete in local track meets both in Norwell and at other track facilities.

With an atmosphere designed for the ages of the kids involved, the South Shore Track Club is a great way to discover fresh new talent and to simply have some summer fun. Come join us. We look forward to seeing you May 22.

For more information, please call Chuck Martin at (617) 391-0458.

Major league teams battle for top spot

By Bob Moody
Special to the Mariner

With the season will underway, the Dodgers, Cardinals, Red Sox, Athletics, Mets and Pirates have begun their chase after the 1994 championship Rangers. The Rangers, coached by Jon Caron, Bob Moody and Emmitt O'Brien, have started the season with flawless play in the field and at the plate. Led by the strong arms of Will Moody, Doug O'Brien, Matt O'Grodnick, Greg O'Connell and Eric Shea, they have jumped out to a 5-0 start.

Offensively, the Rangers have attacked their opponents with hard hitting from Mickey Palone, Chris Caron, Eric Libby and rookie Craig Davis. Defensively, the outfield gloves of Jeremy Tedeschi and rookies Brendan Goff and Evan Pestone would make shoeless Joe Jackson envious.

With the addition of four top rookie prospects in Goff, Davis, Pestone and O'Grodnick, the Rangers future will continue to look bright. The Rangers will have to continue working hard if they want to maintain their winning ways.

walked the bases loaded with no outs.

Hingham shortstop Mitch Powers finally got Hingham into the scorebook as he grounded a single down the left-field line to score two runs.

A fielder's choice cut the score to 6-3 before Pearson recorded the third out in the sixth.

Hingham had suddenly cut a 6-0 deficit in half with only one hit.

After Davenport got the Green Dragons out in the seventh, the Harbormen came to their final at-bat only three outs from falling out of first place.

But the Harbormen did not die.

An error and a Mike Meehan single put the two leadoff runners on base.

But Harbormen top hitters Corey Farina and Mike Sweeney both hit into fielder's choices and Hingham had runners second and third with two outs.

One more out and bye-bye first place.

But Powers walked on a 3-2 pitch to make it 6-4.

Matt Godfrey also walked on four straight balls and it was 6-5.

Earle made a pitching change but the walking parade continued.

Another freebie to Joe Mancuso tied the game at 6-6 and the Hingham faithful was going nuts.

With only one more hit, the Harbormen scored three more runs and tied the game at 6-6.

Earle could only walk around muttering to himself.

Then lefty DH Jason Springer came to bat for Hingham.

The bases were loaded, the score was tied and the Harbormen were in position to win a game they probably didn't deserve.

Springer swung at an outside pitch and lifted the ball towards no-man's land in shallow left field near the line.

The Duxbury third baseman, shortstop and left fielder all converged but the ball hit the ground with a sickening thud.

The winning run came across and Hingham had the 7-6 win.

A shell-shocked Garrigan gathered his troops along the bench after the customary hand-shake.

"This game shows that you can never give up," he said. "We didn't play well but we didn't give up and we just clinched our fifth straight state tournament berth."

Earle and the Green Dragons quietly walked back to the bus.

Hanover freshman Alex Walker has taken the South Shore League track circuit by storm this season and there's no telling what he'll do next spring with a year's experience under his belt.

Walker is tied for the league lead in the high jump with a leap of 5'10." As a member of the Indians, he leads his teammates in total points with 90 with one meet still remaining. Walker won the high hurdles at the Freshmen/Sophomore Invitational Track Meet at Carver High and should put forth a strong showing at the State Class D Meet at the end of the month.

For those South Shore athletes looking to improve their overall strength and conditioning, they need go no further than Scituate resident Mark Conroy.

A former captain of the Sailors' football team and the strength and conditioning coach at Boston College High School for the past seven years, Conroy will be directing two camps in June at B.C. High's facility with the intention of "attracting and energizing as many South Shore public school athletes as possible."

Along with Conroy, the camp will be headed by a professional staff, including John Parker, the New England Patriots' strength coach; Mike Boyle — Boston University and Bruins' strength coach and Jon Josh, the strengh coach at Holy Cross.

The camps will be held from 5-9 p.m. on June 12-16 and June 26-30. For more information on the camps, call 617-436-3900 (Ext. 73 or 77) or 617-545-3176.

'Congo Capers II' on stage

The Second Congregational Church of Cohasset will present "Congo Capers II," a lively updating of their hit show of two years ago, on Friday and Saturday, May 19 and 20 at 8 p.m.

The show will feature scenes from memorable Broadway shows and hit tunes from Tin Pan Alley, all adapted to suit the abilities of local talent.

50 performers, backed by an experienced production crew, will sing and dance their way through a sequence of skits. The show is directed by Jo Ann Fichtner, with Bob Leavitt, minister of music at the church and a music teacher in Hull schools, as music director.

Featured numbers include a dance from "Chorus Line," and scenes and songs from "La Cage Aux Folle," "Beauty and the Beast," "Sound of Music" and "Elvis Lives."

Tickets are $5 and are available from cast members or they may be reserved by calling Margaret Bates at 383-1129 or the church at 383-0345.

Little League auction set

The Cohasset Little League will sponsor a Silent Auction at their annual banquet.

Anyone who would like to donate an item or service may call Kathy (383-6690) or Sarah (383-6124).

ASP yard sale a success

The May 13 yard sale sponsored by the Appalachia Service Project was a success, and members of the group attribute its success to the generosity of Cohasset merchants and townspeople.

The Silent Auction generated $2,500 and the yard sale netted $1,100. All proceeds will benefit the ASP annual home repair mission to Virginia and Kentucky.

According to Ami Argus, chairwoman of the fundraiser, items that were donated were of excellent quality, with local merchants donating more than $500. ASP doubled its profits this year over last year's yard sale.

Contributing to the Silent Auction this year were: Above All Others Hair Salon, Appleseed's, Artist's Son Gallery, Bowman & Co., Ltd., Cards and Shards, Chart House, Cohasset Cove Seafoods, Cohasset Hardware, Cohasset News, Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club, Dependable Cleaners, Fleming's, French Memories Bakery, Good Sport Inc., King Jewelers, Inc., Liquors Unlimited Inc. and the Red Lion Inn.

Call for festival art entries

The South Shore Art Center has announced the Call for Entries for both the Juried Art and Juried Photography Exhibitions of the 40th annual Festival on Cohasset Common, June 16 to 18.

Categories for entry include photography, oil and acrylic, drawing and pastel, watercolor, graphics and mixed media/3-D. Receipt of entires is Thursday, May 18, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Work should be delivered to the gallery at 119 Ripley Rd., Cohasset. For further information call (617) 383-ARTS.

Yard sale at Montessori

The Old Colony Montessori School will hold a Yard Sale on Saturday, May 27, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Proceeds will help finance the purchase of playground equipment.

The school is located at 20 Derby Street, Hingham.

'Annie' benefits teen center

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present the musical hit "Annie" at Scituate High School on various weekend evenings during May.

The Friday, May 26, 7:30 p.m. performance will benefit the Cohasset Teen Center and discounted $5 tickets are available for that performance.

To reserve discounted tickets for the May 26 benefit performance call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

Farmers market opens

The Hingham Farmers Market, the oldest market in Massachusetts, will open Saturday, May 20. The hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The market has been in continuous operation since 1977.

Locally home-grown produce, honey, jam, herbs, perennial and annual plants and baked goods will be featured. The market will operate on Saturday only through June 17. Starting June 21 and continuing until Oct. 28, the market will be open Wednesdays and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The market vendors sponsor a free monthly drawing on the third Saturday of each month. The drawing will consist of merchandise available in the market on each drawing date. Local growers and gardeners will be happy to discuss gardening problems with visitors at the market. For further information call Dave Sturgis at 749-4643.

HCMT to host fashion show

Hingham Civic Music Theatre and the Hingham Community Center will present a "Spring into Summer" Fashion Show on Sunday, May 21, at 3 p.m. at the Hingham Community Center, 70 South St.

Elegant fashions will be provided by "Designer Consigner," with children's fashions by "Children's Corner." There will be crafts, jewelry, raffles and door prizes. An $8 donation will entitle guests to dessert and coffee. Proceeds will benefit HCMT and Hingham Community Center. To reserve tickets call 749-9786.

'Red Riding Hood' May 28

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom will host a Kaleidoscope Theater presentation of "Little Red Riding Hood" on Sunday, May 28, at 3 p.m. in the Social Hall, 1[illegible] Main St., Rt. 228, Hingham.

Tickets for the play are $5 in advance and $6 at the door. Children under one are free. Tickets may be ordered by sending a check to the temple indicating the number of tickets needed. A contact name and phone number should be included.

Local church hosts concert

St. Mark of Ephesus Orthodox Church will co-host a concert of traditional Russian, Greek and American Orthodox music on Sunday, May 21, at 7 p.m. in St. Panagia's Church, 817 Jerusalem Rd., Cohasset. The a cappella choir of St. Marks will join St. Panagia's choir for the concert.

Admission is a free-will offering taken after the show.

Some of the concert selections date back centuries and are still being sung in church services in Russia, Greece and America today. Refreshments will be available and the many icons of the church will be on display. The Orthodox Church is the most ancient of Christian churches in the world today. There are an estimated six million Orthodox Christians in North America.

For further information or directions call Susan Homyk at (508) 888-4851 or Cindy at (617) 383-9647.

Drama workshop offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting telephone registrations for a Saturday morning Drama Workshop to be taught by Elizabeth and Grace Deveney.

Classes will meet from 9 to 10:30 a.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall for six weeks, beginning May 20. The fee is $24 per participant. The program is appropriate for young people with an interest in the theater and performing arts. At the end of the workshop the children will perform a skit for parents.

For further information or to register call 383-6791. Non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis.

Cruise on Boston Harbor

The Harbor Island League will host its second annual June Cruise on Sunday, June 18, from 12 to 5 p.m., departing from Hewitt's Cove, Rt. 3A, Hingham.

The boat will cruise as far north as Salem Harbor and return to Hingham after passing Boston Light, Graves Lighthouse, Marblehead Neck Light, Boston Harbor Islands, Baker Island Light, Long Island Light and Moon Island. Historical narration will be provided by Bill Fitzpatrick of "Around the Harbor."

Advance ticket prices are $23 for adults ($18 for members) and $10 for children under 12. Passengers may bring their own lunch or purchase one onboard.

Proceeds will benefit the Peddock's Island Chapel and other island activities. For further information call (617) 925-4794. To order tickets send a check, along with name, address, phone number and number of adult, member or children's tickets, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Harbor Islands League, Inc., P.O. Box 472, Hingham 02043. Checks or money orders should be made payable to the Harbor Islands League, Inc.

Gjesteby scolded for distributing 'secret' document

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A disagreement over the confidentiality of a lawsuit settlement proposal faxed from the attorney representing Cohasset Heights Landfill to the town erupted into the public tongue-lashing of a selectman by her counterparts this week.

Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby's release of a "confidential" document concerning an outline of a proposed settlement between Cohasset and Cohasset Heights Landfill to a local attorney — may result in her being formally censured by the other selectmen.

The two-page proposal entitled "Outline of Global Settlement between Cohasset Heights Ltd. and Town of Cohasset" was leaked to the press Tuesday.

Owners of the private landfill off Rte. 3A are suing the town. The legal fees to fight the lawsuits are a drain on town coffers, officials say.

Selectman Jane Goedecke asked to deviate from the planned agenda Monday to rebuke Gjesteby for her "breach of ethics" by turning over the document to a resident because the board had agreed to wait

New septic system regs are real estate 'nightmare'

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

Grappling with the new Title V regulations has presented a new set of problems and more work for the health department and local realtors.

Chris Ford of the Cohasset office of Hallmark 100 sums up the Title V regulations in one word: "nightmare."

Implementation of the law has chilled the real estate market, he said, by making some homes un-sale-able, and keeping others off the market.

In 1994, 56 homes sold in Cohasset. This year, in traditionally the busiest home-selling time of year, only 26 houses have changed hands since the first of the year, Ford said, adding that mortgage interest rates are lower now.

"Anyone who's contemplating selling a home now has an additional $20,000 expense," he said, noting the cost of a new septic system some parts of town.

But, he doesn't believe a moratorium of the regulations is the answer.

Ford said, "I think we have to bite the bullet. There's no question that we have to protect the environment"

However, the state should be more lenient in accepting alternative waste disposal systems, he added.

This sentiment is shared by Cohasset's health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik.

Godzik doesn't expect the state Department of Environmental Protection to relax the regulations, despite the recent public outcry. He does hope, however, that state officials will speed up approval of new technology

Officials may get tough on tobacco sellers

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

In the face of evidence that Cohasset remains one of the easiest towns on the South Shore for minors to buy cigarettes in, the board of health agreed Tuesday night to consider tough new regulations on the sale of tobacco.

In a test conducted May 17 by the Tobacco Control Program of the South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative, a teenage girl was able to buy cigarettes at 10 of 17 locations, giving Cohasset a 59 percent purchase rate, now the highest of the 14 towns in the program.

"Cohasset is now the leading town, as of this moment," health educator Susan Cronin told the health board.

She added that the since the program is continuing in other towns, it is possible another community will fare worse than Cohasset.

The sting operation was conducted in the following retail operations: five convenience stores; three liquor stores; three restaurants; two pharmacies; and one

Cohasset's week

Permit deadline is May 31

Recycling transfer facility permits will be sold on weekends at the Cedar Street RTF through May 31. No cash will be accepted as payment for the $65 fee. Checks must be made out to the Town of Cohasset.

Cohasset residents qualify for two permits per household for $65 by providing at the same time both motor vehicle registrations with the same Cohasset address. An additional $25 will be charged if information on the second vehicle is provided at another time.

The limit is two permits per household and the RTF permit fee for a single-person household is $33. To qualify as such, the applicant must sign an affadavit that he or she lives alone. There is no senior citizen discount.

Park food license OK'ed

This week selectmen approved issuing a transient vendor license to Karen J. McMorris and Stefanie Cook, two youngsters who plan to sell soft drinks and snacks from a wagon and cooler at the Beechwood ball field this summer.

Selectmen Chairman Merle S. Brown told the girls to have a recepticles for trash and recyclables near by where they sell.

Summer hours noted

Harbormaster Shawn Kelly said harbormaster's hours will be as follows this summer: 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday; 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday, Thursday and Friday; and the office will be closed on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Garage committee update

Selectmen have appointed the following citizens to the Public Works Garage Building Committee: Terry Atherton, Bruce Edmonds, John Riley, Gary Gardner, and Ben Blake from the study committee; Tree & Park Supt. Peter Laugelle and Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield. Selectmen would like one more volunteer with experience in major construction to serve on the committee which will oversee the construction plans for the $752,000 garage approved a town meeting and funded through a debt-exclusion override. Interested citizens should contact the selectmen's office at 383-9900.

Rabies clinic is offered

The Cohasset Board of Health will sponsor its first Rabies Clinic for the year with the assistance of the South River Veterinary Services on Saturday, June 10, in the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium for cats only from 10:30 a.m. to noon and for dogs only from 12:05 to 1:30 p.m. Dogs must be leashed and cats caged. No strays will be accepted.

State regulations require that all cats as well as dogs be immunized for rabies. With the current rabies epidemic, immunizations are an important step in protecting animals and humans. The immunization costs are: rabies, $8; distemper, $10; feline leukemia, $10; Lyme disease, $12.

Other tests available are heartworm, $15 and feline leukemia test, $20.

Pet owners from surrounding communities are invited to participate. Checks made payable to SRVS or cash will be accepted.

Water restrictions in effect

Effective May 1, all Cohasset water department customers are asked to follow an odd/even watering schedule. Those living in even-numbered houses are able to water on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Residents in odd-numbered houses may water on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday. There will be no watering on Mondays.

Summer water restrictions still remain in effect because all distribution improvements have not been completed, water department officials said.

Inch worms at work

Tree & Park Supt. Peter Laugelle said residents have probably noticed a defoliation of trees in the area caused by inchworm or Cankerworm.

"The tree department does not spray and I would advise residents to hire a certified company to spray.

"The trees will leaf out again after the defoliation occurred," Laugelle said.

Discoloration may occur

The Cohasset Water Department has announced that the inside of the water storage tank is being cleaned, which may result in temporary discoloration of the water. The condition is only temporary, and the water is safe to drink.

Board approval likely for Shaw's

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

The Shaw's supermarket could be opened by late next fall, a supermarket representative said last week. Martin Healy, Shaw's attorney, told the planning board last week that construction will take nine months, once approval from the planning board and conservation commission is received and a legal challenge from Beechwood St. residents is settled.

When planning board chairman Alfred Moore asked him how soon construction would start, Healy said, "as fast as possible. I'm confident we'll have an approval from them (conservation commission) shortly."

Although plenty of fine tuning may be expected, it is likely that the planning board will finally give its OK to the Cushing Plaza supermarket at the June 7 meeting.

The project's chances of approval increased last week after town counsel Richard Henderson ruled that board members who have missed public hearings may not vote on that issue. That decision prevents planning board member Robert Sturdy from voting on the Shaw's plan because he missed the first two sessions of the public hearing.

Sturdy had appeared to be the most hostile member of the planning board during the sessions he did attend. He had also criticized the project when the ZBA discussed it.

Both sides appeared to be relieved that the end of the long process, which has involved hours of tedious technical discussion, is in sight.

"We've been together so long it's like family," Moore said as the amicable session drew to a close.

Also during last week's meeting, the planning board spent considerable time examining the design of the supermarket building itself.

Max Pounder and Eileen Corbett of the design review committee presented that group's suggestions, which included placing the roof gables over entrances to the supermarket, curving the roadway in front to slow down traffic and improve appearance, and recessing the other retail section.

They also recommended that the rear of the building have a similar color to the front, to unify the site.

The Shaw's team liked many of the changes.

"There were a lot of excellent suggestions that came out of that design review," said engineer Larry Wagner.

"We told you there would," said planning board member Jean Simonds, to general laughter.

Moore also said that the planning board has received a number of letters in recent weeks, which have been overwhelmingly in support of Shaw's.

Two planners can't vote

Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson said that planning board members John O'Toole and Robert Sturdy are precluded from voting on the Shaw's Supermarket site plans currently before the board because they missed part of the public hearing.

Henderson also said that because only a simple majority is required to vote on the site plan, the board may take action on the matter.

"The majority of a quorum of a duly constituted committee has the authority to act on behalf of the body," Henderson wrote in a May 17 letter to Planning Board Chairman Alfred S. Moore.

"While Massachusetts statutes required that in the case of variances and special permits, more than a majority may be required under certain circumstances, no such statutory requirement applied to site plan approval.

"Under the circumstances, the remaining members of the planning board, so long as it constitutes a quorum of the committee, may act and vote upon the site plan application relating to Cushing Plaza," Henderson said.

Farmers' market is open

The Hingham Farmers Market, the oldest market in Massachusetts, opened Saturday, May 20. The hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The market has been in continuous operation since 1977.

Locally home-grown produce, honey, jam, herbs, perennial and annual plants and baked goods will be featured. The market will operate on Saturday only through June 17. Starting June 21 and continuing until Oct. 28, the market will be open Wednesdays and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The market vendors sponsor a free monthly drawing on the third Saturday of each month. The drawing will consist of merchandise available in the market on each drawing date. Local growers and gardeners will be happy to discuss gardening problems with visitors at the market. For further information call Dave Sturgis at 749-4643.

Board approval likely for Shaw's

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

The Shaw's supermarket could be opened by late next fall, a supermarket representative said last week. Martin Healy, Shaw's attorney, told the planning board last week that construction will take nine months, once approval from the planning board and conservation commission is received and a legal challenge from Beechwood St. residents is settled.

When planning board chairman Alfred Moore asked him how soon construction would start, Healy said, "as fast as possible. I'm confident we'll have an approval from them (conservation commission) shortly."

Although plenty of fine tuning may be expected, it is likely that the planning board will finally give its OK to the Cushing Plaza supermarket at the June 7 meeting.

The project's chances of approval increased last week after town counsel Richard Henderson ruled that board members who have missed public hearings may not vote on that issue. That decision prevents planning board member Robert Sturdy from voting on the Shaw's plan because he missed the first two sessions of the public hearing.

Sturdy had appeared to be the most hostile member of the planning board during the sessions he did attend. He had also criticized the project when the ZBA discussed it.

Both sides appeared to be relieved that the end of the long process, which has involved hours of tedious technical discussion, is in sight.

"We've been together so long it's like family," Moore said as the amicable session drew to a close.

Also during last week's meeting, the planning board spent considerable time examining the design of the supermarket building itself.

Max Pounder and Eileen Corbett of the design review committee presented that group's suggestions, which included placing the roof gables over entrances to the supermarket, curving the roadway in front to slow down traffic and improve appearance, and recessing the other retail section.

They also recommended that the rear of the building have a similar color to the front, to unify the site.

The Shaw's team liked many of the changes.

"There were a lot of excellent suggestions that came out of that design review," said engineer Larry Wagner.

"We told you there would," said planning board member Jean Simonds, to general laughter.

Moore also said that the planning board has received a number of letters in recent weeks, which have been overwhelmingly in support of Shaw's.

Two planners can't vote

Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson said that planning board members John O'Toole and Robert Sturdy are precluded from voting on the Shaw's Supermarket site plans currently before the board because they missed part of the public hearing.

Henderson also said that because only a simple majority is required to vote on the site plan, the board may take action on the matter.

"The majority of a quorum of a duly constituted committee has the authority to act on behalf of the body," Henderson wrote in a May 17 letter to Planning Board Chairman Alfred S. Moore.

"While Massachusetts statutes required that in the case of variances and special permits, more than a majority may be required under certain circumstances, no such statutory requirement applied to site plan approval.

"Under the circumstances, the remaining members of the planning board, so long as it constitutes a quorum of the committee, may act and vote upon the site plan application relating to Cushing Plaza," Henderson said.

Farmers' market is open

The Hingham Farmers Market, the oldest market in Massachusetts, opened Saturday, May 20. The hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The market has been in continuous operation since 1977.

Locally home-grown produce, honey, jam, herbs, perennial and annual plants and baked goods will be featured. The market will operate on Saturday only through June 17. Starting June 21 and continuing until Oct. 28, the market will be open Wednesdays and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The market vendors sponsor a free monthly drawing on the third Saturday of each month. The drawing will consist of merchandise available in the market on each drawing date. Local growers and gardeners will be happy to discuss gardening problems with visitors at the market. For further information call Dave Sturgis at 749-4643.

Cohasset committee takes aim at mosquitos

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Members of the mosquito control committee met last week to plan its summertime assault on the pesky insects, which they point out can be a serious public health hazard.

Committee chairman Charles Gainor said that there have been 80 cases of Eastern Equine Encephalitis in this area in the past 40 years.

Gainor pointed out that while 40 does not seem like a very high number, the encephalitis virus can have "a devastating impact on very young children and very old people."

He described the case of a 12-year-old Dover girl who contracted the disease and never recovered. She is expected to remain mentally and physically impaired for life and is now in special education classes.

Gainor said that although he hated to measure such a situation in mere dollars, money points out how expensive encephalitis can be. He said that Dover has spent $400,000 on the girl's special education program, while the federal government has chipped in some $600,000.

While conceding that "is an extreme case," Gainor said that because it is a viral disease, outbreaks can be sudden and virulent.

"You never know when the thing is going to explode," Gainor stated.

The committee is making its assault on the mosquito on two fronts: public education and cleaning out Cohasset's streams, many of which have become clogged. Stagnant water is the mosquito's ideal breeding ground.

Last April a group of high school students cleaned debris out of Sanctuary Pond and James Brook in an effort to improve the water flow.

Jack Buckley, director of the high school's alternative education program, supervised the students.

Buckley was at last week's meeting and told Gainor that the brook is now flowing smoothly between Sanctuary Pond and Smith Place.

He also said the students would be welcome to clean out more of the waterway in the fall.

Despite a few wet volunteers, Buckley said, "all the students had a very enjoyable day."

He said he was surprised at the number of tires — 26 — which were pulled from the pond. Some tires had been dumped 50 yards into the brook.

Paul Davis and Ross Rosano provided the truck which hauled the material to the town landfill.

The program even received a $125 state community service grant, which paid for lunch and a token $50 fee for engineer Donald Moncevicz, who provided technical services.

Buckley also thanked Veneta Roebuck of the conservation commission for coordinating the work with that group.

The committee agreed that the conservation commission is enthusiastic about such projects.

"They are very cooperative," Gainor said.

A card noting the students' help, signed by principal Stephen Hart and by Gainor, was mailed to parents.

There was some discussion about requesting the permission of Smith Place area property owners since a future cleanup may require crossing private property.

Although the town is located in Norfolk County, Cohasset pays $13,000 to the Plymouth County mosquito control program because Plymouth mosquito varieties inhabit the town.

Although the organization does undertake spraying, Gainor said the committee is unenthusiastic about chemical solutions.

"Our feeling is that pesticides are too dangerous for young children and aged people," Gainor said, calling federal pesticide standards inadequate and ambiguous.

He endorsed environmental mosquito predators instead.

In particular Gainor recommended a bacteria which is sprayed onto ponds. Mosquito larvae eat the bacteria, which cause the larvae to burst. "It just explodes their gut as it were," he said.

A similar type of biological control is called Mosquito Dunks, which look like donuts. The dunks can be dropped into bird baths or other water supplies, releasing bacteria which feed on mosquito larvae.

The committee has placed information on the dunks and other mosquito control methods on the town hall bulletin board.

Keeping water supplies fresh is also recommended. Mosquitos can breed in leaf clogged gutters, in bottles, flower pots, barrels, bird baths and leaky outside faucets. Residents are urged to either constantly change or better yet, eliminate, stagnant water.

In addition to Gainor, the committee includes former selectmen Edwin "Ned" Tebbetts and Elsa Miller, who attended the meeting. Donna French and Vincent Dunn are also members, but were unable to attend the meeting.

The committee is appointed by selectmen.

Sea 'n Cheese to spice up North Scituate

By Heather Prouty
Mariner staff

Sea 'n Cheese in Cohasset's Cushing Plaza will close its doors later this month, ending a successful, 12-year stint at the Route 3A location. But what is Cohasset's loss will be Scituate's gain as the popular store relocates to North Scituate Village, filling vacancies left recently by the Country Package Store and Yarn Over.

Sea 'n Cheese owner Rick Peters of Scituate hopes to open the new store by early June. The opening date, he says, largely depends on how quickly he is able to complete the many preparations necessary for the new location. "It's like building a house," he explains jokingly. "When you're relying on electricians and plumbers and those types of people."

The move comes in the wake of a 1993 real estate transaction in which supermarket giant Shaw's bought Cushing Plaza from the Resolution Trust Company, a federal agency that takes over failed banks. Sea 'n Cheese, along with tenants Radio Shack and Papa Gino's, were notified by Shaw's officials to vacate their lots by May 26.

The result has left store owners like Peters scrambling to find new venues. After a fruitless, year-long search up and down 3A, where few sites have sufficient septic systems to accommodate the store's water usage, Peters turned his efforts toward North Scituate. Looking for a central location between Cohasset and Scituate, the towns crucial to his store's success, Peters finally came upon the North Scituate spot in March, just as "time was running out."

Now that he has found a new home for Sea 'n Cheese, Peters' work has just begun. Between preparing the new site – which will entail installing more piping, gas and electricity lines, industrial-sized refrigerators, stoves, and walk-in coolers – and closing the present store, Peters is a busy man. Still, he remains positive about the Herculean task. "I'm upbeat about the move," he says, "We're moving closer to the majority of our customers."

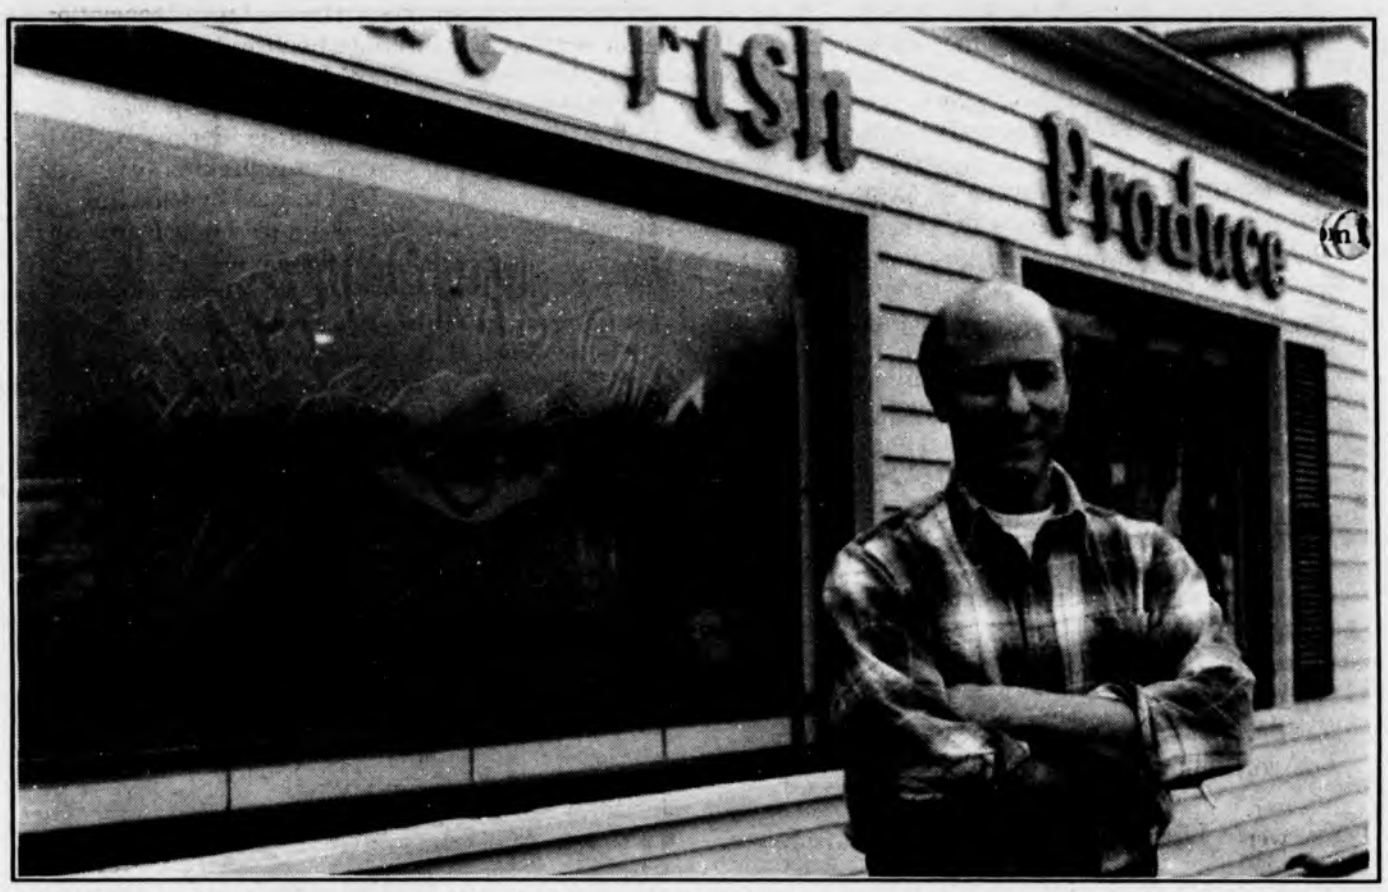
Sea 'n Cheese regulars will not notice many changes in the store's product mix. Peters intends to keep his high-quality product lineup much the same, continuing an emphasis on seafood, cheese, deli products and prepared foods. Peters also hopes to continuing selling beer and wine at the new store and will apply to selectmen later this month for a beer and wine license.

The greatest difference between the two stores will be their size, with the latest Sea 'n Cheese incarnation squeezing into 5,000 square feet less than its predecessor. Due to space, the café area of the Cohasset store has been eliminated.

To alert consumers of the change, Peters plans to advertise in local newspapers. He is hopeful his customers, whom he describes as consistent and loyal, will follow his business to its new location. "You see a lot of the same faces, and that's what keeps you going," he comments, "It's a lot of hard work, but at the same time the people couldn't be better. I hope everyone bears with us over the next few weeks, during the transition."

With supermarket monoliths like Shaw's and Super Stop and Shop now peppering Route 3A, Peters remains confident in his store's ability to attract a steady clientele. "I would never even attempt to compete with a supermarket. We're different on purpose. We have to be different in all the categories we deal in, and that's why we've niched ourselves into different products that you can't buy elsewhere."

A Wellesley native, Peters has successfully navigated the stormy small business waters that leave so many others jetsammed. He began what has been a 12-year journey back in 1983, when he opened the first Sea 'n Cheese in Cohasset. "I always wanted to do my own thing, and I was sick of big business," says the Captain Pierce Road resident. Originally limiting its inventory to fish, wine and cheese, as its name implies, Sea 'n Cheese has significantly diversified its products over the years, continually providing shoppers with a mouth-watering array of edibles. "My intention is basically to provide one good, complete meal with a few other things thrown in on the side," explains Peters.



Rick Peters of Scituate, owner of Sea 'n Cheese in Cohasset, plans to relocate to North Scituate village next month.

Parking issues on table

The current traffic signs and traffic pattern are doing the job at Government Island, Safety Officer Clifton Jones said.

But Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon said selectmen may wish to revisit traffic issues when activities at Government Island get into full swing.

In another matter, selectmen will ask swim center and Little League officials to put their heads together and come up with a recommendation concerning safety and parking issues.

Safety Officer Clifton Jones said there is no problem at the swim center if everyone would park in the Sohier Street lot.

"But such is not the case," he said.

Jones said there is a major problem with cars parking on both sides of North Main Street during Little League games.

"My concern is children darting across the street between parked vehicles," he said. "There is ample parking available south of the field by the batting cage."

Jones suggested the town could repaint the existing handicapped parking sign so it reads parking for Little League and swim center, and install two HP parking spots next to the emergency vehicle entrance to the swim center.

He also suggested that a parking lot be created in the gravel pit near the Little League field and a stairway constructed to the field.

And he said the town could return to the former system of posting a police officer at all Little League games to control all pedestrian and vehicular traffic.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she was concerned with use of the gravel pit because cars could drip oil there and that was the reason the site was "deep-sixed" for a public works garage.

Cohasset woman is honored by lung association

Angie Walsh of Cohasset was honored as a local hero by the American Lung Association of Greater Norfolk County.

A health education aide at Cohasset High School, she was selected for the honor by the Lung Association for her personal efforts to help create a smoke-free environment. Her position at the school was made possible by the Tobacco Control Program, organized with funds resulting from the increase in the state excise tax on cigarettes.

"She is just wonderful," said Michael Gill, health education coordinator at the school. "Everyone is so impressed with her tremendous enthusiasm and great imagination in presenting new projects."

Local heroes are chosen by the Lung Association for their activities to promote healthy lungs and protect the environment. Ms. Walsh will be honored at a special reception at the Pillar House in Newton May 1.

A former nurse, Ms. Walsh is working with high school students to present antismoking programs to younger students. She was trained by the Lung Association to present a special puppet show featuring the "Luvable Lungsters." The puppets know how to say "no" to those substances, like tobacco smoke, that assault their lungs. High school students will present the show to students in the elementary grades.

Ms. Walsh has contacted local businesses to donate prizes for student poster contests about smoking. In one promotion, she encouraged high-schoolers to "adopt a smoker" for a day and encourage him or her to quit. At the same time she urged the students to give up a habit of their own for a day so they could relate better to the situation of smokers.

May 12, students at Cohasset High, under the supervision of Ms. Walsh, directed a play about creating a smoke-free society, starring fifth-graders at the Deerhill School in Cohasset. Fifth-graders themselves will graduate from high school in seven years and are members of what is called "the smoke-free class of 2002." The goal is that all members of the graduating class be nonsmokers.

Health board may get tough on tobacco sellers...

each of the following categories: gas station; gas station/convenience store; grocery store; and retail store. No bar or lounges were tested.

Cronin and collaborative director Dawn Silbor said that five of the establishments were repeat offenders, having sold to a minor when the operation was launched in October.

They were also disturbed that of the five Cohasset businesses attending a recent merchants' education program, four sold cigarettes to minors during the recent sting.

Police Sgt. Richard Abbadessa was at the meeting in support of the program. He said Police Chief Brian Noonan is in the process of calling all establishments which sold to minors, that they broke the law.

"The chief is very supportive of the actions of this group," he said.

In October, Cohasset had a 70 percent purchase rate, which was second or third highest among the 14 member towns.

A similar operation was conducted at 20 Scituate stores, but only succeeded at three of them, giving that town "a very good" rate of only 15 percent, according Silbor.

They explained that the more impersonal the sale is, the greater the chances that a minor will end up buying tobacco.

At stores, if the youth had to ask a clerk for cigarettes, which were stored behind the counter, the employee was more apt to ask to see identification.

Clerks were less apt to ask for ID if the purchaser picked cigarettes up in the store and brought them to the counter.

However, vending machines remain the easiest access, Silbor said, urging the town to ban them.

The girl was able to buy cigarettes without question at two of the three vending machines tested. The third machine, at Dunkin Donuts, was empty and is slated to be removed since that chain will ban smoking this summer.

A Hingham vending machine ban goes into effect in July.

James "Ted" Carroll of Cohasset's drug and alcohol committee said that board last week voted to support the proposed regulations.

Health board member Thomas Cook said, "I reviewed it this weekend and it looked reasonable to me."

The public will be welcome to comment on the proposed regulations during a hearing to be held at town hall June 20.

Copies of the seven-page document, which was drafted by the collaborative, are on file at the health board office.

Specifically the regulations would:

• allow the board of health to require permits for the sale of tobacco. Currently the state Department of Revenue (DOR) regulates tobacco retailers, however, Silbor said that list is not public.

• establish a minimum of a $100 fine for the first offense of selling tobacco to a minor; and a $500 minimum fine for each subsequent offense.

• require vending machines be in view of a bar or other public place, and the employee must ensure that minors do not purchase tobacco from a vending machine.

• prohibit free distribution of tobacco as a promotion.

• ban the sale of single cigarettes, which is already prohibited by federal law, but is nonetheless common, Silbor said.

• mandate that displays of tobacco products be located on, above or behind a counter, within ten feet of a clerk.

• require all employees selling tobacco to read the regulations and sign a statement that they understand them, which will be kept on file by the employer.

• permit the board of health to grant variances.

Everyone is excited that Edie (Cavanaugh) Quigley has returned to Cohasset for the summer! Edie and her husband spend their winters in toasty Florida, and come back here in time for spring flowers to be at their peak! Edie is known for her lovely manner, friendliness, and being a hard worker, so she is always at the top of everyone's list as a volunteer — she does outstanding work for the Social Service League, the Harden Club, etc. So, on behalf of friends, coworkers, etc., welcome home!

We received a call from Nichole Santoro last week, she's the young lady who requested time at the next School Committee meeting (to be held May 30) so that they can all discuss the new schedule changes that will result in the loss of a week's vacation next year. She is busy rounding up parents, students, families and all interested parties, encouraging them to be present so that they can be heard! She is also circulating a petition letting the committee know that there are not too many in favor of the change. If you are interested in letting your thoughts be heard, be at Cohasset High School at 7:30 p.m. May 30, or sign her petition so that they know how you feel!

Renee Prisble was accepted to the Art Institute of Chicago recently, isn't that wonderful news? Congratulations, Renee!

Harborfest buttons are on sale; the cost of $2 includes a raffle ticket. Raffle prizes include a $500 savings bond, two Red Sox tickets, two Bruins tickets (for a game at the new Fleet Center), dinner for two at the Chart House and a Minot's Ledge sweatshirt and T-shirt set and three mystery prizes.

In addition, the button entitles you to a $1 reduction for the pancake breakfast Saturday morning at the lightkeeper's residence, a $1 reduction for the chowder festival Sunday afternoon and a $2 reduction for the gospel program at the Unitarian Church Saturday evening.

Buttons are on sale at Harborfest Headquarters, 3 South Main St., (The Goodale Company) in the Village. Buy them early, and be sure to tell your friends to do the same. The dates for the Festival on the Common are June 16, 17, and 18 and will include the 40th Annual Art Center Art Festival, the Strawberry Festival, Harborfest and the Unitarian Gospel Festival.

What fun, surely events to look forward to for everyone!

Nancy Snowdale has been hard at work trying to beautify the Beechwood Ball Park. The selectmen approved her proposal at a recent meeting, but indicated that the $1,300 necessary to fund the project is unavailable. Thus Nancy is asking residents to make a $25 donation payable to the Town Treasurer who has established a special account for this project. She is hopeful that they can get some financial donations from civic organizations as well as some trees and shrubs from local landscapers.

As you know, the town will soon be improving the Beechwood Cemetery, and Nancy believes that beautification of the ball park will give the whole area a real facelift! She welcomes volunteers to assist in the mailing and other logistics!

Donations should be sent to the Town Treasurer, c/o Betty Ripley, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset MA 02025 (note Beechwood Ball Park). Nancy reports that contributions are coming in and two mailings for contributions have been sent.

You really missed a treat if you didn't see the production of "Congo Capers II" last weekend, it was super! It comprised a group of talented people who worked hard to make it the success it was. Did you know that the production marked a milestone for JoAnn Fichtner? It was the 25th production that she directed/choreographed!

Lots of familiar names appeared in the credits — Bob Leavitt as the musical director, Clark Young for lighting, Grace Wilkin for costumes, Ozzie Ingram for publicity, Jan Ditmar for make-up — the list goes on, but you can bet that all of these "pros" outdid themselves!

Whole families worked hard to make it the success that it was, and our hats are off to all of you! It was great!

We meant to applaud everyone last week for their efforts concerning the train vote. Pro or con, everyone involved did their best to inform, and that is the bottom line. At least everyone knew what they were voting for, and why! There's only one question that people are asking now, "When are the signs coming down?"

That's the news for this week, hopefully you'll give me a call with yours — do it now!

weddings and engagements

Begley/Tilden

Mr. and Mrs. Kevin J. Begley of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Charlotte Nadine Begley, to Richard J. Tilden, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Tilden of Scituate.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Cohasset High School and UMass, Amherst. She is a law student at Boston University School of Law and is employed by Cardinal Cushing School, Hanover.

Her fiancé is a graduate of Scituate High School and Norwich University and is employed as a direct care worker at Cardinal Cushing School.

An August, 1995 wedding is planned.

The Marten family celebrates 30 years in America

Jim and Shirley Marten will observe the 30th anniversary of their arrival in American on Sunday, June 25, from 4:30 p.m. to sunset, at Cohasset Harbor's Minot Ledge Lightkeepers' House (Bancroft Hall).

The celebration of the giving, sharing and understanding that they feel characterizes the American spirit will feature an elegant buffet and other refreshments. Parking will be in the Ed Young lot behind the keepers' house, with back-up parking and shuttle service from St. Anthony's Church.

The Martens believe the community effort that resulted in saving the only remaining ledge keepers' residence, while making it available to the public, epitomizes the spirit of cooperation and volunteerism that they enjoy about America.

The Martens have extended an open invitation to all local area residents to attend the gathering. For reservations call Mrs. Henry G. "Jean" Simonds, 107 Nichols Rd., Cohasset 02025 by June 17.

Donations will go toward reducing the $50,000 keepers' house mortgage and will be matched dollar for dollar by a $10,000 Cohasset Rotary Club challenge grant. Those interested in attending may donate as a lieutenant ($10), commander ($15), captain ($25), admiral ($50) or lightkeeper ($100 and above).

The following people are members of the board of overseers of the Lightkeeper's Residence: Adelaide Pratt, 98 Howard Gleason Road; Anne Vanderweil, 500 Jerusalem Road; Julie Guild, 365 Jerusalem Road; Shirley Marten, 78 Nichols Road; Ed Bursk, 15 Sheldon Road; Jean Simonds, 107 Nichols Road; Linton Young, 31 Highland Avenue.

Tea Party time

Once again, South Shore residents are being kicked in the teeth.

After a year-long debate about the possible restoration of train service, legislators are now looking doubtful that we will see the return of rail.

Yet, we are still being assessed hundreds of thousands of dollars by the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority as a member of the MBTA's district of 78 cities and towns. But we don't have any service!

Now, the state Department of Environmental Protection has imposed drastic septic system regulations for the sake of our public health.

And while the goal is admirable and worthy, the effect has been devastating.

Residents are finding that they can't sell their homes because their problem-free septic systems cannot pass an inspection.

Mortgage lenders are questioning the value of their portfolios. Have they lent too much to homeowners whose property needs an additional $25,000 investment in the on-site septic system to maintain its assessed value?

Assessors are shrugging about the property values at this point; their valuations are based on the full and fair market value between a willing seller and willing lender.

But realtors are seeing potential sales disappear in the traditionally busy spring home buying season.

New legislation which will allow homeowners to revamp their septic systems using town funds — to be paid as betterment assessments — has yet to be adopted locally.

And Scituate health director Jennifer Lamb Sullivan, who is president of the Massachusetts Health Officers Association, says town meeting has to approve the money up front without knowing how many will request betterments.

But here is a red flag — these funds are not included in the Proposition 2 1/2 tax cap!

It seems that we are being asked to pony up funds for our fellow residents to borrow, yet all of us will have to finance this pool of money — through our real estate taxes.

Meanwhile, the state is being asked to help homeowners in the 42 cities and towns in the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority district to appropriate funds to help reduce the costs of their sewer (and water) bills. Last year, the state legislature appropriated $30 million to reduce those assessments to homeowners.

And, with the declining contribution of federal dollars to the Boston Harbor cleanup project, guess who is going to be asked to help offset the additional costs to the MWRA district residents. We are.

At last week's debate about Title V at Scituate High School, local residents recounted their tales of woe. Throughout the three-hour hearing, called by state Rep. Frank Hynes, an undercurrent of rage and frustration surfaced.

It should not be dismissed.

Two years ago citizens in the MWRA's district staged another "Tea Party" to protest the soaring water and sewer rates imposed on local communities, demonstrating what a vocal citizenry will do. Instead of tea, they tossed old MWRA bills into Boston Harbor.

American patriots at the Boston Tea Party protested unjust taxation and began their fight for freedom from an oppressive king.

If we must abide by these new Title V regulations and find our own means to finance these septic system improvements, perhaps we should form our own tea party and protest the MBTA assessments and that portion of the state budget which allocates the funds for MWRA relief to a select portion of the population of our commonwealth.

To the Editor:

Cohasset Heights Limited (CHL) operates a 24 acre private landfill one mile uphill from our reservoir, Lily Pond. Landfill pollutants have leaked off the property. The Board of Health has documented that 6.5 acres of land abutting the landfill has polluted water under the surface.

CHL is seeking state approval for expansion into another 27 acres. The town through its elected boards, engineers, attorneys and interested citizens has steadfastly opposed the expansion request.

Town Meeting in 1986 passed a zoning bylaw. It mapped a ring around our reservoir and prohibited any landfill there. Part of CHL's property, to be used for the expansion, was affected by the law. In late 1994 CHL filed a lawsuit, its objective, to move the zoning line off its property.

The Conservation Commission recently fined CHL for environmental violations. It was in turn sued by CHL on procedural issues.

The town has retained special town counsel on these cases. He has stated that town has a good case on upholding the zoning bylaw. The owner of CHL on April 19, 1995 at a town hall meeting asked if his lawyers could try and settle these cases.

In early May two written proposals, substantially the same, were sent to our town counsel by our special town counsel with instruction not to release them to elected board members or the public. Eventually the documents were released to the selectmen. The Secretary of State, Public Records Division, has advised that there is no exception to the public records law that allows the proposals to be kept from the public.

The CHL proposal demonstrates why the public's business should not be conducted behind closed doors. In the name of "settlement" it listed the following:

the Town will give up its defense of its zoning bylaw

the Town will let some "experts" redraw our zoning map

the Town will not object to the dumping of all types of solid waste, except municipal the Town will give up its right to seek Court enforcement for violations of dump regulations the Town will give up its right to seek Court enforcement of wetlands violations, etc.

If the town complies with the above, CHL will drop its lawsuits and possibly pay $1 more per ton to the town. CHL's demand is nothing less than a formal declaration of the town's unconditional surrender. It appears as if some town officials were lining up to sign it.

When the terms of this sellout proposal become public, some town officials were outraged, not at the oppressive terms demanded by CHL, but at those who let the public know what was going on. Selectmen Martha Gjesteby performed a patriotic service to this town in refusing to keep the public in the dark on this vital issue. She is an irreplaceable asset. She should not be carped at by those who fear public scrutiny. Mrs. Gjesteby should be applauded for her efforts to protect the town.

Thanks for health day support

To the Editor:

The Social Service League and the Cohasset Board of Health would like to thank all who contributed to the success of our recent "Community Health Awareness Day."

We are grateful to the following:

The Pilgrim Cooperative Bank for funding the Hearing Van; the Rotary Club of Cohasset for funding the cholesterol screening; Stop and Shop, Atlantic Bagel Co. and Dunkin' Donuts for providing the refreshments; Second Congregational church for allowing us to use Bates Hall again this year; all the physicians and health care professionals who provided free health screenings; Mike Gill and Angie Walsh at Cohasset High School for their imaginative and fun ways of involving the three schools in our health awareness day activities and all volunteers who worked very hard before, during and after the fair.

Finally, we thank the townspeople who attended and took advantage of all the screenings and information available during the day. We appreciate all your support and hope to see even more of you next year!

Single vacation week is opposed by student council

To the Editor:

Recently, the Cohasset School Committee proposed the Cohasset school system change their vacation periods next year. They stated that they would eliminate the February and April vacations and add a single vacation period in March.

What the Cohasset School Committee must understand is that they are diverting from the norm. Most of the public schools throughout the state have the same vacation periods. This is important due to the many extracurricular activities that take place throughout our state. Many organizations plan their educational trips during these vacation periods. Most students at this time interact with other students throughout the state and develop friendships and share many different learning experiences. By changing the present standard school vacation periods, Cohasset will become an island, separate from the mass students vacationing population. This will segregate us from the surrounding communities.

The Randolph and Falmouth schools eliminated the February and April vacations in favor of a single vacation week in March in their 1994-95 school calendar. Has the Cohasset School committee researched why the Randolph schools decided to reinstate the February and April vacations in next year's 1995-1996 school calendar? Why have all the surrounding communities rejected the idea of the single vacation week in March? It has already been tried and failed in Randolph.

It is important that the Cohasset School Committee understand the definition of "vacation." According to the Random House Dictionary, the definition of vacation is "A period of rest or freedom from regular work or study." As in the above definition, we must rest our minds so we will be refreshed upon reentering the classrooms so we can absorb new learning materials. Freedom is expressed as being free to move about. If the Cohasset School Committee implements this proposal, our freedom will be diminished and we will become a minority within our state's system. The school committee will jeopardize and or inhibit our learning process.

In closing, administrators, personnel, teachers, counselors, nurses, custodians, bus drivers and students are responsible for everyday preparation of the school. It is obvious that these individuals bring the walls of our schools alive. Without them, the chalkboard will be empty, the desks will stay shut and the corridors will be silenced. The School Committee must take it upon themselves to understand the proposal will destroy the moral and spirit of these who make up the school operation.

If you're interested in joining our protest, we will be addressing the Cohasset School Committee, Tuesday, May 30, at 7:30 p.m., at Cohasset High School.

Weymouth needs Greenbush stations

(Ed.'s note: A copy of the following letter to Sen. Robert Hedlund was sent to the Mariner for publication).

Dear Senator,

I would like to thank you for your input towards your reasoning in opposition to the Greenbush Line.

You may be surprised to learn that according to the 1990 US Census inflows indicate that Weymouth has at least 6,604 residents who commute to Boston plus 557 to Cambridge and 399 to Brockton. Hingham has 2,134 Boston commuters. Beverly as example has only 1,750 and with five stations cannot provide enough parking because there are many out of towners who use their commuter rail.

If the Greenbush Line does not go "on line," Weymouth will have only one station as opposed to the three the Greenbush alternative will provide. I am sure that you would agree Weymouth needs better access to commuter rail than only one station.

The future users of the Old Colony commuter rail system should be aware of the compromise of the No Build Greenbush Alternative.

Beach clean-up a success

United support for Greenbush urged

To the Editor:

In 1959, the last year Greenbush ran, there were 1,315 children in school, many of whom walked or rode bikes across grade crossings to school. This compares with 1,170 school enrollments today, many of whom are bussed. The train ran successfully over the same roadbed through the same grade crossings for 100 years before, during, and after the building of present schools. I never heard of a single child hurt by a train.

It distresses me terribly that today's parents are being frightened with almost hysterical alarms about children's safety, mental distraction in school, and even hearing loss from train whistles.

We, whose children went to school then, keep repeating there is nothing to worry about. Safety measures work. Kids love trains but they don't run in front of them. They enjoy train whistles, especially at recess.

Parents should worry if trains don't come back. Only 22 percent of Cohasset's population (persons over 18) has children in school. Young managerial and executive families who support good schools will continue to prefer Weston, Lincoln, Concord, North Shore with their reliable commuter rail. We will continue to have an aging population with other priorities, empty store fronts, degradation of 3A in pursuit of taxable enterprises, shortfalls in school financing, and a long, lonely mosquito-breeding right of way.

What do train opponents think federal/state transit authorities will do next for a South Shore that rejects their best effort 10-year study of alternatives, their gift of a federal/state funded new train utilizing an already existing and therefore cost-and-tax-saving right of way?

I so wish the new families along the track would heed testimony of experienced families along the track, that the railroad was a benefit, not a problem.

Peter Pearce says, "We have 200 feet abutting the track and we had a great time with it. The kids used to watch the trains and wave and the train tooted back." The kids used to watch the trains and wave and the train tooted back."

I believe present opponents and their growing families would learn to appreciate and use the trains as we did. I believe all property values, including theirs, would rise as in other affluent towns with commuter rail.

Fellow parents and grandparents, please, for the sake of Cohasset's economic well being, schools and school children, unite in support of Greenbush.

Greenbush support has dwindled

To the Editor:

Well, the ballots have been cast and counted and the placards removed. What did we learn from Saturday's (May 13) vote regarding Greenbush?

We learned that Cohasset is split 50/50 over the issue. Support for restoration has dwindled from more than 80 percent to 50 percent. Those who voted against the train have grown from 266 brave souls to well over 1,300! Wow!

What has happened? Surely they cannot all be abutters and God forbid, recent arrivals to town? Rail supporters have long promised that the vast majority of our townsfolk favored Greenbush Restoration. Let us now agree, that myth has proved to be false.

Greenbush train will hurt quality of life in Cohasset

To the Editor:

I strongly oppose the restoration of the antiquated Greenbush Line. I am not an abutter, a parent of small children, or a person afraid of positive change within the village of Cohasset. As a daily commuter into Boston, I am sharing my beliefs of the potentially devastating effects that this outmoded form of diesel smoking transportation will have on quality of life in Cohasset.

We are fortunate to have maintained a quality of life that has become extinct in many other communities across the nation. Cohasset is lucky to be free of noise pollution, traffic back-ups, and commercial endeavors that do not contribute to its positive identity or fit into the village scale.

Our noise is that from natural sounds of the wind, birds and waves along our beaches. It is that of children playing freely in our neighborhoods and the sound of their bicycles and skateboards on our streets and sidewalks. It is presently not polluted by the noise of diesel locomotives traveling up to 50 mph, or their required safety measures in the form of bells, whistles, and horns which the MBTA admits will emit sounds that are no louder than a car horn, with sound traveling no farther than 6 miles in each direction at least 24 times per day.

I have lived in town for 1-1/2 years and have never heard a car horn blow, especially for up to two minutes in duration, 24 times per day. There are currently few obstacles to the orderly flow of traffic along our narrow and winding roads. This will change drastically at these 11 grade crossings while we sit in idling cars and wait for trains to pass.

Our social scene is generated by casual happenings along our sidewalks, on the common, in Strawberry Parfait's wonderful outdoor garden, as well as in our own back yards. They are encouraged to occur due to the sense of freedom that comes from not having to worry about your personal safety, or that of your loved ones. They occur when you can talk in a normal tone of voice to your neighbors, and not be drowned out by, or have to yell over, an approaching train and all of its imposed safety precautions.

The architectural scale, density, and cohesive beauty of the village are the most positive manmade distinctions that we enjoy. Our houses, stores, and even churches share a unified scale that creates a somewhat democratic appearance and similarity of purpose.

The train is roughly the same length as a WalMart store and almost as tall. It will be a moving target that will physically divide our village and visually inject its obtrusive scale and noise repeatedly many times per day. Whereas a WalMart is only visual pollution for those who live near it, these trains will be in most of our faces at each of the 11 grade crossings, near our schoolyards, and in some of our backyards. If Cohasset residents were voting on a WalMart, I have no doubt that the town residents would be up in arms over such a negative intrusion into our daily quality of life.

For those people who see a windfall from the rise in property values coming with the train, consider the quality of life issues and the fact that real estate in unique places like Cohasset will sell to people looking for truly distinctive communities. I can assure you that there are fewer and fewer of these places out there from which to choose. I would propose that we elaborate upon our distinctive position by addressing our transportation issues creatively in unobtrusive ways that protect and promote our uniqueness.

My wife and I selected Cohasset after a two-year search for a place that had significant natural beauty, a solid sense of community, a moderately controlled density, and within commuting distance to a major city. Like most people who purchase in Cohasset, we were aware of the perils of the Southeast Expressway, we were advised that there was no form of reasonable mass transportation, and we spend approximately one hour travel time each way (on a very enjoyable and dependable ferry) to and from work in Boston. By MBTA's own figures, even with the resurrection of the Greenbush, we would still have to drive to a station, and ride for 45 minutes on a train. This may be "mass transportation", but it sure isn't "rapid" and I believe that it comes with too much negative baggage.

Public has right to know about landfill plans

To the Editor:

Should the selectmen be allowed to agree to support the proposed 27.5 acre "Area V" expansion of the Cohasset Heights Ltd. (CHL) landfill, as was suggested by CHL owner Paul Barry April 19, if CHL agrees to "limit" the expansion to construction and demolition (C&D) waste?

Should the selectmen be allowed to agree to support this expansion of CHL as part of a negotiated "global" settlement to the suit filed against the town by CHL to overturn our existing water supply protection district?

Should the selectmen be allowed to negotiate in secret with CHL and not inform or involve the public about this deal until it is a "fait accompli"?

The answer is "no" to all three questions. Allowing any expansion of CHL, even if "just" for C&D wastes, is not in the best interests of the Town of Cohasset. We should not allow the existence of the suits filed by CHL against the town to allow for negotiations between CHL and the town to be conducted in secret.

The facts are that there is no reason for us to negotiate a settlement on the water resource district suit. We have the upper hand and an excellent chance of winning this suit outright, which we need to do to protect our public drinking water supply.

Agreeing to an expanded C&D landfill at CHL should be taken off the table, if there are any negotiations on this suit. While CHL may propose that we accept an expanded C&D landfill, we are not obligated nor well-advised to seriously consider it.

Contrary to a common misconception, a construction and demolition waste landfill is not a good deal. The existing CHL landfill is a C&D landfill, has emitted noxious odors, violated state and local environmental regulations, contaminated groundwater, and damaged wetlands.

Studies show that leachate from C&D wastes is contaminated with toxic volatile organic chemicals (VOC's) and is capable of polluting groundwater and threatening drinking water supplies. A 1988 study of five C&D landfills in Maryland indicated that high levels of VOCs and toxic heavy metals have been detected in monitoring wells at all five landfills, including carbon tetrachloride, chromium, copper, mercury, trichloroethane, and vinyl chloride.

A 1991 study of leachate from three C&D landfills in Texas found the levels of contaminants within the range usually found in leachate from MSW landfills, and concluded that "The leachate, when compared with natural groundwater quality in the area, indicates contamination from exposure to the buried materials and therefore, like the MSW landfill leachate, poses a threat to groundwater quality if not properly contained."

Also, the proposed Area V expansion of Cohasset Heights will result in a 210 foot high "Mt. Trashmore" that will be visible from Route 3A. Do we want that for our town?

Just because CHL has filed suit against the town does not require town officials to conduct negotiations in secret. The public has an important and necessary role in this decision making process.

The selectmen need to hear from you. I urge everyone reading this to write to Mr. Merle Brown, Chairman, Board of Selectmen, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 (Fax #383-1630).

The Grand Tour

with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

Elizabeth and Steven Pinkus have decorated their adorable grey-brown weathered clapboard-sided home at 475 Beechwood Street for springtime. The weathered exterior is accented by pristine white trim, doors and white picket pence. The front door has a bouquet of Forsythia while one of the side doors is decorated with a basket full of daffodils and a small American flag. The watering can on the antique wooden bench adds to the overall picture-perfect quality of this Cohasset home.

ROCKLAND TRUST, THE PREFERRED LENDER FOR SMALL BUSINESS

BIG ADVANTAGES FOR SMALL BUSINESS

You don't think small when it comes to your business. And neither does Rockland Trust. In fact, 79% of our commercial loans are to small businesses.* Recently, the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) recognized our contributions and service to growing businesses by designating us an SBA Preferred Lender. Five banks in the state hold this distinction and Rockland Trust is the only one headquartered in Southeastern Massachusetts.

As a Preferred Lender we have been delegated the authority to make SBA-guaranteed loans right in our offices rather than sending them to the SBA for review. This means that you get the funds you need, when you need them. To start your business or expand it. Our SBA lending team is ready to explain all the details and help you on your way to do what you do best. Growing your business.

SBA Preferred Lender

To find out more about the SBA Loan program or any of our other advantages for smaller businesses call 1-800-826-6100, Ext. 6209, or visit any Rockland Trust Branch or Commercial Lending Center.

Actors from Wheelock perform at Deer Hill School

By Diana N. Kinch
Special to the Mariner

A performance given by Wheelock Family Theatre's Story Troupers on April 25 was well received by an assembly of Deer Hill teachers and students.

The performance kicked-off the Deer Hill drama workshop, a special project funded by the PSO.

With few costumes or props, the five Wheelock performers improvised, along with several other stories, a folk tale from Japan, "The Tongue-Cut Sparrow," and revised fairytales such as "Little Red Riding Hood" into jazzy versions and commentaries on the times we live in. The performers also brought spectators to an Italian hillside village where Strega Nona made them laugh while she worked her magic.

Connor Mangan, one of the high school student helpers for the program, said it was great for Deer Hill students, who range in age from nine to 13, to have an opportunity to be introduced to drama. His own first exposure to a dramatic role was not until his junior year of high school. This year Connor debuted as Nathan Detroit in the school's production of "Guys and Dolls."

Most of the student helpers are veteran actresses and actors who bring valuable experience to the project. Maryellen Rayment is participating as part of her Senior Project.

The first workshop on acting technique was held April 27, with 23 students participating. The Wheelock staff, along with Junior High and High School volunteers, directed scenes from "Charlotte's Web."

The second workshop on movement took place on May 4, and on May 11 26 students attended a workshop on building props and costumes.

A total of 70 students signed up for and are involved in the workshops. The Deer Hill Drama Club has continued to meet, with two remaining workshops scheduled for May 25 and June 1. Student and parent volunteers will help drama workshop participants develop and improvise some of the scenes from "Charlotte's Web." Two or three scenes from the story will be performed by the club at the end of the workshops.

The Cohasset PSO funded the project. Volunteers included teachers Joann Magoun and Susan Horigan; Junior High and High School students Maryellen Rayment, Kevin O'Donnell, Meredith O'Hayre, Ronnie Nicynski, Connor Mangan, Rene Fogot, Jamie Kondrat and Karen Niessink and parents Dee Nicynski, Susan Cunningham, Susan Carr, Linda Bolster, Donna French and Diana Kinch.

DHS solar fair a success

Mrs. Cassiani's and Mrs. Leonard's fourth-grade classes produced a Solar Fair for all fourth-graders and their parents recently at Deer Hill School.

Every student created a tye-dye t-shirt to look like a sunburst of color. (The students wish to thank Mrs. Nycinski, Mrs. Ulmer, Mrs. Maynard, Mrs. Bixby and Ms. Ojerholm for helping with the tye-dying.) Through research and classroom instruction students developed games, poems, displays and experiments focusing on the solar theme.

Chuck Kelly, a fourth-grader, said, "I spent a lot of time doing my solar cooker, but it was fun!" A solar cooker is a demonstration of how the earth and atmosphere work together. A painted box covered with a sheet of plastic was used to display how the atmosphere holds in heat. Students "cooked" s'mores (graham crackers, chocolate and marshmallow) or nachos in their cookers.

Other projects included the greenhouse effect, planets, constellations, mythology and the solar system. Parents and students enjoyed participating in the valuable learning experience.

Anna Jane Murphy, a student in Mrs. Cassiani's room, said, "All students received Milky Way™ bars for participating in the Solar Fair."

Artists honored tonight

The Arts Boosters Club will host the annual Cohasset High School Arts Recognition Night on Thursday, May 25, at 7:30 p.m. in the CHS cafeteria, immediately following the CHS Arts Open House. 200 seniors high school students, their parents and teachers will gather to honor CHS artists, dramatists, musicians, writers and other creative students involved in the arts.

Invitations have been mailed to parents of students who will be recognized by arts teachers Joel Antolini, Maureen Duffy, Ron Emmons, Marcia Lajoie, Bryan Marks, John Packard, Tom Sippel and Jo-Ellen Wood.

Teachers will present individual achievement awards, the Arts Boosters will present a new "Shining Light" award, assistant principal Jack DeLorenzo will hand out the Undergraduate Study Award and principal Meg Gallagher will recognize the Outstanding Senior in the Arts.

Honor society new members

13 Cohasset High School students were recently inducted into the Joseph Osgood chapter of the National Honor Society. The formal induction ceremony followed a dinner in honor of the students held on May 3 at the Cohasset Lightkeepers' House on Government Island.

Juniors and seniors are selected for membership based on scholarship, character, leadership and service. Newly inducted junior members are: Chloe Chittick, Erin Devine, Lauren DeVito, Tafana Fiore, Megan McNamara, Sergio Munoz, Ryan Sawchuk and John Whitehouse.

Newly inducted seniors include: Thomas Greco, Corrinna McMackin, Chip Moore, Kristin Niessink and Dean Volungis.

Second year seniors are: Candice Buckley, Katie Cibelli, Emily D'Urso, Ann Dane, Jessica Jenkins, Bethany Quintin, Mary Ellen Rayment, Jessica Snow and Jeremiah Stevenson.

NHS faculty advisor Paul Narkiewicz commended all students for their achievements and superintendent Steve Hart presided over the induction ceremony.

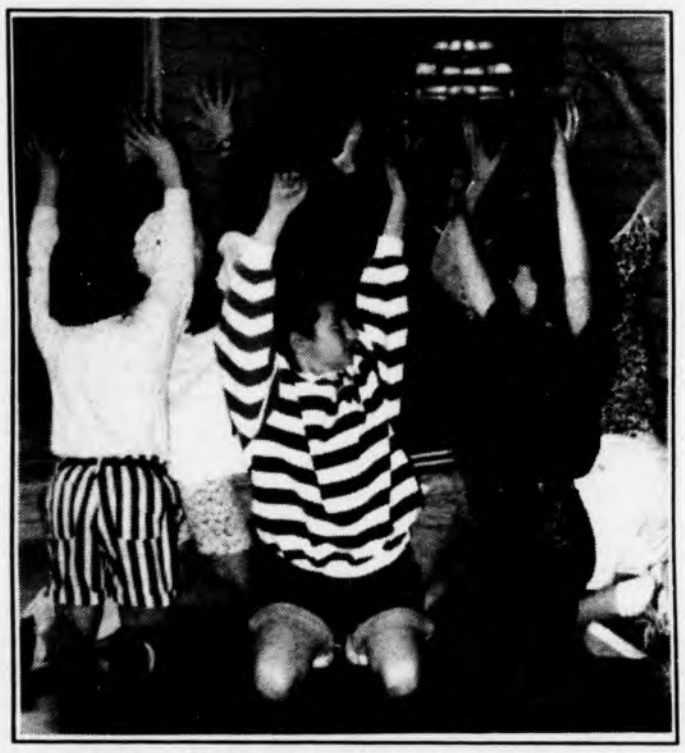
New officers are: president, Ryan Sawchuk; vice president, Megan McNamara; secretary, Chloe Chittick and treasurer, Erin Devine. President Ryan Sawchuk described the types of service that members perform, including tutoring younger students, and suggested new service possibilities, such as providing student help in the school library.

Dance to support teen center!

The Cohasset Teen Center on South Main St., which is totally supported by donations and fundraising, will hold a dance on June 9 for seventh-, eighth- and ninth-graders at Cohasset High School.

The dance will feature a deejay and refreshments. Further information will be announced at a later date.

Seniors Matt Pierce and Chris Adams scraped old paint and applied a fresh coat of new paint to the Teen Center throughout the cold and rainy weather. The job was undertaken as their senior project.



Deer Hill students participate in the drama workshop, a special project funded through the PSO. Here the young actors perform a movement exercise.

Co-chairs extend thanks

The publicity co-chairs of the PSO, Diana Kinch and Pearl Smith, would like to thank their committee members for the help they gave during 1994-95 in designing graphics and distributing posters for various school events. Committee members include Joanne Gavaza, Emily Malone, Debby Niessink and Lyn Previte.

The co-chairs also wish to thank Mary Ford of the Cohasset Mariner and Molly Hochkeppel of the Patriot Ledger for publishing the many schoolwide and community news items entered weekly and Ilene Colwill, secretary of Osgood School, Joni Meade, Deer Hill School, and Deanna Mulligan, Cohasset High School, for their efforts and time in reproducing news in school menus and for schoolwide distribution.

CHS arts magazine ready

Cohasset High School's annual literary and arts magazine, "Whispers & Shadows," will soon be mailed home to all families with children in grades seven through 12. The publication features the creative effort of more than 50 artists, writers and staff workers, under the direction of teacher/advisors Jo-Ellen Wood and Tom Sippel. The staff wishes to thank the CHS staff for production help and the CHS Arts Boosters for assistance with funding and mailing.

Gjesteby scolded for distributing 'secret' document

state opinion on its status as a public record.

After the uproar, Gjesteby, who said she gave the document to Fair Oaks Lane resident Kevin O'Donnell, a member of SAFE — a citizens' group opposed to the landfill — for his opinion, conceded that she should not have shown it to anyone.

"In the light of day I see it was not the right thing to do," she said.

Selectman Michael H. Sullivan then alleged that O'Donnell gave the document to fellow SAFE activist John K. McNabb Jr. of Pond Street.

In a telephone interview, O'Donnell confirmed that he passed the document on to McNabb and said he was perplexed by both the censure of Gjesteby and outrage exhibited by some of the selectmen.

"You can't be censured for giving out a public record which should have been released pronto," he said. "And the important thing is not the release of the document but what's in the document.

"The board's wrath is misplaced, they should be outraged over the oppressive terms (of the settlement proposal)," O'Donnell added.

Selectman Peter Pratt, has said for weeks the document should be public but was willing to wait for a state ruling on the matter. But if Cohasset Heights Landfill or any other private party proposes a settlement with the town — then the taxpayers should know about it before it's a done deal, Pratt said.

Two weeks ago, when Pratt was unable to obtain the CHL draft proposal — he went to the state for guidance on the public records law.

THE PAPER'S TRAIL

CHL's attorney had faxed the draft proposal outline in question to the town's special environmental counsel, Warner & Stackpole's Michael Leon, who in turn faxed it to Town Counsel Richard Henderson Friday (May 5). Henderson did not immediately release the document to selectmen because Leon asked him to keep in confidential.

"I was honoring the request of someone," Henderson said.

At their board meeting last week (May 15), selectmen said in the future any proposals would be sent directly to them and they made it clear W&S should not be negotiating with CHL.

Warner & Stackpole will continue defending the town against "certain pieces of litigation," Henderson said, but are not authorized to conduct settlement negotiations.

RIGHT TO KNOW

Gjesteby said at that meeting the public has the right to know about proposals.

"If CHL wishes to enter into negotiations, it can send a letter to the board with proposals," she said. "The proposal is public but the board's strategy is executive."

Henderson said he and Leon do not agree with the case the state uses as a precedent regarding release of documents. He said release of certain documents could prejudice communication until the matter is settled when all becomes public.

"Both Leon and I don't follow the logic," Henderson said.

In the South Hadley case, the school committee in that town was ordered to release correspondence from the plaintiffs in an action against that board. The exemption to the Public Records Law only applies to inter-agency or intra-agency memoranda or letters, the acting supervisor of public records Mary Schwind wrote to the South Hadley Town Counsel.

In a related matter, selectmen had cancelled any further executive sessions with their board, the health board, conservation commission and CHL until the district attorney's office responds to a complaint that these meetings are in violation of the Open Meeting Law. But this week, Selectman Merle S. Brown said the chairman of those three boards should meet to discuss cost and legal strategy.

Pratt explained that Cohasset Heights was discussed in an executive session with selectmen, the board of health and conservation commission Wednesday (May 3). In a formal complaint McNabb, asked that the district attorney investigate whether both the April 4 and May 3 meetings held in executive session were in violation of the law. In his letter to Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt, McNabb points out that while it is likely part of these meetings fall under an exception allowed under the law — it is also likely that portions of the meetings do not.

The Open Meeting Law allows executive sessions to discuss strategy with respect to litigation if the open meeting could have a detrimental effect on the bargaining or litigating position of the governmental body.

CHL has filed two suits against the town, one against the Conservation Commission over fees it assess CHL and another to attempt to overturn the town Water Resource District, explained McNabb.

Apparently Leon, who was faxed the draft proposal from CHL, in turn faxed the proposal to Henderson late Friday (May 5). Henderson, who was out of town for the weekend, did not see it until Sunday night (May 7).

It took five days for the document to be released to selectmen and as of Monday (May 23), it had not been released to the board of health or conservation commission.

Pratt stressed that a proposal from an outside party is a public record and is inherently different than confidential memos generated by the town to determine legal strategy.

At the May 8 selectmen's meeting Pratt's points on public records were drowned out by emotional squabbling among board members who are upset with Pratt for contacting the state.

Before Henderson arrived at the May 8 meeting, Selectmen Michael Sullivan and Pratt had an angry exchange.

"You're a member of a five-member board, not a mayor," Selectman Sullivan charged.

"I have civil rights as an American citizen. I have not surrendered any of those rights when I became an elected official," Pratt shot back.

Pratt said there are two issues here: town counsel's responsibility to disclose to selectmen documents in his possession and the the matter of whether the documents are public records available for inspection by citizens.

At that selectmen's meeting Bob Martin said he thought lawyers should keep documents private because it might jeopardize the public interest.

But in a telephone interview, Pratt said homeowners in the vicinity of the landfill might feel differently.

"If I owned a $400,000 home on Fair Oaks Lane, I'd want access to every piece of paper before I had 250 feet of trash over my roof line," he said.

At the May 15 Sullivan's motion to require individual selectmen to notify fellow board members before contacting officials at the state level was not seconded.

"Your treading on extremely dangerous water here," Pratt said. "No citizen gives up their civil rights when they become an elected official. (Your motion) is impossibly vague and impossible to enforce."

Local legislators split on fate of Greenbush line

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Plans to restore the Greenbush commuter rail are likely finished for the time being, according to State Rep. Frank Hynes.

Speaking before a breakfast meeting held at Norwell Town Hall last week, sponsored by the South Shore Coalition, the Marshfield Democrat predicted that it is unlikely that the Weld administration will push ahead with what is being seen as an increasingly controversial project.

"I would not be surprised if the decision is against it," Hynes said. The state secretary of environmental affairs is expected to rule on the project's environmental impact in June.

"This is my own private view. I'm thinking that the secretary is hard pressed to move forward," Hynes, a train supporter, said. He cited the "volatility of the opposition, although I do not believe it is the majority, it represents a significant number of people."

Two weeks ago Cohasset voters indicated continued support for the train by a slim three vote margin, while town meetings in both Hingham and Scituate have passed anti-train articles in recent weeks. Hynes represents Marshfield, where the train is considered popular, and Scituate.

Hynes also said the since debt service comprises 39 percent of the MBTA's operating budget, the T might be reluctant to add to the debt with controversial projects, when several other rail proposals, such as commuter rail to New Bedford, are popular.

Two other legislators offered a split opinion on the train's restoration.

State Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray, Republican of Cohasset, whose district includes Hingham, Cohasset and Hull, agreed with Hynes' assessment.

"I think it is (dead)," she said, adding that it is not just the recent votes against Greenbush. "It's a feeling I've had for some time."

Murray said the MBTA did not appear as eager to build Greenbush as it was to build the Middleboro and Plymouth Lines. The Middleboro line was already open for freight traffic and the Plymouth line, which goes through the Rockland area, is now under construction.

"They went very quickly with the other two lines," she said.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, a train opponent, said he is not ready to rule out the train just yet.

"Oh no, I don't believe that's the case at all," he said.

(See page 19)

Gjesteby scolded...

POSSIBLE CENSURE

But that dispute, paled in comparison with the dressing down Gjesteby received this week.

In a 4-1 vote (Pratt voting no), the board will ask Henderson to see what disciplinary avenues are open to the board when a member breaks the rules.

After the meeting, Pratt said he felt Gjesteby's affirmative vote on that matter was "admirable."

Goedecke charged the town's efforts to deal with legal issues surrounding Cohasset Heights have been "thoroughly stymied by less than five people in town."

"I will not be tyrannized this is the last straw," she said.

Henderson said Tuesday that in his view pursuing a ruling from the public records office on the settlement proposal was now academic and was a waste of the town's time.

"Everyone has it," he said about the document which was anonymously placed in the Cohasset Mariner's pick up basket Tuesday. "So why waste the public's money pursuing this ruling?"

Henderson said he had "no idea" if the release of the proposal would hurt the town's negotiating position with CHL.

Overflow meeting wants plug pulled on Title 5 rules

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Several hundred people packed the Scituate High School auditorium last week to demand that the state's new rules governing septic systems be scraped immediately.

A parade of furious homeowners threatened to sue the state, march on Beacon Hill, repeal the rules by ballot referendum and even hinted at civil disobedience over the tough mandates, which require homeowners to replace, rather than repair, failed septic systems, often at costs approaching $25,000.

Most speakers said they lack the money for new systems and cannot sell their houses in the meantime, forcing them to consider bankruptcy or abandoning their homes.

"The state creates its next generation of Timothy McVeighs (a suspect in the Oklahoma City bombing,)" shouted Scituate resident Marjorie Louise Payne to thunderous applause.

Payne explained that she has been told the only alternative to her failed septic system is a tight tank, which could cost as much as $25,000.

She said that she cannot sell her Pheasant Hill Drive house without an approved septic system, but that she lacks the money to install one. Banks won't give her a loan, since the property will not sell.

"I will not put a tight tank on my property," she thundered. "There will be a condemned sign on my property. We will walk away from it and let it rot."

WELD CRITICIZED

The legislators were sympathetic, but pointed out that the rules come from the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), reportable to Gov. William Weld and not to them.

State Rep. Frank Hynes, D.-Marshfield, who chaired the session, Reps. Mary Jeanettee Murray, R.-Cohasset, Janet O'Brien, D.-Hanover and Francis Marini, R.-Hanson and State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R.-Weymouth, all said they agreed with many points made by the audience.

After the meeting, Hynes said they would talk to Weld again on the issue.

Weld, who was trashed by many speakers, was even criticized by fellow Republican Marini, who said the governor and administration officials think the public is simply confused. "They think it's not a problem, that it's a breaking in period. We (local reps) all knew it would be a disaster," Marini said.

Payne was only one of a procession of homeowners, bankers, builders, realtors and officials, all of whom told a group of area legislators that the stringent regulations on septic systems, known as Title V are too rigid, complicated and ambiguous to work. Some people said that those with truly failed septic systems will be reluctant to report them, while some feared that so-called tight tanks, which can cost as much as $900 per month to pump out, could be punctured, allowing sewage to seep into the ground.

HURTING BUSINESS

Two health board officials spoke — Jennifer Lamb Sullivan, Scituate health agent, and Robert Lyons of the Hanover health board.

Sullivan said between 42 and 58 percent of Scituate septic systems are failing, that the exhaustive paperwork and site review has forced her to work overtime, abandon other duties and store the overflow of documents in the hall. She charged that DEP often provides conflicting answers to Title V questions.

Lyons said that Hanover has a 25 percent failure rate and that the rules have created chaos for the department.

"We have one phone line that is constantly busy from eight in the morning to four in the evening," he said. "These regulations are not understood even by the folks that incepted them."

Paul Breen, president and CEO of the Mass Cooperative Bank said that currently seven of the bank's mortgages are now being held up because of Title V.

He said that the number of sales which may be affected is actually much higher since each seller is presumably moving somewhere else and each buyer is coming from another house.

"These (rules) are severe and unworkable," he said, stating that the regulations render one-third of his town, Acton, unsalable.

He also pointed out that septic system inspectors have a potential conflict of interest when they declare a system failed because they are often the contractors called in to fix it.

Dale Zelleny of the Community Banking League, an association of small banks, said the industry is deeply concerned about the effect Title V rules are having on the economy.

"The real estate industry has been badly hurt by Title V," said Gail Peterson of Hingham, vice president of the Plymouth County Board of Realtors.

She estimated that 75 percent of the septic tests order through her office have failed.

"There is no planning here," said another realtor, Norwell's Donna Brooks O'Neil. "We need to have some sense, some planning. Don't postpone it (Title V implementation), ditch it."

She urged everyone to contact the governor's office.

Other residents said that as their property has become worthless, they are entitled to property tax reductions.

Marshfield resident Pat Bean said she spent $20,000 for a new septic system under the old Title V rules, but that system has since failed under the new regulations.

"Really you are bankrupting me," she said, pledging to file a public record request to review what she called the environmental research faulty.

Scituate's Kay Artman said her husband lost his job but found a new one in Hartford, Conn. But because of their failed septic system, they are unable to sell their house.

A Cohasset man reported that he had to take his house off the market and forgo a new job in Arizona because he couldn't sell his house.

A Norwell woman reported that selling her late grandfather's Cohasset home has been impossible because of a failed septic system and that legal and engineering costs have eaten any proceeds the family hoped to gain from the sale. They now lack the money

(See page 19)

New septic system regs are 'nightmare'

that will allow alternative systems to be installed.

There are systems used elsewhere in the United States and in Europe for many years but are new in this region.

"To say that's 'experimental' doesn't make sense," Godzik said, adding that state officials are "overly cautious."

Godzik said this week that recent septic system and cesspool inspections are showing a 41 per cent failure rate under the stricter requirements.

But he isn't surprised by the number. With so many homes in Cohasset built in rocky areas, coupled with the high water table, many systems don't satisfy the law, he said.

Witnessing more percolation tests and trying to help homeowners find solutions to the problem of failed systems has taken up much of his time in recent weeks.

At some point, residents may have to consider other technologies, such as smaller sewer districts, with communal leaching fields or small treatment plants, for those areas of town that have no alternatives, he noted.

Ford does not believe a town-wide conventional sewer system would be approved in Cohasset. He points to the town's 1983 vote refusing a state project that would have created a sewer system to service 70 per cent of the town, with the state picking up 90 per cent of the cost.

At that time, the voters wanted to maintain the small town character of Cohasset, and feared that a sewer system would open the door to more development.

Ford also said that the inspections are generating much anger by homeowners who learn their systems have failed. Many inspectors are also septic system installers, he said. Some homeowners have questioned the motives of the inspectors.

"They're confusing the message with the messenger," he said, adding that the state may have to consider splitting the process, to keep installers from also being inspectors.

However, Godzik does not see a problem with the present policy. If an inspector finds that a system has failed, that does not necessarily mean that the inspector will be hired to install a new system.

"People are upset," Godzik said. "They assume everything is just fine. It's a real shock for them," especially if the homeowner has under-estimated the costs of a new system.

to make the mandated repairs, she said.

WIDESPREAD POLLUTION

After hearing considerable testimony, Dean Spencer, a DEP official spoke for some 45 minutes on the situation.

"I've heard a great many things that are very legitimate, sincere and appropriate concerns," he said, adding that many of the complaints are based on incorrect information.

He explained that local health boards have great discretion under the rules, listing a number of examples.

He also said that in some respects, the new rules are more flexible than those adopted in 1978.

Under those regulations, all cesspools, which have greater potential for pollution, were illegal. Now, cesspools which meet certain requirements can be kept.

"No system that fails this test was legal in 1978," Spencer said.

One third of systems fail statewide, he said, but added that, despite what many in the audience had claimed, DEP has approved five alternative treatment methods.

"I agree 100 percent with everyone who said a tight tank is not a good answer," Spencer said.

The official also explained that the regulations were instituted because of widespread water pollution.

According to Spencer, 40 percent of Massachusetts bodies of water, including ponds, lakes, streams and the ocean used for swimming, is polluted enough to ban swimming or fishing. Another 20 percent of water bodies are polluted periodically.

Residential failed septic systems are a leading pollution source and have a great potential disease, he said. "Some people have sewage flowing down the driveway. What are the fates of the pathogens, the viruses, which do very well in human waste?"

Only by keeping the sewage underground and out of the groundwater can the potential for spreading disease be avoided.

Shea also volunteered to talk with several speakers, stating that their dilemmas could be alleviated without great cost or difficulty.

A PUNCH IN THE NOSE

However, many in the audience said that Spencer, other officials and law makers from urban areas where all houses are on sewer lines, do not understand.

In response to his comment that health boards have leeway in implementing the rules, Rep. Murray wondered who is at fault for the confusion.

"Who am I going to punch in nose?" she asked Spencer. "You? Or my health agent?"

Marini said "This is causing real pain. This is not an academic exercise. This human waste that has been going into the ground for 375 years is now suddenly a problem?"

Sen. Hedlund said a group of senators have asked the administration to change the Title V rules.

Hynes urged residents to contact their officials and Weld's office, vowing to keep up the pressure to see the situation improved.

Fate of Greenbush...

Hedlund said the project could proceed even if with a negative ruling from the environmental secretary, the MBTA could proceed, but from a weaker position.

"Technically, the T could proceed," Hedlund said. "But it lessens will on the political side."

The Weymouth Republican, who represents Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury, maintained there are better alternatives.

"We can provide more attractive service at a lot less money," he said, suggesting improved commuter boats with shuttle bus service and the use of a special lane on Rte. 3 for vehicles with many occupants.

EDUCATION REFORM

The meeting, which was chaired by Cohasset selectman Jane Goedecke, covered a number of other regional and state issues.

There was agreement among the legislators that the education reform bill will receive some legislative fine tuning this year.

State Rep. Janet O'Brien, Hanover Democrat, said that she opposed the measure because of its potentially negative impact on her district, which includes Hanover and Norwell.

She said the bill contains "serious flaws" and has "unintended consequences," including exacerbating the conflict between the schools and municipal sides of local government over scarce resources.

Other legislators agreed, saying that the way the bill computes cost should be changed, with educational accounting placed in the hands of the department of revenue, instead of the education department.

In response to a question from Cohasset selectman Martha Gjesteby, the legislators doubted that a bill allowing towns to replace flagmen with police will make it out of committee.

They said that the attorney general will be asked to rule on the use of flagmen in Halifax.

Hanover planning board member Daniel Pallotta wanted to know about the status of a bill allowing communities to charge builders for the costs their developments create for communities.

O'Brien said she wanted to ensure the legislation would be legal before pushing for it. Hanover already charges a mitigation fee to new commercial development and the planning board wants to institute a fee for residential projects as well.

Train letter wording OK'ed

Selectmen approved wording this week for their cover letter which will be included with the comments on the Environmental Impact Report (EIR) on transportation improvements in the Greenbush corridor. The town paid consultants Camp, Dresser & McKee to help selectmen comment on the feasibility study. They approved those comments last week.

A majority of selectmen decided to include the May 13 town vote to support Greenbush and the numbers who said they would or would not commute on the train. Selectman Michael Sullivan was successful in adding a paragraph saying a majority of selectmen feel the EIR fails to explore fully and adequately transportation alternatives to the train.

Sullivan did agree with Goedecke however that the EIR is not a pro- or con- document but one that raises information and asks for a response so a determination can be made on the technical merits of the documents. Selectman Martha Gjesteby pointed out that the letter reflected the selectmen's opinions and citizens can submit their opinions on the EIR directly to the Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Coxe.

Social Service League sponsors mammography screening

If you are a woman, you are at risk for breast cancer. Many of the recent media reports on mammography have been confusing. The two major risk factors for breast cancer are being female and getting older. Although there is not much you can do to change either risk factor, there is good news.

MAMMOGRAPHY SCREENING: Saturday, June 10, the Cohasset Social Service League is sponsoring once again the Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. (MDI) mobile mammography service. Appointments are necessary and can be scheduled by calling (617) 383-0771. Insurance can often cover the cost of a mammogram, and MDI can bill your insurance company directly, or you may pay on the day of the exam and obtain a receipt for insurance reimbursement.

When used in conjunction with the following total breast health plan, mammography is the most reliable method we have now for early detection of breast cancer. There are proven methods for detecting breast cancer early, before it has spread, while it is still treatable. Here is vital information you should know to save a life — your own or a loved one's. The three-step program to breast health is simple:

- Do monthly breast self-examination;
- Have a clinical breast exam by your health care professional annually;
- Have a mammogram every year over the age of 50, or every one to two years ages 40-49.

Mobile Diagnostics, a fully ACR-accredited, FDA-certified, and Massachusetts-licensed mobile mammography service, has been serving women in Massachusetts for more than eight years. Mammography is their only business. Because cost and accessibility are cited as major factors discouraging women from having mammography, MDI provides low-cost mammography on a mobile unit, bringing this life-saving 30-minute examination to women at worksites, health centers and community locations.

The mammograms are performed by fully licensed female mammography technologists in a comfortable, private mobile coach. The films are read by board certified radiologists and results are provided to each female woman as well as the physician of her choice.

'Women's Well' presented

The South Shore Hospital, South Weymouth, will sponsor a three-part evening program on the qualities that make women unique, including sensitivity, wisdom and spirituality. Women who participate in the series will learn more about these qualities and how best to apply them in their own lives.

On Wednesday, May 31, Joan Stack Kovach, MS, RN, will present "A Woman's Creativity." She will explore the sources of women's creativity and what it takes to release it.

On Wednesday, June 7, Pam Marino, LICSW, BCD, will talk about "A Woman's Wisdom" and examine ways in which western civilization has diminished the value of women's wisdom and intuition and offer sources of wisdom in an individual's life.

The final meeting of the series will be held on Wednesday, June 14. Katherine Kallis, D. Min., will present "A Woman's Spirituality," answering questions about how spirituality is expressed and nurtured.

The "Women's Well" program will meet from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the dining conference room at SSH, 55 Fogg Rd. at Rt. 18, South Weymouth. Each session costs $20. To register or for further information call Nita Francis at (617) 340-8554.

Blood drive is June 7

The Red Cross will hold a Community Blood Drive on Wednesday, June 7 from 2 to 7 p.m. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main St., and babysitting assistance will be provided after 3 p.m. To make an appointment for donating at a specific time or for further information, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 383-1290.

Corinne Cahill, a Red Cross blood drive organizer and volunteer from Cohasset represented the Cohasset community on April 25 at a reception given by the New England Chapter of the American Red Cross. Cohasset received an award in "appreciation for its outstanding support of the American Red Cross Blood Services Donor Recruitment Program and consistently showing the largest donor turnout through 1994."

State championship shouldn't ruffle Cohasset sailors

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

If the other teams in Thursday and Friday's state sailing championships judge Cohasset High's entry solely on the team's 2-6 record, they could be in for a rude awakening once the races get underway.

Dave Nothnagle, Joe Menis, Chloe Chittick and Nicolle Peterson will represent Cohasset in the 25-team event, which will be held at MIT. All of them have vast sailing experience in both skippering the boats and in crewing. Last year, Nothnagle and Menis finished second overall, and Menis recently finished 16th out of 30 in the National Singlehanded Championships in Coronado, California, in his quest for the Cressey Trophy.

Menis qualified last fall and was the second New England skipper to finish. He has experience at the national level and in no way should be intimidated by the state competition.

Head coach Elizabeth Menis says the team should put on a good showing in the meet. "All of them skippered races as well as crewed," she said.

Menis pointed out that the state championships is an individual meet using fleet racing. She said both of the males on the squad are experienced at that particular type of racing.

"I think their chance of doing well is pretty good," Menis said. "The two guys usually do very well in fleet racing."

A strong showing from the four would end the high school season on a positive note for the nine-member team. Cohasset had a tough schedule, facing Brookline, B.C. High, Notre Dame, Wellesley, Milton Academy, Winsor Academy, Buckingham Barnes and Noble, Barnstable and Hyannis.

Save for the two meets against the Cape Cod teams, all the other races were held at Community Boating on the Charles River in Boston.

Menis said the weather wasn't a factor in any of the races, though the final meet last week against Milton went on under a steady rain. May was colder than April, but the team was able to work out all season without any lengthy delays.

Most of the team members will continue sailing this summer and she believes the graduation of two seniors will be offset by younger C.H.S., students joining the team.

Tennis tourney offers experience

As head coach Chum Steele describes it, the Cohasset boys tennis team "limped" into the Division 2 South Sectional tournament with its 6-6, .500 record. And Steele expects the Skippers will limp right out after Cohasset is dropped by a more powerful team.

"We're not that strong a team," Steele said. "We're going to be playing away so it should be tough."

The Skippers won their final match of the season, a 3-2 decision over Carver, to qualify for a berth in the tourney. Cohasset's top player, Chip Moore came out the winner in his match, as did the two doubles teams of Tom Grecco and Justin Golden, and Conner Mangan and Steve Sceery.

Although Steele doesn't expect to advance in the tourney, he says the fact Cohasset will be playing will not go for naught. In fact, Steele would like to see nothing better than his players going up against as tough a team as possible.

"I hope we play a strong team to see how we stand up," Steele said. "It'll be good experience for next year."

In the meantime, the boys squad has been offered a challenge by the girls squad. Steele isn't sure whether or not the two Cohasset squads will play each other before or after the opening round on Wednesday. But he did say he was looking forward to honoring the challenge.

Yet another experience.

Golfers' improvement gives hope for '96

Both Nevin Bunstein and Jamie Kondrat will be back next spring as members of the Cohasset High golf team. With their 3-7 record on the season with one remaining match, Thursday against Scituate, head coach Clark Chatterton expects the Skippers to be overmatched by the tough Sailors' squad.

"They're going to be state ranked," said Chatterton, anticipating a rough afternoon on the links for Cohasset.

The Skippers are coming off a 7-2 loss on Tuesday against Norwell. Joe Magner was the lone Cohasset winner and played some of his best golf of the season.

Chatterton said the team has improved steadily during the season and anticipates several of the players will continue with the sport on their own over the summer. That wasn't the case during the regular season when the squad wasn't able to practice as much as Chatterton would have liked.

"The problem we have is they don't have too much time to play on their home course," he said.

Cohasset Little League President Bob Moody is naturally a strong advocate of kids participating in organized baseball, no matter what the level, but he says it's also disheartening to see so few youngsters playing in pick-up games on their own without any adult supervision. He is a firm believer that kids can improve their skills and become better ballplayers during informal games.

"Now you don't have a game unless there are coaches, uniforms and umpires," Moody said. "You never see pick-up games anymore and I think that's sad.

Moody said the biggest thrill he got as a kid was being issued his official team hat of the Little League team he happened to be on at the time. "It was very important to get that hat when I was a kid," he said. "That's the comparison I can make between what it was like then and what it is like now."

There's no hiding it now. The sweaters are coming off and being replaced by shortsleeved shirts. Shorts are everywhere you look and those few extra pounds you could conceal with the baggy clothes in the winter are in plain view for everyone to see and you're cursing yourself for not getting in that minimum three days of exercise per week during the winter.

So how do you know if you packed on a few too many pounds? There are 10 sure-fire signs:

1) You place your order at the drive-up window at McDonald's and you're only charged half price because you're a "regular."

2) You have a tab at Taco Bell.

3) You take up three seats at the movies: Two for your body and one for the $20 worth of food you forked over at the concession stand.

4) People whisper to each other that it's a "blessing" that your "Extra Points" photo is only a head shot.

Skippers bow out of tourney

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset Skippers' furious sprint for a state tournament berth ended Saturday when the gutsy squad succumbed to the Carver Crusaders. Cohasset was forced to win four of its last four games, and could only pull out two wins, capping a bittersweet season.

The Skippers' last game was a loss to Northside. Despite solid mound performances by senior Nick Welz, eighth-grader Greg Taylor, and freshman Rob Moody, the Skippers were unable to pull out the victory.

Head coach Ron Ford's team showed heart by turning around what appeared to be a lost season. Ford said the "key to this team has been Greg Stevens. His pitching has been superb, and he has the highest average on the team."

The junior's record was 5-2 and his ERA was hovering around 2.00 at press time, and Ford beamed with pride when he discussed the pitcher's potential.

Kevin McKenna, Cohasset's sophomore first baseman, is another strong hitter. McKenna, along with Grant Emde and Rob Buckley, helps to make a strong corps of tenth graders.

Another standout has been Nick Welz. Welz, a notorious long-ball hitter, was the team's captain, and clean-up hitter. With a flair for the dramatic, Welz homered in his final at-bat as a Skipper, his 77th baseball game at Cohasset.

Senior Brendan Kinchla, Ford's shortstop and leadoff hitter, was a sparkplug this year. Flashing a brilliant glove and a quick bat, "Bubba" was one of the team's speedsters.

Yet all this talent couldn't earn Cohasset a tourney slot. The squad played second-place Hanover to a close game, when Welz threw well for the Skippers to keep it a low-scoring game. Hanover triumphed, 5-3, even though the Boys in Blue grabbed two runs in the seventh.

Cohasset's final win of the season came when Stevens retired 18 of the last 19 batters he faced against Hull. Rob van der Pool scored on a Kinchla single and made a nice catch in the outfield, McKenna's hit drove home Kinchla, and Welz squeezed home Henry with a bunt. Eric Henry's tenth-inning three-run double won the game for the Skippers.

5) You can't swim at the beach without worrying about getting a harpoon jabbed into your belly.

6) The only greens you eat are the pieces of lettuce wedged between a double burger.

7) You get the phone number of a girl at a club and the first three numbers are 555.

8) People ask you how Burt Reynolds is doing and if there'll be another "Cannonball Run" movie.

9) You buy three bottles of suntan lotion at a time.

10) People tell you they thought you were great in "Planes, Trains and Automobiles."

Me and my big mouth.

After telling Norwell High girls' tennis coach Sharon Flaherty how good I was at the sport, I was challenged play against some of her players this season.

After much hemming and hawing about showing up, I finally got a chance to play Monday afternoon.

Two very talented players, Jen Butler and Kim Waldron, volunteered to hit with me for a few minutes after their match with Notre Dame Academy.

Butler, a senior, has been the top singles player at NHS for three straight years.

Waldron, also a senior, is a Boston Globe All-Scholastic soccer player and one terrific tennis player as well.

Basically, I was in way over my head.

Anyway, I started hitting with Waldron after her match ended at around 4:30 p.m.

She started out by effortlessly roping a deep forehand towards me.

I set myself and fired a forehand return of my own. Somehow it made it over the net and I thought I would be able to play without embarrassing myself too much.

That feeling lasted until my second shot hit the top of my racquet and floated harmlessly into the air. Forty bounces later it hit the net.

Yuck.

I started rallying again but my timing was way off. Every shot Waldron hit was a screamer. I was doing all I could just to return them.

"Have pity, I'm an old man with sore knees," I told Waldron, hoping a sympathy ploy might work. She only laughed.

We hit for a few more minutes and I could tell Waldron was easing up on me.

Butler joined Waldron on her side of the court and helped the slaughter.

As I chased their skilled groundstrokes, the sweat started rolling down my forehead.

After retrieving yet another shot that I hit into the net, I noticed Waldron and Butler weren't sweating. In fact they were having a great time making Mr. Sports Guy look like Jerry Lewis.

After another five minutes of playing, my heart was beating like a rabbit and I suddenly remembered why I haven't played tennis in a long time-too much running.

We hit for another five minutes before I stopped the match like a boxing referee. If I played any longer, I might have pulled a Reggie Lewis.

All together, I hit maybe four or five decent shots out of 50. Pathetic.

Waldron and Butler said they had fun and politely told me I wasn't that bad a player.

Coach Flaherty also politely told me I could be an even better player if I practiced more and got into better shape.

Everyone in Norwell is polite, I guess.

After the match ended I went to my truck to change out of my sweaty T-shirt. I also tossed my $5 tennis racquet into the front seat.

I wanted to toss it into the rubbish but that would be wasteful.

With the new T-shirt, I went back to covering the Norwell-Scituate girls' track meet.

At around 6:30 p.m., the track meet was over and I was walking back to my truck with the rest of the track fans.

I saw Waldron nearby and went to my truck and retrieved my racquet.

"Kim you were very nice to play and I was wondering if you would autograph my racquet," I asked.

She arched her eyebrows and shook her head with a laugh.

"C'mon, I need an ending to my story," I told her.

She took the pen.

"To Dave, nice try. Kim Waldron."

I limped back to my truck.

Leo Fiori honored for LL support

Leo Fiori of L.J. Fiori and Sons Inc. Exxon was recently honored at the annual Little League Opening Day ceremonies for his continued support of Little League. Fiori, who has been a longtime sponsor of the Major League Red Sox, was presented with a plaque by Little League president Bob Moody in recognition of his support. During the presentation, Fiori spoke about the enjoyment he has received over the years supporting Little League and watching his children and now his grandchildren playing in the program.

This was the first such plaque presented in recognition of sponsor support. The award will be presented annually and will become known as the "Leo J. Fiori Award." Mr. Fiori and other supporters like him have helped make Little League successful. On behalf of Cohasset Little League, the board of directors again would like to say thank you. We appreciate the support businessmen like Fiori give.

Summer baseball camp set for June

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a South Shore Baseball Club Summer Baseball Camp, Monday, June 26 through Friday, June 30.

The half-day program for ages five through 7 will be held from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. The cost is $70.

A full-day program will also be offered for ages seven through 12, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for $120. Registrations are being accepted at the Recreation Office. Call 383-6791 for further information.

Baseball camp

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages five through 12 at the recreation office, first floor of Cohasset Town Hall.

The South Shore Baseball Club has been contracted again this year to provide baseball camp, which will begin the week of Monday, June 26, Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full day, 8;30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. camp for ages seven and over; and a half-day, 8;30 to 11:30 a.m, camp is available for 5-and 6-year-olds.

The week-long camp cost $120 per child for the full-day program, and $70 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Friday, June 30.

LACROSSE SKILL DEVELOPMENT CLINICS FOR GRADES 4, 5, AND 6

The Cohasset recreation department will accept telephone registrations at their office, at 383-6791, for an evening lacrosse skill development program, designed for youngsters who will enter grades 4, 5 and 6 in Sept., 1995.

Lacrosse clinics are designed to teach fundamental skills and concepts of lacrosse and will meet Tuesday and Thursday evenings, 6:30 to 8 p.m., at Osgood School Field, beginning Tuesday, June 13, through Thursday, June 29.

This specialized developmental program will be instructed by local college and high school lacrosse players and the fee will be $26 per person for the six sessions. Participants will need a helmet and lacrosse stick to enroll. Other equipment will be unnecessary as no contact scrimmages will be held.

APPLICATIONS FOR SOUTH SHORE SOCCER CAMP — 1995

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8-18. This is South Shore Soccer Camp's fifth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering for South Shore Soccer Camp, it is suggested that you write to the Cohasset Recreation Department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791 in the near future, to be assured enrollment.

South Shore Soccer Camp will be offered to both girls and boys during the weeks of Monday to Friday, July 31 to Aug. 4, and Aug. 7 to Aug. 11. Should a camper wish to attend both camp weeks, this will now be possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camp weeks must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Mondays to Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The cost for camp is $165 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available. South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players from the New England area.

VIP SOCCER CAMP REGISTRATIONS

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp, for children ages 4 to 7 years.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, ages 4 to 7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for 4- and 5-year-olds and meets 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday to Friday, July 17 to 21. The cost is $40 for the week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour per day program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday to Friday, July 17 to 21, for 6- and 7-year-olds. The cost is $70 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the front field of Cohasset High School.

BASEBALL CAMP

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages 5 to 12 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset town hall.

Gospel music concert set

The First Parish of Cohasset, Main St., will present the award-winning Concord Chorale in a Gospel Concert on Saturday, June 17, at 8 p.m. as part of Cohasset's Arts Festival/Harborfest celebration.

Tickets are $7 ($5 with a Harborfest button) and will be available starting June 5 through the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church office, which is open Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Call 383-1100 for tickets or further information.

Museum expands hours

The Cohasset Historical Society has expanded the hours the Maritime Museum will be open to visitors. Interested citizens have volunteered their time to staff the museum on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon from June 3 through the end of August. Until this year the museum was only open during afternoons.

The museum, located on Elm St. in Cohasset Village, exhibits a Minot Ledge Lighthouse collection and many exhibits documenting Cohasset's distinguished maritime history.

Volunteers include: Bill Malone, Charlie Fink, Deborah Cook, Ray Buckley, Ira Stoughton, Doug Peck, Sarah Pease, Amy Golden, Ruth Nedrow, Sue Grant, Vivian Bobo, Nancy Snowdale, Bob Davenport, Hamilton Tewksbury, John Hartshorne, Osborne Ingram, Gordon Flint, Rita Kirk, Lucia Woods, Dan Cotton, Pat Baird, Jim Mullen, Martha Equi and Toni Finegan.

Maritime Museum hours are: Monday, May 29, Memorial Day, during the parade period and Saturdays, June 3 through Aug. 26 from 9 a.m. to noon. The museum is also open Tuesday through Sunday, June 6 through Sept. 30, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The Cohasset Historical Society also opens the adjacent Captain John Wilson House, built in 1810, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. with the assistance of trained guides. David Wadsworth is the society's curator. This summer the Wilson House will be displayed as a 1910 teahouse, which it was at that time. For further information or to arrange a special tour, call 383-1434.

Memorial Day in Hull

The town of Hull will celebrate Memorial Day with two days of remembrance, a traditional parade, food, amusements, entertainment and fireworks.

The "Taste of Hull" celebration, to be held Sunday and Monday, May 28 and 29, will bring the town's 350th anniversary year to a close.

There will be fireworks on Nantasket Beach Sunday, May 28, at 9 p.m. Hull's Memorial Day parade will step out on Monday, May 29, at 9:30 a.m. from Hull High School.

Entertainment during the two-day celebration will include music by the Air Force Band of Liberty Symphonic Winds, the Sweet Adelines Women's Barbershop Chorus and the Bog Hollow Bluegrass Band.

Events begin at noon on Sunday and take place at the Hull Redevelopment Authority property, the MDC Bernie King Pavilion, historic Hull Village, the neighborhoods of Hull and on Nantasket Beach.

Portions of the AIDS quilt will be on display in the MDC garages directly across from the old bathhouse on Nantasket Beach throughout the weekend from noon to 6 p.m. daily, including Saturday. Individual panels represent the lives of South Shore residents who have died of AIDS.

Bus and boat transportation to Hull will be available from the Hingham Depot both days. On Sunday, Bay State Cruise Boat Service will be available. Fireworks cruises are being offered for adults over 21 for $15. For further information on all boat services call 723-7800.

For additional information about the "Taste of Hull" schedule of events, call (617) 925-3015.

Benefit dance is May 27

The Cohasset Little League will hold a dinner buffet and dance on Saturday, May 27, from 7 p.m. to midnight at the South Shore Community Center.

There will be a silent auction and door prizes. Tickets, which are $25 per person, may be reserved by calling 383-9476 or 383-9901.

Harborfest parade planned

The theme of this year's Harborfest Parade will be "World War II Remembered," in keeping with Governor Weld's request that each community in the Commonwealth celebrate the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II.

The parade is scheduled for Sunday, June 18, beginning at 2:30 p.m. Any person or group is eligible to participate, and presentations need not follow the theme. However, only those that do honor the theme will be eligible for prizes, co-sponsored by the George H. Mealey American Legion Post and the Cohasset VFW Post #9146. The first prize will be $1,000, with a second prize of $500 and a third of $200.

For further information call Keith Knowles at 383-1331.

Band members needed

Rev. Ed Atkinson of the First Parish Church in Cohasset is organizing a marching band for this year's Harborfest parade. He is seeking persons of any age who may have played in a high school or college marching band and who would enjoy bringing their old instrument down for the attic to play one or two old familiar tunes.

Minimal musical talent is needed, and with a few rehearsals the band should be ready to march. Khaki pants and white shirts will be the uniform. Anyone interested in participating may call Rev. Atkinson at his office, 383-1100 or at home (383-1105).

Alzheimer's group to meet

"Day Care — Respite Care Options" will be the topic of the next meeting of the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore on Wednesday, May 24, at 7:30 p.m. at Thaxter Park Community Hall, 30 Thaxter St., Hingham.

Adult day health programs will be discussed and representatives from several organizations offering day health care will be on hand to answer questions.

ADSGSS meetings are free and open to the public. For further information on local support meetings and services call 749-9417.

Hingham Cemetery tour

There will be a "Stroll through History Past and Present" on Sunday, May 28, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Hingham Cemetery and Chapel, 12 South St. (Raindate is Monday, May 29.)

The afternoon is planned to give participants an opportunity to review the cemetery's genealogical records, locate family graves and markers, purchase plants for Memorial Day remembrances and tour the grounds and important monuments with noted Hinghamite Phil Swanson and nationally acclaimed landscape architect A.E. Bye (2 to 3 p.m.)

A short talk about the headstones and their carvers and a tour of the cemetery's colonial headstones will be featured. By request, lots currently available for purchase will be marked.

The event is free and open to the public. For further information or raindate notification call 749-1048.

Leavitt reunion June 17

The National Association of Leavitt Families will hold its annual reunion Saturday, June 17, in Exeter, N.H. The meeting, open to all descendants of John and Thomas Leavitt, will be held at the Green Gate, Court Exeter.

Registration and a coffee hour will begin at 8:30 a.m. followed by a short business meeting, luncheon and entertainment.

Reservations should be made by June 10 with Jonathan Leavitt, 68 Watson Rd., Exeter 03833 or by calling (603) 772-9568. The cost is $16 for adults and $10 per child.

The association was founded in 1934 to bring together the descendants of the immigrants John Leavitt (1608-1691) of Hingham and Thomas Leavitt (1616-1696) of Hampton, N.H.

Coffee with the authors

Buttonwood Books & Toys will present its spring "Coffee with the Authors" on Tuesday, June 13, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Chart House restaurant in Cohasset. Landscape design consultant Julie Moir Messervy, author Douglas Whynott and mystery writer Peter Abrahams will be guests at the coffee.

In "The Inward Garden" Messervy inspires readers to look within themselves to create an original garden that is both beautiful and personally meaningful.

Whynott's "Giant Bluefin" highlights the thrill of the fisherman's hunt, the pressures of competition and the conservation movement.

In "The Fan," Abrahams creates a compelling mystery as a baseball fan's idolatry of a newly acquired hitter becomes an obsession.

For further information or reservations, call Buttonwood Books at 383-2665. The cost is $8 per person and reservations should be made by June 7.

Coastline meeting May 23

The Coastline and South Shore Councils for Children will hold a meeting on Tuesday, May 23, from 7 to 9 p.m. at the home of Marty Amdur, 5 Cape Cod Lane, Hingham. A Pot Luck Supper will be followed by a business meeting to review the year's activities. For directions or further information call Marty at 749-0691.

The Councils are grassroots groups of volunteers living on the South Shore who are interested in improving services for children and adolescents.

Cruise on Boston Harbor

The Harbor Island League will host its second annual June Cruise on Sunday, June 18, from 12 to 5 p.m., departing from Hewitt's Cove, Rt. 3A, Hingham.

The boat will cruise as far north as Salem Harbor and return to Hingham after passing Boston Light, Graves Lighthouse, Marblehead Neck Light, Boston Harbor Islands, Baker Island Light, Long Island Light and Moon Island. Historical narration will be provided by Bill Fitzpatrick of "Around the Harbor."

Advance ticket prices are $23 for adults ($18 for members) and $10 for children under 12. Passengers may bring their own lunch or purchase one onboard.

Proceeds will benefit the Peddock's Island Chapel and other island activities. For further information call (617) 925-4794. To order tickets send a check, along with name, address, phone number and number of adult, member or children's tickets, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Harbor Islands League, Inc., P.O. Box 472, Hingham 02043. Checks or money orders should be made payable to the Harbor Islands League, Inc.

SECOND MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Second Mortgage given by James Hegarty, a/k/a James K. Hegarty, Trustee of Tessahoc Realty Trust under declaration of trust dated December 30, 1991 and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 9185, Page 25 to Peter Grahame Wade (the "Mortgagee") dated July, 1993, and recorded with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 10017, Page 115, of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing, the same will be sold at Public Auction at 2:00 P.M., June 20, 1995, on the mortgaged premises described below, being known as 103 South Main Street, Cohasset, Massachusetts and all singular premises described in said mortgage,

To wit: The land in Cohasset, being the premises shown as Lot B on a plan entitled "Plan of Land, Cohasset, Mass.", dated August 21, 1943, drawn by Joseph Selwyn, C.E. recorded in Norfolk Registry of Deeds at Book 2470, Page 426, said lot being bounded and described as follows:

NORTHEASTERLY by South Main Street, 50.33 feet;

EASTERLY by a curve forming the intersection of South Main Street and Spring Street, 20.15 feet;

SOUTHEASTERLY by Spring Street, 65.76 feet;

SOUTHERLY by land marked "Benjamin F. and Christine M. Curley" and as indicated on said plan 112.36 feet;

WESTERLY by said land marked "Benjamin F. and Christine M. Curley" and in part by land marked "Katherine B. Noonan" as indicated on said plan, 51.16 feet, and

NORTHWESTERLY by Lot A as indicated on said plan, 141.56 feet.

Containing 12,299 square feet of land according to said plan. Together with a right of way to pass and repass to and from South Main Street which right of way is more particularly described in Certificate of Title No. 54545 registered with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds at Book 273, Page 145. The property is currently owned by Richard A. Bunstein by deed dated March 29, 1995 and recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Book 10854, Page 308.

The Mortgagee reserves the right to postpone the sale to a later date by public proclamation at the time and the date appointed for the sale and to further postpone the sale to later date at any adjourned sale date by public proclamation at the time and the date appointed for the adjourned sale date.

Said premises will be sold subject to and with the benefit of all restrictions, easements, improvements, variances, special permits, outstanding tax titles, mortgages, UCC financing statements, liens, rights of tenants and parties in possession, unpaid taxes, unpaid water and sewer bills, municipal liens and other public taxes, assessments or liens, having priority over the mortgage described herein, if any, including, without limitation, a tax taking by the Town of Cohasset recorded in Book 8889, Page 313; Land Court Tax Lien Case No. 101869T.L.; and Notice of Lis Pendens recorded in Book 10716, Page 124. This is a Second Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate sold subject to the lien of a first mortgage currently held by Pauline V. Emilson, by assignment dated May 6, 1992 and recorded in Book 9343, Page 309.

In the event that the successful bidder at the foreclosure sale shall default in purchasing the within described property according to the terms of this notice of sale and/or the terms of the memorandum of sale executed at the time of the foreclosure, the Mortgagee reserves the right to sell the property by Foreclosure Deed to the second highest bidder provided that the second highest bidder shall deposit with the Mortgagee's attorneys, Palmer & Dodge, the amount of the required deposit set forth herein within three (3) business days after written notice of default of the previous highest bidder and title shall be conveyed to said second highest bidder within twenty (20) days of said written notice.

Terms of sale: TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS ($10,000.00) will be required to be paid in cash or by certified check at the time and place of sale as earnest money. The balance is to be paid in cash or by certified check within twenty (20) days of the date of the sale and shall be deposited in escrow with the firm of Palmer & Dodge at One Beacon Street, Boston, MA, pending recording of the Foreclosure Deed and related documents.

Other terms, if any, to be announced at the sale.

Cohasset's Memorial Day observances are on Monday

Past Commander of the American Legion of Massachusetts Dorothy Dickson will be the keynote speaker for Cohasset Memorial Day observances Monday (May 29).

The annual Memorial Day parade steps off from the South Shore Music Circus parking lot at 10:30 a.m. and will proceed down Sohier Street to North Main Street, to Central Cemetery, then to Cohasset Common and then to Veterans' Memorial Park in the harbor.

Cohasset's Memorial Day parade and exercises are sponsored by the George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118 and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #9163.

All veterans are invited to participate and should report to the Legion Hall, 98 Summer Street, at 8 a.m. At 8:15 a.m., the contingent will march to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library to board buses to visit cemeteries for veterans' grave-side services.

The Memorial Day schedule is as follows: report at Post headquarters by 8:15 a.m.; North Cohasset Cemetery, 8:45 a.m.; North Cohasset Honor Roll, 9 a.m.; Woodside Cemetery, 9:30 a.m.; Beechwood Cemetery, 9:45 a.m.; Music Circus parking lot assembly, 10:30 a.m.; Central Cemetery, 11 a.m.; Cohasset Common, 11:30 a.m.; Veterans' Memorial Park, noon.

The line of march for the parade is: band, Legion and other veterans, band, Girl Scouts, Brownies, Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts.

Republican brunch slated

A brunch honoring Plymouth County Sheriff Peter Forman will be held on Sunday, June 4, from noon to 2 p.m. at the South Shore Country Club.

Forman became House Republican floor leader at age 32, the youngest leader of the party during this century.

Reservations may be made by calling Polly Logan (383-0031), Julie Guild (383-6443), Carl Harris (749-7115), Deborah Tortorella (585-5733), Chris Thayer (837-7167), Rita Strong (934-0880), Ann Hilbert (337-3743), Audrey MacDonald (934-2920), Otis Carney (834-9867), Ethel Wheatley (545-7997) or H. Richard Coughlin (335-0717).

The best bank in Cohasset
is still in Cohasset.

As Cohasset's community bank, we're quite different from other banks in town.

- We have no stockholders...so our customers get all of our attention.
- We have no offices outside of town...So Cohasset enjoys the bulk of our loans.
- We have no lengthy review procedure...So your questions are quickly answered.
- We have no big or fancy offices...So you pay less when you bank with us.

More personal service. Less costly services.

Class of '95 to graduate on Sunday

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

This Sunday, under the canopy of the South Shore Music Circus, 65 members of the Cohasset High School of 1995 will receive their diplomas.

The commencement ceremonies will begin at 1:30 p.m., rain or shine.

Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher will oversee her last graduation as principal in Cohasset, which she will leave to take a new position in Hanover, New Hampshire.

Gallagher describes this year's graduating class as a "very well-rounded group" and a "cohesive class" that will be remembered for their kindness and respect for each other, as well as the entire school population.

At 65 members, this the third time in five years that Cohasset High's graduating class has numbered fewer than 70, she said.

Vacation policy protested by students

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Despite loud protests from students Tuesday night, the school committee refused to reconsider next year's controversial new schedule, which results in the loss of one week's school vacation.

In November the committee unanimously voted to eliminate one week of school vacation by replacing the February and April vacations with a one week break in March. The number of school days will remain the same at 180.

Some 50 students and a scattering of parents and school staffers attended the school committee meeting this week in the high school auditorium, during which all five school committee members and superintendent Stephen Hart said that the loss of a vacation made educational sense.

School committee chairman Ralph Kidder said that

Unkown and missing soldiers honored in solemn ceremony

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

On a Memorial Day that occurred 50 years after the end of World War II, 40 years after the Korean War, and 20 after Vietnam — those who participated or watched Cohasset's observances Monday were reminded of those soldiers who died unknown or who are missing in action.

Cohasset's Memorial Day observances are on Monday

Past Commander of the American Legion of Massachusetts Dorothy Dickson will be the keynote speaker for Cohasset Memorial Day observances Monday (May 29).

The annual Memorial Day parade steps off from the South Shore Music Circus parking lot at 10:30 a.m. and will proceed down Sohier Street to North Main Street, to Central Cemetery, then to Cohasset Common and then to Veterans' Memorial Park in the harbor.

Cohasset's Memorial Day parade and exercises are sponsored by the George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118 and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #9163.

All veterans are invited to participate and should report to the Legion Hall, 98 Summer Street, at 8 a.m. At 8:15 a.m., the contingent will march to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library to board buses to visit cemeteries for veterans' grave-side services.

The Memorial Day schedule is as follows: report at Post headquarters by 8:15 a.m.; North Cohasset Cemetery, 8:45 a.m.; North Cohasset Honor Roll, 9 a.m.; Woodside Cemetery, 9:30 a.m.; Beechwood Cemetery, 9:45 a.m.; Music Circus parking lot assembly, 10:30 a.m.; Central Cemetery, 11 a.m.; Cohasset Common, 11:30 a.m.; Veterans' Memorial Park, noon.

The line of march for the parade is: band, Legion and other veterans, band, Girl Scouts, Brownies, Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts.

Republican brunch slated

A brunch honoring Plymouth County Sheriff Peter Forman will be held on Sunday, June 4, from noon to 2 p.m. at the South Shore Country Club.

Forman became House Republican floor leader at age 32, the youngest leader of the party during this century.

Reservations may be made by calling Polly Logan (383-0031), Julie Guild (383-6443), Carl Harris (749-7115), Deborah Tortorella (585-5733), Chris Thayer (837-7167), Rita Strong (934-0880), Ann Hilbert (337-3743), Audrey MacDonald (934-2920), Otis Carney (834-9867), Ethel Wheatley (545-7997) or H. Class of '95 to graduate on Sunday

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

This Sunday, under the canopy of the South Shore Music Circus, 65 members of the Cohasset High School of 1995 will receive their diplomas.

The commencement ceremonies will begin at 1:30 p.m., rain or shine.

Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher will oversee her last graduation as principal in Cohasset, which she will leave to take a new position in Hanover, New Hampshire.

Gallagher describes this year's graduating class as a "very well-rounded group" and a "cohesive class" that will be remembered for their kindness and respect for each other, as well as the entire school population.

At 65 members, this the third time in five years that Cohasset High's graduating class has numbered fewer than 70, she said.

Vacation policy protested by students

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Despite loud protests from students Tuesday night, the school committee refused to reconsider next year's controversial new schedule, which results in the loss of one week's school vacation.

In November the committee unanimously voted to eliminate one week of school vacation by replacing the February and April vacations with a one week break in March. The number of school days will remain the same at 180.

Some 50 students and a scattering of parents and school staffers attended the school committee meeting this week in the high school auditorium, during which all five school committee members and superintendent Stephen Hart said that the loss of a vacation made educational sense.

School committee chairman Ralph Kidder said that

Rabies clinic is offered

The Cohasset Board of Health will sponsor its first Rabies Clinic for the year with the assistance of the South River Veterinary Services on Saturday, June 10, in the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium for cats only from 10:30 a.m. to noon and for dogs only from 12:05 to 1:30 p.m. Dogs must be leashed and cats caged. No strays will be accepted.

State regulations require that all cats as well as dogs be immunized for rabies. With the current rabies epidemic, immunizations are an important step in protecting animals and humans. The immunization costs are: rabies, $8; distemper, $10; feline leukemia, $10; Lyme disease, $12.

Other tests available are heartworm, $15 and feline leukemia test, $20.

Pet owners from surrounding communities are invited to participate. Checks made payable to SRVS or cash will be accepted.

Inch-worm pests return

Those pesty little inch-worms, officially know as the "spring canker worms," hanging from trees and posts, and sticking to clothes, windshields, and the family pet—have reappeared in Cohasset.

The canker worms drop from trees on silk strands which they produce themselves, and can be blown from tree to tree, as well as sticking to passing humans.

This is the second year that Cohasset and surrounding towns have seen an infestation of the worms which have reduced the foliage to chewed, lacy stems.

One year of defoliation will not permanently weaken the trees, but the likelihood of lasting damage increases with back-to-back canker worm attacks, officials say.

Gary Couch, entomologist with the University of Massachusetts Extension Service office in Waltham said that if the dry weather continues through the summer, it will be more difficult for the trees to recover their foliage.

Couch is monitoring the canker worm outbreak in Massachusetts and explained that it is the dry spring weather that has contributed to the canker worm population explosion this year. The worms are vulnerable to various bacteria that grow under damp conditions, but they were not subjected those conditions in the last few months.

He also said that the mild winter helped the survival of large numbers of eggs laid last year.

Couch said treating the canker worms with "BT" would have been effective two or three weeks ago. The young canker worms are susceptible to BT (bacillus thuringiensis), a bacteria which is lethal to young canker worms. "They're too large for it now," Couch said.

The only alternative at this point is for isolated applications of insecticide in areas of heavy infestation. In mid-June, the canker worms will burrow into the soil to pupate and emerge as moths in the fall.

Couch said there is nothing to be done about the moths, except to prepare for more canker worms next spring.

He said canker worm infestations are cyclical. For periods of 10 to 20 years, there will be no problems with them. The population will gradually build up for a couple years, which is the present point in the cycle.

Tree & Park Supt. Peter Laugelle said the tree department does not spray and he advises residents to hire a certified company to spray.

"The trees will leaf out again after the defoliation has occurred," Laugelle said.

Discoloration may occur

The Cohasset Water Department has announced that the inside of the water storage tank is being cleaned, which may result in temporary discoloration of the water. The condition is only temporary, and the water is safe to drink.

Permit deadline passed

1995 Cohasset RTF permits should have been attached to vehicles no later than Wednesday, May 31. Recycling Transfer Facility Permits are sold on weekends at the Ceder St. Recycling Transfer Facility and weekdays at the offices of the Board of Health. No cash will be accepted. Checks must be written to the Town of Cohasset. The fee is $65.

Call the health board at 383-9900 for more information.

speaker-of-the-day at the ceremonies at the Veterans' Memorial in Cohasset Harbor.

"Let us not forget the more than 16 million Americans who served in the armed forces and the more than 400,000 who lost their lives," she said.

"...Our remembrance of love and compassion must continue as we honor our dead and disabled. We must, by honoring our flag, let the world know that we are truly a grateful nation."

In a solemn tribute to those who are still missing, Raymond Buckley, Commander of the Southeastern Massachusetts Chapter of American Ex-Pows, slowly read the names of 52 Americans who are Missing in Action. After each name, past Commander Robert Noble, who stood off the the side, saluted and said: "Missing in action, sir."

Last year, Cohasset dedicated a square at the corner of Depot Court and South Main Street honoring all POWs and MIAs.

In her U.S. Marine Corps uniform, state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said not even an illness could keep her from the day's observances.

"I had to turn out here today," she said. "From the day I was born here in Cohasset, I was taught this was the most special day in the year.

"A day to remember all our comrades, all the men and women who gave there lives so we could be here today. I'm so grateful to have you all here," she said.

Assisted by U.S. Marine Corps veteran Louis C. Bailey, Gold Star mother June Simeone laid a wreath at the Veterans' Memorial. Her son, PFC Craig Simeone (U.S. Army), was killed in action in Vietnam.

Earlier Monday morning Cohasset veterans visited all the town cemeteries. After a contingent of veterans visited cemeteries for grave-side services, the parade assembled at the Music Circus parking lot at 10:30 a.m. and marched to Central Cemetery, Cohasset Common, and Veterans' Memorial Park at the Harbor.

The observances were sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 9146 and the George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118.

New sports field to take shape in the months ahead

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

There was a huge pile of dirt and no shovels — but that didn't stop a symbolic ground-breaking at the new high school athletic field and track from taking place.

About a dozen local officials and citizens listened intently as building committee members Gary Vanderweil and Wayne Sawchuk took them several months into the future when a field of dreams will be turned into reality.

The current $775,000 track & field project, initially discussed in October 1993, quickly germinated and through countless hours of planning grew enough to win popular support successfully passing the 1994 annual town meeting and subsequent debt exclusion override vote a year ago.

Over the past 12 months the design of the new field has been finalized and the upgrading of Milliken Field, repairs of its existing tennis courts and addition of two new ones, is underway.

And now the time has come to rip up the old tennis courts and blacktop beside the high school and to start construction on the track and new athletic field complex.

The new field will be built where the tennis courts and parking area currently are beside the high school. This location will make bathroom facilities in the high school for sports events easily accessible. Encircled by an all-weather track, the new lighted game field will be used for soccer, field hockey, lacrosse and football as well as for track meets.

The project has been a long time coming.

Milliken Field was built in 1938 on land donated to the town by Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, Vanderweil explained.

"That field was built and is essentially the same today 57 years later," he said.

Lillard Field (directly behind the high school) was added in 1958 and Vanderweil fondly remembers seeing that take shape from his high school calculus class.

In 1987/88 a field study committee failed to win town meeting approval for a new field.

So it was back to the drawing board in 1993 and this time the whole town got behind the project.

Vanderweil thanked all the committee volunteers, citizens, and members of the school, recreation and other town departments who helped shepherd the plans through.

Sawchuk explained that Milliken Field which will include a new baseball field and irrigation system will be completed July 10. He said the construction phase of the track & field to start this week will follow "an aggressive schedule."

Hingham-based R.A.D. Corporation will construct the athletic field complex and The BSC Group of Norwell is handling the design phase.

Still in the Army uniform he wore for the town's Memorial Day observances, Selectmen Chairman Merle S. Brown thanked the volunteers for their hard work.

"It's a great moment for the town to see this coming about," Brown said. "Everyone will be very happy when it's done."

And as for Vanderweil — it's a way to help the town he loves.

"I've gotten a lot out of this town. From 1958 in calculus class until the present — it's time to give it all back," he said.

A nice surprise at the event was the announcement that Cohasset benefactress Jane W. Cook has donated $60,000 which will go toward lights for the field.

Lights were included in the plans approved at town meeting but had to be removed from the tight budget.

"This donation allows us to put the lights back in and still have enough money in the construction contingency fund," Vanderweil said.

He also thanked Pilgrim Cooperative Bank which provided funding for the new scoreboard.

Water restrictions in effect

Effective May 1, all Cohasset water department customers are asked to follow an odd/even watering schedule. Those living in even-numbered houses are able to water on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Residents in odd-numbered houses may water on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday. There will be no watering on Mondays.

Summer water restrictions still remain in effect because all distribution improvements have not been completed, water department officials said.

Congratulations grads!

Vacation policy is protested by students...

last year's calendar contained so many breaks that although school was in session for 36 weeks, only 13 of those weeks contained five school days.

Nancy Sandeli, school committee vice chairman, explained that between state, federal and religious holidays, shorter exam days, late days and half sessions which enabled teachers to attend development seminars, "there were few weeks of uninterrupted learning."

There were no long continuous periods for learning after the December break, she stated.

The committee juggled some teacher professional days to create more continuous education time, in addition to eliminating the week's break.

Keeping students in class for longer durations of time creates what committee member James Kirk called "uninterrupted learning time, focused learning time."

Kidder also said each vacation is disruptive, with many absences on the last couple of days before and the first one or two days after each break.

"There are a lot of people absent and very little teaching goes on," he said.

But many of the some 50 students in the audience said they were angry that the committee would not reconsider its decision.

"This has been a mockery," Ryan Sawchuk, student council representative to the committee, said after the meeting.

Nicole Santoro, a sophomore and new student council president vowed to continue the fight, although she conceded students were not sure what their next step would be.

"This is just the beginning," she said after the meeting. "I put my heart and sole into this project."

She presented the committee with petitions signed by over 200 people, including, she said, the entire Cohasset High School student body.

Santoro and other students told urged the committee to reconsider its decision for two main reasons. They claimed a March vacation would "isolate" students by having them on break when most other students are in class; and they charged that the policy was made without adequate public discussion. They also said that several school systems across the state tried the single winter vacation break and found it didn't work and so they went back to the old way.

Sawchuk and several other speakers claimed the students would miss out on educational opportunities, such as participating in the Globe Drama Festival and in sports tournaments held during the traditional school breaks in February and April.

"We're doing a disservice to students who will miss out," Sawchuk stated.

He also suggested students would not be able to participate on school-sponsored trips to Belize and France, which are scheduled to coincide with the traditional vacations.

Although they did not directly say so, the committee members implied that students will still be able to participate in these events.

They easily refuted the charge that the change was made without adequate study or insufficient public discussion.

Sandell explained that the issue had been brought up periodically for the past several years.

A subcommittee contacted every school district in the Commonwealth to determine how other communities were handling the issue, which was also discussed at several school committee meetings.

The May 5, 1994 edition of the Mariner carried a long story about the proposed change. The school committee vote to change the vacation appeared on the front page of the Nov. 10, 1994 issue.

In addition, parents were asked to respond to the change in questionnaires sent home with school lunch menus and was asked through the Mariner.

The PTO reported parents favor the new policy by a two to one margin.

According to the Cohasset Teacher's Association, 67 percent of teachers oppose the March vacation, while 27 percent supported it.

Students stated that some children don't bring home lunch menus and even went so far as to assert that some people don't read the Mariner.

Kidder told them that while it may have been partly the fault of the school committee that the students were unaware of the policy change, it was nonetheless up to them as adults living in a democracy to keep informed of issues that affect them.

He was less charitable with adults, refusing to let them speak at the meeting because it was a forum for students.

"I have no sympathy with adults who don't know (what is going on,)" he said.

One parent, Andrea Santoro, agreed that while parents should keep informed, nonetheless she said the vacation change was too important to be left to the school committee.

She suggested that town meeting or even a ballot question ought to have decided the issue. Asked if those are the proper forums to decide potentially complicated educational issues, Santoro said yes.

Students for their part, maintained after the meeting that they are qualified to have a hand in educational decisions.

"Yes we're qualified," said Elena Fosi. "We're being educated."

"We're the ones that have to go through school," said Dawn Massa-Williams.

Class of '95 graduates...

Valedictorian Jessica Jenkins will deliver the traditional address, along with salutatorians Candice Buckley and Ann Dane, and class president Ryan Freeman.

Tonight, June 1, the winners of scholarships will be named at the annual Awards Night ceremony, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

The soon-to-be graduates are reminded that rehearsals for their graduation exercises will take place, bright and early, at 8 a.m. on Thursday and Friday at the Music Circus on Sohier Street.

Supt. Hart is on verge of hiring new principals

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset's two open principal positions could be filled by next week, school Supt. Stephen Hart said.

Hart expects to select a successor to high school Principal Mary Ellen "Meg" Gallagher perhaps as early as the end of the week.

Gallagher will leave at the end of this school year to become assistant superintendent of schools in Hanover, New Hampshire.

Kenneth Ekberg, who was principal of the Deer Hill School for many years, took an early retirement last fall. An interim principal has filled in this year. Hart said he expects to select a new Deer Hill principal as early as next week.

Hart received 40-45 applications for each position.

Hart said he narrowed the lists down to 18-20 individuals whom he interviewed himself. He sent the names of six semi-finalists to each screening committee which consisted of school administrators, teachers, parents, school council members, school board member, and a resident who does not have a student in the school. The committee for the junior/senior high principalship also included a student.

The screening committees each came up with a list of two or three finalists from which Hart will make his choice. Under the two-year-old state Education Reform law, superintendents rather than school committees hire principals.

Finalists for the Deer Hill School position are: Donna Hartlage, an administrator with the Chelsea Public Schools; William Griffin, a principal in Milton; and Susan Martin, a principal in Carver.

Junior High/High School finalists are: Ray Peterson, headmaster at Shrewsbury High School; and Curtis Collins, principal at Dennis/Yarmouth Regional High School.

Assistant Junior/Senior High Principal Jack DeLorenzo was among the semi-finalists for Gallagher's position.

Hart said under Education Reform, principals are not part of a collective bargaining unit so the salary range will be based on experience.

Hart has completed site visits to each of the junior/senior high school finalists schools and will visit the Deer Hill finalists schools this week, he said.

Cultural Council awards grants

Grants for fiscal year 1995 have been awarded by the Cohasset Local Cultural Council with funds provided by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency. Allison Shutz Moskow is chair of the Cohasset council, which provides support for a wide range of cultural and educational programs for children and adults.

According to Sen. Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth), funds for local programs grew from $2.1 million in fiscal year 1994 to $3.5 million for fiscal year 1995. He commended the volunteers of the Cohasset council for their dedication and hard work in making quality programs available to all in the community.

The Cohasset Local Cultural Council accepted applications in the Fall and carefully reviewed requests for compliance with state guidelines and local priorities.

The Cohasset Cultural Council was awarded a total of $3,100 in grants, which are as follows: Choral Art Society, Inc., $250; Cohasset Arts Booster Club, $100; Cohasset PSO, $1,050; Nancy Connolly, for multi-media workshops in dioramas for children, $300, for a Deer Hill School workshop on recycling objects into art, $65, and for summer art workshops in various media, $135; Duxbury Art Association, $100; South Shore Art Center, $600; Ta-Dah! Productions, $250, and Young People's Summer Theatre, $250.

Matthew Corbett, Class of '91 at CHS, graduated from Keene State College, Keene, N.H., with a bachelor of science degree in business management.

He is the son of Eileen and Paul Corbett.

Belated birthday greetings go to Ann Pompeo, she had a great weekend to celebrate the occasion! She and Roger went to Chicago to visit their daughter Laura and her husband Jeff.

Hope everyone had a super time!

If you have noticed Ozzie Ingram with an even bigger smile than usual, here's the reason why — his granddaughter, the Rev. Janet Hatfield Legro, has been appointed associate minister on the campus of Harvard University in the Memorial Church. She will begin her work there July 1, and we all send our congrats to Rev. Legro!

There is a brand new member that has been added to the Rooney family, and his name is John David Rooney.

John was born April 7 at 5:20 a.m. and weighed 8 lbs. 4 oz. Mom and dad, Amy and Bill Rooney, are thrilled to pieces of course, as are John's siblings, Alison, (who is four) and Billy, who is two.

His maternal grandparent is Jim Cifrino of Cohasset; paternal grandparents are Frank and Fran Rooney of Greenwich, CT. Congratulations to you all!

Two Cohasset Derby Academy students certainly have reason to be proud of themselves, they both won awards in a contest sponsored by the Small Independent Art School League. Carl Dean, a Derby eighth-grader, won second place in the pen and ink category; and Wiley Wakeman, a Derby seventh-grader, won third place in the pen and ink competition.

Their works of art were displayed during the month of April at Falmouth Academy.

We received word from Xaverian Brothers High School that Matthew K. Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kevin F. Lewis, earned First Honors for the third marking period. He is a member of the Class of 1998.

Great work, Matthew!

Three-thousand-and-fifty students received degrees from Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., at its 150th commencement ceremony May 8, and Andrew R. Kilgore, the son of Mrs. Jo-An R. Kilgore of Cohasset, received a bachelor of arts degree. Congratulations!

Happy birthday greetings are in order for Dr. John Packard — he celebrated a BIG one, he turned 60 last week. Special greetings go to you from all of us John.

CHS' own Jarred Hardwick is heading to Oklahoma City to represent the Commonwealth of Massachusetts at the AAU 16-and-under National Championship Tournament as a member of the Mass. Metro. Club AAU 16-and-under boys' basketball team. The dates are June 8 to 15.

In anticipation of the substantial expense involved in transporting the team to Oklahoma, the team members have each personally committed to participate in a basketball Shoot-A-Thon to raise money toward their expenses for the trip to the national championship. Each member of the team will take 100 foul shots in the Shoot-A-Thon during the months of May and June.

Jarred will be one of the players asking for individual contributions based on the number of shots he makes out of the 100 attempted. For example, if an individual pledges 10 cents per made shot, and the athlete makes 75 out of the 100 shots, a total contribution of $7.50 would be made to the player upon collection.

If you would like to support the National Championship bound Mass. Metro. Club AAU boys' basketball team you may do so by making your check payable to Mass. Metro. Club AAU. Your contributions are tax deductible.

Please call either coach Ron Ford or athletic director Clark Chatterton at the high school (383-6103), they can fill you in on all the details and you can help Jarred's team in its quest for (another) gold medal!

Please give a Cohasset welcome to Mary Katherine McKelvey (Kate), the daughter of Mary and Jay McKelvey, who was born May 17. Kate joins her big brother, James.

Kate's maternal grandparents are Edward and Judith McHugh of North Scituate and her paternal grandparents are Vincent and Joan McKelvey of Granby, CT.

What a wonderful time to have a baby, hopefully we will see Kate strolling in her carriage real soon. Congratulations, everyone!

Cohasset Maritime Museum opens for summer season

By David H. Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Historical Society's Maritime Museum, located on Elm St. at Cohasset center, will open for its summer season on June 1, for a season that will run through September. The museum will be open each day except Monday from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m., with additional Saturday hours starting at 9 a.m. There is no charge for admission, and donations are accepted.

The Maritime Museum, a mid-18th century ship chandlery built by Samuel Bates for his fishing fleet, today holds exhibits relating to the maritime history of this small New England seafaring town. From Cohasset's first settlement before 1700 to the close of the "Age of Sail" in the latter 1800s, the town's eyes were turned toward the sea, and its fortunes depended its maritime endeavors. Fishing, shipbuilding and ownership of, or crewing aboard large sailing merchant ships together provided much of the town's wealth and gave employment to the majority of its young men.

Cohasset based schooners, many of them built here, and owned by a number of the town's more prominent seafaring families, sustained a sizable cod and mackerel fishing fleet at Cohasset Harbor throughout the 19th century. The mackerel fleets reached their peak years just before the Civil War, with more than 50 large, two-masted schooners sailing from Cohasset each summer. Larger vessels, including clipper ships, sailing out of Boston, gave opportunity for a number of Cohasset men to become shipmasters or captains of some of the nation's largest and fastest merchant vessels. The Maritime Museum recall those days when the town's destiny was tied to the ocean, and to foreign ports in distant parts of the world.

Among the museum exhibits are collections relating to the 19th century fishing fleets, to ship wood carving, to foreign voyages, to local volunteer lifesaving and shipwrecks, and to Minot's Ledge Lighthouse. Ship models show a number of types of 19th century sailing vessels, from an early "pinkie" fishing schooner to a Donald McKay clipper built in East Boston. Artifacts from the local mackerel fleets, memorabilia from voyages to distant ports, lifesaving awards, and pieces from some of the many local shipwrecks can be seen. The story of the ill-fated first and successful second Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is illustrated in the Maritime Museum.

Additionally the museum's second floor holds a group of collections of general historical nature. Stone tools of early Native American tribes are on view, as are early carpenters' and shoemakers' tools. The wares of a "fisherman's general store," once located at Cohasset Harbor, can be seen. These and many other unique artifacts and illustrations of local history can be found at the Historical Society's Maritime Museum.

The Cohasset Historical Society's phone number is 617-383-1434.

Cruise on Boston Harbor

The Harbor Island League will host its second annual June Cruise on Sunday, June 18, from 12 to 5 p.m., departing from Hewitt's Cove, Rt. 3A, Hingham.

The boat will cruise as far north as Salem Harbor and return to Hingham after passing Boston Light, Graves Lighthouse, Marblehead Neck Light, Boston Harbor Islands, Baker Island Light, Long Island Light and Moon Island. Historical narration will be provided by Bill Fitzpatrick of "Around the Harbor."

Advance ticket prices are $23 for adults ($18 for members) and $10 for children under 12. Passengers may bring their own lunch or purchase one onboard.

Proceeds will benefit the Peddock's Island Chapel and other island activities. For further information call (617) 925-4794. To order tickets send a check, along with name, address, phone number and number of adult, member or children's tickets, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Harbor Islands League, Inc., P.O. Box 472, Hingham 02043. Checks or money orders should be made payable to the Harbor Islands League, Inc.

Farewell to O'Donnells

A farewell party was held April 15 for Dominic and Kathy O'Donnell and their two sons, Francis and Dominic, at the home of Kathy's parents, Tom and Jay Jay Healy.

The O'Donnells are moving to Glasgow, Scotland, where Dominic's mother, father, sister and two brothers live.

About 60 family members and friends attended the party to say good-bye and wish the family good luck on their new adventure.

What fun, surely events to look forward to for everyone!

Finally, a great way to end this week's news — Amy Russell, the daughter of Michael A. Russell and Jane E. Russell of Atlantic Ave. fame, received a bachelor of arts degree from Hamilton College in commencement exercises Sunday, May 21.

Amy was a sociology major at Hamilton, and a graduate of Noble and Greenough School. She now joins an alumni body of approximately 13,000, many of whom have made important contributions to business, the professions, government and the arts.

obituary

Lilian Swann-Saarinen

Lilian Louisa Swann-Saarinen, 83, of Cohasset, died May 22 in the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

Mrs. Saarinen was a talented sculptor who studied with Carl Miles, the Swedish sculptor. She was described by the late Charles Eames, an internationally famous designer, as the most naturally talented sculptor he had ever known.

She worked with her husband, the late architect Eero Saarinen, on designing the Crow Island School in Winnetka, Ill., which was an entry in the St. Louis architect competition. She also completed commissions including the KLM sculpture at Idlewild Airport.

Mrs. Saarinen attended the Chapin School in New York City and Hunter College. She attended Cranbrook Academy of art in Bloomfield Hills, Mich., where she met her husband.

She was a member of the first women's U.S. Olympic Ski Team in 1939.

She leaves a son, Eric Saarinen of Los Angeles; a daughter, Susan Saarinen of Golden, Colo. and five grandchildren.

The funeral service and visiting hours were private.

Selectmen

No one ever said selectmen have to like each other.

And while it's obvious that all members of this board aren't going to get together socially — it is important that they refrain from personal attacks on one another and try to work cooperatively to do what's best for the town.

That doesn't mean they have to agree. Open debate and disagreement is a healthy way to air the issues.

But as Cohasset citizens wade through the complicated series of events that led to the current earthquake on the board — it's crucial to keep in mind the right of every citizen to have clear and unfettered access to public records.

There are several issues here that muddy the waters.

One is the question of the appropriateness of Selectman Martha Gjesteby's conduct. Mrs. Gjesteby released a so-called 'confidential' document from a private party (in this case Cohasset Heights Landfill) to a member of the public after her board had apparently agreed not to distribute it until a determination on whether or not it is a public record was made.

Another sticky issue is whether attorneys hired by the town can keep documents from their bosses (in this case the selectmen) simply because they ask each other to and whether they can agree among themselves that certain documents are exempt from the Public Records Law.

And finally but most importantly is the issue of what constitutes a "public record".

According to the Secretary of State's office there is a "presumption that all government documents are public records.

"Therefore it is the burden of the record custodian to demonstrate that an exemption applies in order to withhold a requested document."

In other words, when there's doubt — selectmen should err on the side of the public.

Government is not a private business and what's going on here isn't one mega-company sending ripples through the stock market through a secretive, hostile take over of another. And this memo does not detail a secret military maneuver that would jeopardize national security if disclosed.

What's going on is here something you have the right to know about This is a settlement proposal from a private company to the town concerning several issues surrounding Cohasset Heights Landfill which is trying to expand its operations.

In towns like Cohasset with a well-educated electorate and highly effective elected and appointed volunteer boards — citizens can be lulled into believing that since these people have the town's best interest at heart — it's okay if they break the law by withholding certain documents.

Government doesn't always work smoothly, often because its activities are open to public scrutiny. That's part of the democratic process and we wouldn't have it any other way.

Two local citizens appealed to selectmen at their meeting this week to bury their hatchets and get on with the business of the town.

"I ask you to look into your hearts and souls to put away personal animosity for whatever reason," Wigmore Pierson of Atlantic Avenue said.

Hear! Hear! Wig. We couldn't agree more.

But the issue of public records isn't going to go away. The people behind the "premature" release of this settlement proposal are passionate about the Cohasset Heights issue. They're not going to go away either. They're educating themselves on the law and are going to demand their elected officials follow it to the letter.

There's no doubt in our minds that selectmen are going to have to face up to that fact and move on.

Selectmen should exercise restraint

(Ed.'s note: a copy of the following letter to Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown was sent to the Cohasset Mariner for publication.)

Dear Mr. Brown:

Press accounts of recent Board of Selectmen meetings has this long-time Cohasset resident fully expecting Boston City Councilor "Dapper" O'Neil to make a cameo appearance at your next meeting. His buffoonery would play well in this unfortunate climate where intra-mural espionage, cheap name calling and ego-driven pontificating has replaced the dignity and mutual respect which characterized relationships on the board for decades. I acknowledge that in the past members held disparate views, there was cognitive dissidence, and a fair amount of adversarial activity. There also existed a decorous line in the sand that restrained members from waging ad homonym attack, and public catharsis of personal grievances. This restraint was, I believe, based upon the ability of dedicated selectmen to transcend personalities, and put aside personal prejudice in the best interests of our town.

The recent bally-hoo over the release of so called "confidential" information by selectman Martha Gjesteby underscores the appalling naiveté of certain board members. Mrs. Gjesteby has been around long enough to know that by the time town counsel, and all others involved arrived at a determination on the propriety of releasing the memo, excerpts would have been "leaked," speculation would be rampant, and, in the absence of fact and accurate information, residents would be unfairly incited. Cohasset residents have a right to this information. Our elected Board of Selectmen has an obligation to provide it. And, with her characteristic singleness of purpose, Martha Gjesteby has once again put the right of taxpayers to be "in the loop" over her own personal popularity on a board which increasingly makes the town of Cohasset look like a Banana Republic.

Mr. Brown, you have only recently taken the reins as chairman. I wish you well, and hope sincerely that you will work with the members to clearly define your purpose.

Regional agency backs train tunnel

(Ed.'s note: a copy of the following letter to Environmental Secretary Trudy Coxe was provided to the Mariner for publication).

Dear Secretary Coxe:

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council regularly reviews project proposals deemed to have regional impacts. These proposals are reviewed for compliance with MetroPlan 2000, the regional plan for the Boston metropolitan area, as well as for their impact upon the environment.

MAPC has reviewed all of the options in the Old Colony Railroad SDEIR/S and recommends that Alternative 6a (restoration of rail service with a short tunnel under Hingham Square) to be a viable option worthy of public support. The MAPC has endorsed all three branches of the Old Colony Railroad as part of MetroPlan 2000. We believe that the Greenbush Branch of the Old Colony Railroad to be a very good regional project that will greatly reduce traffic on the Southeast Expressway, and is quite likely the best of the three Old Colony Railroad branches. The focus of this branch, to serve existing concentrations of development in traditional town centers, is critical to reinforcing transit as a method for linking downtowns. We note that Option 6a is about $76 million more to construct in 1993 dollars than the at-grade alternative and that finding these funds may mean the delay of other transportation projects. However, we believe that the extra cost can be justified due to the ridership levels projected for this extension and the need to reduce traffic delay in Hingham Square.

MAPC staff have attended several of the public informational meetings and public hearings. We have listened to the concerns of the citizens of the South Shore, both for and against the Greenbush Branch of the Old Colony Railroad. It is our belief that the EIR provides strategies to provide for the safest facility possible. Issues that have been raised at these meetings about grade crossing and right-of-way safety, are more related to human nature problems than to design solutions. Educational programs, such as the ones the MBTA have offered, to increase public awareness of personal safety, will further improve the safety record of the proposed facility. We also believe that MBTA should be supported for its measures to reduce the noise impacts of train whistles through the use of new technology. Such changes throughout the MBTA system will serve to greatly reduce noise pollution.

MAPC looks forward to reviewing the Final EIR/S for this important rail corridor.

Little League support appreciated

To the Editor:

I would like to thank everyone who helped make the annual little league dance a great success. I would also like to thank those who attended. I hope everyone had a good time.

The business people who donated silent auction items were a large part of our success. These generous contributors give effortlessly to the programs in town and we do appreciate it.

This is our largest fundraiser, and preliminary reports slate it as being one of our best ever. This additional income will help improve the entire Little League program.

Again, thank you for your support of Cohasset Youth Baseball.

Trust the technical people who know best

The following letter was sent to Gov. Weld, with a copy to the Mariner.

I am a Frenchman who happened to attend a conference on gene therapy representing Rhone Poulenc at the time when the vote for and against the South Shore train was being debated in the town of Scituate. As a long standing friend of your city, having worked at MGH during two years, I am encouraged to write this letter. I must confess I was amazed at the victory of the anti-train lobby in Scituate. This letter expresses the view point of an outsider with no particular, vested interests except for the well-being of the residents of the South Shore among whom I have many friends.

I live in a Parisian suburb about equi-distance from the city as is Scituate from Boston (30 miles plus). Thanks to the commuting train RER (Réseau Express Régional), which is linked to the Paris metro, I am a happy man traveling to Paris in less than one hour. I can read newspapers, favorite novels, use my computer, converse with neighbors etc. Imagining Paris without commuter rail would be a nightmare. Indeed it became a nightmare during the railroad workers' strike during our recent presidential campaign. Traffic jams, gridlock, virtual paralysis getting worse every year as the number of cars progress geometrically. In 10 years, the city traffic will come to a total stop and Paris as many other cities will ban all traffic with the exception of buses and taxis.

In Scituate, I heard the arguments opposed to the reestablishment of trains and read about the town meeting in Hingham. I gather that only a small minority of the citizens in each township attend meetings and decisions affecting the lives of tens of thousands for generations to come, are made by a few well-organized lobbyists such as the Coastal Coalition who pass out buttons to their friends, appeal to emotions with flawed arguments in the name of the silent majority. In my sense of the term this is hardly democracy!

May I point out to a few of these unscientific arguments; take pollution for instance. Do you really believe that 350 people in a train carriage contribute to the pollution of the environment more than 350 cars and trucks, many of which use diesel fuel? Reference was made at the Scituate meeting to the pristine environment at the mouth of the North River in Greenbush where the terminal of the line will be located. As I walked in the area, I saw junked tires, on one side junked cars, on the other an ugly landfill with trash and plastic bags hanging on trees beyond the landfill, a car wash, all this across from a nursing home for elderly people. I also gather the North River is quite polluted, judging by the water treatment plant in the vicinity, and this without a train.

Trains at the Scituate meeting were referred to as being outdated by the Coastal Coalition representative. Indeed your railroad and subway technology sadly enough is outdated for a nation that was built on rail. I recommend that you spend a day riding the Paris metro or take the TGV (train a grande vitesse) from Paris to Lyon, more than 350 kilometers in about two hours, in comfortable airconditioned carriages. I hope technology will not stand still in the U.S. and that America will catch up with Western Europe and Japan. Through an unenlightened decision today, we should not deprive future generations of the benefit that will surely come. Technology will also reduce noise as it is already done in Europe even for abutting homes, which incidentally get tax rebates and occasionally total reimbursement. Driving back from Boston, I was painfully conscious that cars kill, maim and rattle the mind. (Emerging from a traffic jam, I was tempted to speed and got a traffic ticket, fortunately a warning). Trains as well as boats represent one of the safest modes of transportation. Talking of boats, I favor them not as an alternative but as an additional way of commute for coastal cities, but again with technology superior to that provided by the Hingham-Boston run. On the English and Irish Channel and other countless cities on the North Sea far rougher than the Boston Harbor, the Hovercraft and Hydrofoit are in. Let's get the people off the Expressway and stop that senseless love affair with the car which has lost all meaning except for pleasure outings.

When I take off from Logan Airport to Paris and look downward, on your great center of learning, "the Athens of America," I think of all those people, students, senior citizens, the handicapped, those who do not or cannot afford to drive and even common citizens deprived of culture because of lack of transportation. I dream of a Boston without traffic jams and happy faces traveling comfortably by train or boat to the inner city. Please do not waste more resources on the Big Dig and other highway constructions which will be outdated by the time they are finished, as was the dangerous Expressway. Above all, do not be influenced by irrational anti-train propagandists and trust the technical people who know best.

Sincerely yours,
Edouard Prost Ph.D.

Support appreciated

To the Editor:

I am writing on behalf of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society to extend our heartfelt thanks to the many local residents who participated in the fifth annual "Cohasset by the Sea" walk Saturday, April 1.

We had a wonderful turnout of 294 motivated walkers and 40 enthusiastic volunteers, all of whom helped raise nearly $20,000 for local clients who are living with MS. Statewide, 5,051 walkers raised a total of $553,000. These funds will help us continue to provide vital support services to thousands of Massachusetts families living with multiple sclerosis, and it will enable our society to remain one of the major supporters of MS research in the country.

The many participants who so generously joined us understood that their efforts and the pledges that they raised would truly help thousands of families living with MS. I want to encourage everyone to please send in their pledges as soon as possible to support research and local services.

Once again, many, many thanks to our walkers, volunteers, sponsors, and a special thanks to the town of Cohasset for their overwhelming support.

There are alternatives to train

To the Editor:

I want to let you know again my opposition to the restoration of the Greenbush train; not just because I am an abutter, but for the entire impact this train will have on our community — in this order: 1.) Safety. Far too many children around the area of passing train. 2.) Economics. The cost to the taxpayer in one form or another. 3.) Pollution. Even before trains are put into operation, oil in puddles that occur along the railroad bed, and when the trains become active, more diesel fuel with fumes, smoke and dripping oil will filter into our land and air. 4.) Impact on our wildlife in wetlands. 5.) Traffic problems and congestion along the route.

I also have friends in Kingston very concerned and upset about the restoration of the Plymouth train. They don't want it.

Please bear in mind, we have access to boats that do an excellent job.

We also have buses.

Belize adventure approved for high school

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

A limited number of Cohasset High School students will have the chance to walk in the footsteps of Morgan the Pirate next spring, as the school committee recently approved a field trip to the jungles of the exotic Central American nation of Belize.

David Magnussen, chair of the high school math and science department, told the committee that the week-long trip will include science and social studies subject matter, as the students will visit several wildlife refuges, a coral reef and Mayan ruins.

He stressed that the excursion will be hard work.

"This is not lying in the sun. It's not a vacation. They will come back exhausted."

Magnussen explained that Dr. Philip McLaren, a professor at Eastern Nazerene College who conducts regular tours of Belize for high school students, will accompany the trip.

McLaren and Magnussen will lecture on what the students have seen.

In addition, the students will keep journals and do reading to prepare themselves for the journey. They will read "Jaguars" and a biology study of the neotropics, as the jungles of the new world are sometimes called.

Magnussen spent ten days touring Belize last fall.

"It was an absolutely marvelous place," he said, adding that much of the jungle is being destroyed so students might not get another chance to see so much of it.

The school committee members were enthusiastic about the adventure.

"As a biology major, it sounds wonderful," said Maureen Jerz, a school committee member.

"I've heard from other schools that it's a great program," said school committee member Nancy Sandell, while school committee chairman Ralph Kidder agreed.

Magnussen said there may be more students interested in going to Belize than there are spaces. A minimum of ten and maximum of 18 students may participate.

He said the trip would be limited to juniors and seniors.

Sandell suggested an application process, including an essay on what students hoped to gain from the experience.

School committee member James Kirk said that if there are too many qualified students, a lottery could pick those for the trip.

Expected to cost some $1,500, the trip will likely take place in either March or April.

Located on the Caribbean Sea next to Guatemala, tiny Belize, the former British Honduras, is the only English-speaking nation in Central America.

Morgan and other buccaneers are also believed to have used Belize's spectacular beaches to attack ships laden with Aztec treasure bound for Spain.

The students will concentrate on the following locations, which offer some very different habitats:

• Crooked Tree Bird Sanctuary, located on an island surrounded by freshwater rivers and lakes, is the winter home to many species of North American birds, including some from the Cohasset area. There are also hundreds species of reptile, mammal and other birds.

• Cockscomb Basin Wildlife Preserve, is the world's first preserve for the fabled jaguar, worshipped as a god by the Maya Indians. Central America's giant cats, ocelots, margays and pumas, in addition to jaguars, live in the jungle, but students are unlikely to see any since the elusive animals prowl at night. However, other unusual creatures and plants inhabit the preserve, making it an interesting site for study.

• Coral Reefs at South Water Cove are second in size only to Australia's Great Barrier Reef, and stretch for some 185 miles along the coast. Home to about 220 species of fish and vast numbers of invertebrates, the reef is one of the main attractions in Belize. Students will stay at cabins or dormitories located on the island and run by Pelican Beach Resort for students and researches. Diving and snorkeling opportunities are among the main activities.

• Rain Forest at Blue Creek, sits at the base of the Maya Mountains near the Guatemalan border and receives about 180 inches of rainfall a year. Students will be able to explore limestone caves with Mayan guides.

• Mayan Ruins at Xunantunich, which includes a museum and excavation site, is believed to be a classical Mayan ceremonial center. It is located in the jungle at the Mopan and Belize Rivers. Visitors can climb to the top of the tower, getting an impressive view of the vast jungle spreading out beneath them.

School technology program takes off

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Computers are being integrated into the curriculum at all grade levels and students appear to be enjoying it, members of the school department technology committee told the school committee recently.

"We're trying to connect these skills to what is happening in the computer lab and in the classroom," explained Ruth Fennessey, curriculum coordinator for kindergarten through grade 6.

Jane Auster, technology coordinator for the schools, said that by the time students reach high school, they should have good computer skills and be able to use educational software for school assignments. High school students take a half-year keyboarding course.

Teachers are also being taught as new software and equipment is introduced.

She also said the technology committee, which includes personnel from all schools and meets weekly, is developing a manual for proper computer use. She said that she does not want students using the Internet system to access inappropriate material. (There has been concern in the aftermath of the Oklahoma City bombing that guides to making explosive devices can be obtained via computer.)

Auster also said the group is working on a manual dealing with copyright issues.

Kevin Baker, technology coordinator at the Deer Hill School, presented a ten-minute video, showing the students working on various computer projects.

He stressed the educational nature of what is taught. "There are no non-educational games being used during the school day."

Baker said that additional software is needed for math, science and history lessons.

Jeanne Hanson, technology coordinator at the Osgood Elementary School showed the committee a variety of projects, including students' poems and an issue of the school paper, which were done on computer.

School committee chairman Ralph Kidder asked if boys dominated the computers and girls tended to avoid technology. He said studies have shown that boys prefer computers.

Hanson said "less than two percent (of all students) don't rush to the computers."

Baker said that while the boys are more competitive with each other, the girls are just as interested.

School committee members were pleased with the report.

"It's good to see the staff so excited," said Kidder.

Nancy Sandell stated, "It's nice to see this all coming together."

The program was begun several years ago, paid for with community donations and the PSO, as well as the school department.

Health board to test its office air quality

During a stormy discussion with its executive secretary last week, members of the Board of Health unanimously agreed to test the air quality in their town hall office.

Executive secretary Carol Oteri-Puffer has long maintained that the air quality at town hall is bad and causing her to suffer health problems.

Health board member Robert Davenport said they should test the air soon, agreeing to Oteri-Puffer's suggestion that the test be done on a Monday morning, after the building has been shut up for two days.

Oteri-Puffer also told the board that she will be unable to work for two-and-one-half months, prompting the board members to wonder how they can manage to get through the end of the fiscal year, since their budget is nearly used up.

However, they said there is money for some clerical help and indicated they will give the town's executive secretary, Gregory Doyon, the documents relating to the absence.

Exchange student reflects on his year in Cohasset

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

Like many other Cohasset High School seniors, Alexander Culiuc is finishing up his advanced placement and final exams, and is getting ready for graduation.

But Alexander won't be summering on the Cape and the islands — he's simply looking forward to going home.

Home is Chisinau, Moldova, a small town in a small republic nestled between Romania and the Ukraine, and Alexander hasn't been there in almost a year.

Alexander was awarded a scholarship to come to school as an exchange student in the United States through the Freedom Support Act sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency. After hearing the program publicized heavily on the radio at home — he applied for it, took several tests showing proficiency in English, was screened and interviewed, and finally selected to go.

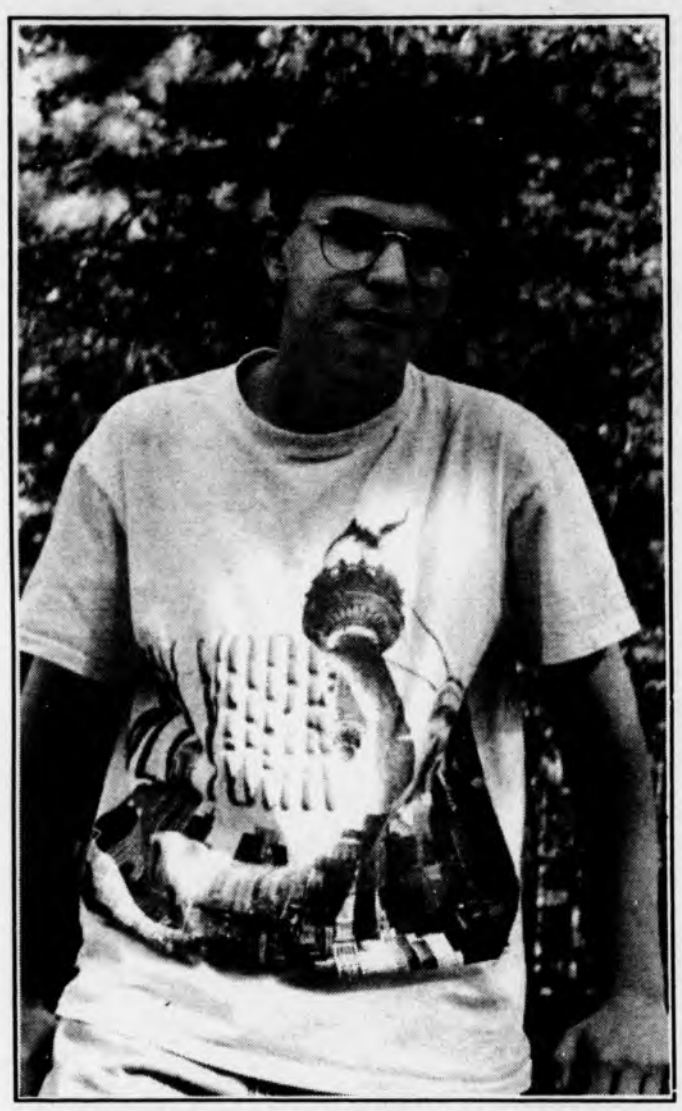
"I didn't know where I was going," he said, recalling his mixed emotions at the time. "I had many feelings. I was excited and nervous."

Soon enough Alexander found he was fortunate to have the Kruegers as a host family and to be in Massachusetts, which he said has a climate similar to his native Moldova.

"They're a nice family, they're just wonderful," said Alexander, who has forged a good friendship with the Kruegers' son David.

Alexander attended Hull High School for the first half of the year but switched to Cohasset High School in the second semester, finding more challenges in the school's advanced placement program.

With advanced placement courses in French, computer science and calculus, Alexander chose a rigorous schedule but said overall he found school is easier here.



Exchange student Alexander Culiuc who hails from Moldova reflects on his semester at Cohasset High. (Alice Coyle photo)

At home he pointed out, school runs on a six-period schedule with longer periods, students go six days a week Monday through Saturday, and there are fewer and shorter school breaks for holidays.

Another difference Alexander noticed at once was a more open and friendly relationship between students and teachers than he is used to at home.

Alexander also noted that he is especially impressed with the freedom of choice in America.

"You can do whatever you want as long as you're not hurting some one else," he said. "At home it's the same on paper, but there is not as much freedom."

Alexander was about 13 when the former U.S.S.R unraveled and newly independent republics began the arduous task of rebuilding their economies.

The growth and change has been slow, said Alexander who along with many other young people would like to see things improve more quickly. Although dozens of former government factories that are slowing being sold to private owners, he said the process of building private enterprise is very slow.

Alexander is looking forward to returning home to see his family — his younger sister, his mother and his father, a physicist who teaches and conducts research.

There aren't as many fast food chains or sporting events in Moldova but Alexander, who plays defense for the town soccer team, doesn't mind.

While he enjoys watching hockey and baseball, the American love affair with football eludes him.

"I still don't know the rules of football," he said. "It confuses me."

Alexander said he will miss his friends here, the close proximity of the ocean, and said he will recommend the exchange program to other students in his country.

As for college, Alexander said he's been accepted to a school at home that focuses on business, politics and and international relations and he plans to go there for a year or two. After that, he'd like to transfer out to the Sorbonne in Paris. Fluent in French along with Russian, Romanian, English, he shouldn't have any trouble getting around in the City of Light.

And while he has no plans to move here permanently, Alexander said he'll keep in touch and hopes to come back for a visit eventually.

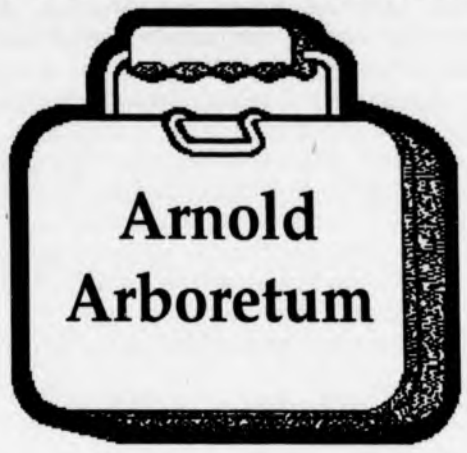
Daytripping with Laura Ricketson Doherty

One of the advantages of living where we do is the incredible variety of places to visit. Whether it's the hustle of a major city, the quiet of the country or the enchantment of the seaside — all are within a day's drive. I've lived in Massachusetts all my life and the only thing that delights me more than discovering new areas is telling people about them. And so, I am excited about this new column.

Many of these trips have been the result of information given to me by others. So, if you have a special place you'd like to share with Mariner readers, let us know about it.

The Arnold Arboretum



There are so many aspects to the Arnold Arboretum and its 265 acres of more than 1,500 shrubs, vines and trees, but one special feature is that every tree is labeled with its name, country of origin and date planted. This is a great help to people like me who are still at the beginning stage of learning to differentiate between species.

And so, thanks to this, I can tell you that on a recent hike of about five minutes up one of the many side trails off the main road, I was able to identify a tulip tree, a flowering dogwood, black tupelo, swamp white oak, shagbark hickory and an American basswood. At the top of the trail, having decided during this visit to more or less roam freely, I was surprised and delighted to arrive at the Larz Anderson Collection of Japanese dwarf trees in an area surrounded by Bonsai hedges, dwarf evergreens and bank plants.

Less than an hour's drive from town, the arboretum is just a short distance from the Southeast Expressway. One helpful suggestion for first time visitors is to stop at the Hunnewell Visitor's Center which is located just inside the main gate immediately off the Jamaicaway. It houses a book store and information desk where topographical maps of the grounds and other useful material are available.

The arboretum is a living museum devoted to the study, conservation and enjoyment of trees, shrubs and vines. It is part of Frederick Law Olmsted's emerald necklace park system and a national historic landmark.

Chris Strand, outreach horticulturist and enthusiastic spokesperson, relayed some of its interesting history to me, recently. The park was established in 1872 on land donated to Harvard University by James Arnold. Charles Sargent of Brookline was appointed its first director and soon proposed what was then a most radical idea — that the land be donated to the City of Boston for a parks system.

Chris believes that this was most likely the first time such a proposal had been made and understandably took some convincing. A strong argument in Sargent's favor was his success in engaging Frederick Law Olmsted to design the roads and arrange the collection. A local example of Olmsted's landscape design can be found at World's End in Hingham.

Eventually, an agreement was reached and the city, in turn, leased the land back to Harvard for 999 years at a $1 a year ... " with an option to renew," Chris adds with a chuckle. "It's a great arrangement," he says. "The city takes care of the roads, walks and safety and we take care of the plants."

Over the years, the university has continued to add and remove plants in equal amounts (700, last year). Care is taken to keep within the same scheme and the landscape continues to remain as romantic as it was when the park first opened. The day I was there, photographers were setting up to shoot a bridal party.

Because of its worldwide reputation, it is not unusual to come upon groups of people conversing in many different languages. The university also sends people all over the world to collect various specimens.

A special attraction is the Dove Tree from China which with its large white petals and bluish stamen is so rare that even Chinese visitors want to look at it. Kids love to climb the cork tree and are fascinated by the Revolutionary Burial Ground on Peter's Hill.

One frequent visitor told me that she's been going to the arboretum since moving to the area 25 years ago and "I'm still discovering..." She especially enjoys the pine groves and the roses.

The rhododendron path winds along a shaded ravine with two small waterfalls and a rustic log bridge over a rushing brook. Pink, orange and purple azaleas are planted together, some surrounding flowering dogwoods.

There are also many attractive places to stop and rest along the way. One such spot which is especially popular is located on a high knoll where one can listen to the wind rustle through pine trees, the chirping of birds while contemplating the distant view of the Blue Hills.

My favorite location is Lilac Hill, which at this time of year, you can find just by following the delicious scent. There are more than 450 different varieties and it is the second largest collection in the country. For those of you planning a visit soon, many of these plants have yet to bloom.

The library in the main building is an excellent resource, according to Strand. In it are periodicals dating back to 1872 which attract florists from all over the world. Hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Monday to Friday.

Special events include Arbor Day, Lilac Sunday and the annual plant sale, Sept. 17, which attracts thousands. There are child and adult education programs in botany, horticulture and gardening. Tours of the arboretum are also available.

Hours are from dawn until dusk. Admission is free. For further information, call 617 524-1718.

(Editor's note: this is the first in a bi-weekly summer series on day trips from Cohasset).

Blood drive is June 7

The Red Cross will hold a Community Blood Drive on Wednesday, June 7 from 2 to 7 p.m. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main St., and babysitting assistance will be provided after 3 p.m. To make an appointment for donating at a specific time or for further information, call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 383-1290.

Corinne Cahill, a Red Cross blood drive organizer and volunteer from Cohasset represented the Cohasset community on April 25 at a reception given by the New England Chapter of the American Red Cross. Cohasset received an award in "appreciation for its outstanding support of the American Red Cross Blood Services Donor Recruitment Program and consistently showing the largest donor turnout through 1994."

Gospel music concert set

The First Parish of Cohasset, Main St., will present the award-winning Concord Chorale in a Gospel Concert on Saturday, June 17, at 8 p.m. as part of Cohasset's Arts Festival/Harborfest celebration.

Tickets are $7 ($5 with a Harborfest button) and will be available starting June 5 through the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church office, which is open Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Call 383-1100 for tickets or further information.

Museum expands hours

The Cohasset Historical Society has expanded the hours the Maritime Museum will be open to visitors. Interested citizens have volunteered their time to staff the museum on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon from June 3 through the end of August. Until this year the museum was only open during afternoons.

The museum, located on Elm St. in Cohasset Village, exhibits a Minot Ledge Lighthouse collection and many exhibits documenting Cohasset's distinguished maritime history.

Volunteers include: Bill Malone, Charlie Fink, Deborah Cook, Ray Buckley, Ira Stoughton, Doug Peck, Sarah Pease, Amy Golden, Ruth Nedrow, Sue Grant, Vivian Bobo, Nancy Snowdale, Bob Davenport, Hamilton Tewksbury, John Hartshorne, Osborne Ingram, Gordon Flint, Rita Kirk, Lucia Woods, Dan Cotton, Pat Baird, Jim Mullen, Martha Equi and Toni Finegan.

Maritime Museum hours are: Monday, May 29, Memorial Day, during the parade period and Saturdays, June 3 through Aug. 26 from 9 a.m. to noon. The museum is also open Tuesday through Sunday, June 6 through Sept. 30, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The Cohasset Historical Society also opens the adjacent Captain John Wilson House, built in 1810, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. with the assistance of trained guides. David Wadsworth is the society's curator. This summer the Wilson House will be displayed as a 1910 teahouse, which it was at that time. For further information or to arrange a special tour, call 383-1434.

Coffee with the authors

Buttonwood Books & Toys will present its spring "Coffee with the Authors" on Tuesday, June 13, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Chart House restaurant in Cohasset. Landscape design consultant Julie Moir Messervy, author Douglas Whynott and mystery writer Peter Abrahams will be guests at the coffee.

In "The Inward Garden" Messervy inspires readers to look within themselves to create an original garden that is both beautiful and personally meaningful.

Whynott's "Giant Bluefin" highlights the thrill of the fisherman's hunt, the pressures of competition and the conservation movement.

In "The Fan," Abrahams creates a compelling mystery as a baseball fan's idolatry of a newly acquired hitter becomes an obsession.

For further information or reservations, call Buttonwood Books at 383-2665. The cost is $8 per person and reservations should be made by June 7.

'Y' family center featured

Bob Detweiler, of "Bob Detweiler's Journal," a Continental Cablevision program, will host South Shore YMCA CEO Ralph Yohe, executive director of community services Bill Johnson and site director Andy Levin on Wednesday, June 7, at 7 p.m. on local cable television channel 3 in the towns of Norwell, Hanover and Hingham and on Tuesday, June 13, at 8:30 p.m. on local cable channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset, Scituate and Hull. Footage of the actual site, which will open June 22, will be featured.

Formerly the Hanover Swim & Tennis Club, the Y acquired the site in March from the Tedeschi family. Facilities include two outdoor swimming pools, a wading pool, seven outdoor tennis courts, athletic fields and a pond.

Newcomers' elects officers

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers' Club recently held elections for Club officers for 1995-96. The new officers are: co-presidents, Martha Gangemi and Andrea Kinnealey of Cohasset; vice-president, Susan Biddle Jaffe of Cohasset; treasurer, Nancy Herlin of Cohasset; corresponding secretary, Ann Kelly of Cohasset; recording secretary, Kris Ford of Scituate; communication secretaries, Suzanne Clark and Martha Wittbrodt of Scituate and historian, Mary Allen of Cohasset.

Other officers include: membership/Cohasset, Brenda Regan; membership/Scituate, Diedre Kelly; hospitality co-chairs, Laurie Sheehan and Nancy Touhey of Scituate; telephoning co-chairs, Barbara Canney of Cohasset and Ginny Callahan of Scituate, and publicity, Karen Canfield, Scituate.

All new residents of Scituate and Cohasset or residents interested in meeting individuals with similar interests, are invited to join the club. Club activities include mom and tot playgroups, a Sip & Stitch group, monthly dinner and card groups and several other bimonthly and annual adult and family social and interest-related activities. For further information call 383-0454 or 545-2458 or write to the Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers' Club, P.O. Box 623, Cohasset 02025.

Harborfest parade planned

The theme of this year's Harborfest Parade will be "World War II Remembered," in keeping with Governor Weld's request that each community in the Commonwealth celebrate the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II.

The parade is scheduled for Sunday, June 18, beginning at 2:30 p.m. Any person or group is eligible to participate, and presentations need not follow the theme. However, only those that do honor the theme will be eligible for prizes, co-sponsored by the George H. Mealey American Legion Post and the Cohasset VFW Post #9146. The first prize will be $1,000, with a second prize of $500 and a third of $200.

For further information call Keith Knowles at 383-1331.

Girls say hello to tennis bye

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

Surprised at how well Cohasset High's girls tennis team did this season? Don't worry, you weren't the only one. Add four-year coach Sarah Meehan to the list.

After hovering around the .500 mark for the past few springs, the young Skippers' squad put together a rousing 12-2 season, assuring them a bye in the Division 2 South Sectional tourney and a home-court advantage at least for their first-round action on Friday.

Cohasset did lose two matches, to South Shore League powers Scituate and Norwell, but did beat both squads as well. If Scituate and Norwell are to be considered two of the dangerous teams in the south, hey, the Skippers are right alongside them.

"What we really have to do is come out and have a strong practice on Thursday," said Meehan, who is counting the days until her team takes the court. "It's mostly mental. We really have a young team. We're physically capable of beating anyone out there.

"I'm totally psyched. I know these girls can do whatever they want if they put their minds to it. I think we really have a good chance at getting by the first few rounds."

Cohasset was strong right down the roster during the regular season, led by No. 1 singles player Heather Conte. A junior who transferred to Cohasset from Pennsylvania, Conte faced the iron of every other team the Skippers faced and gave it back just as well, finishing with a solid 10-4 record.

Two-time SSL All-Star Laura Slotnick will be a key ingredient in Cohasset's tourney run. Slotnick's individual record was 12-2 and was only a point away from a one-loss campaign.

Alexis Zerendow garnered one of the points in the victory over Scituate at No. 3 singles, where she now takes a 10-2 record into the postseason.

Meehan called the All-Star doubles team of sophomore Karen Niessink and Kristen O'Connell "the cornerstone of the team." The seventh-grader O'Connell, who has a fabulous future ahead of her, is "the strongest player on the team, mentally," according to Meehan. At 12-2, the duo's regular season record mirrored that of the team's overall mark. Their only two losses came against Scituate and Norwell, who they also beat.

With 21 girls on the team, there were 12 just four years ago, Meehan was able to use a five player rotation at second doubles. Ashley and Katie Brister, Kate Stone and Jessica Stevens all had at least four wins each. Seniors Amanda Gontarz and Jessica Jenkins also had strong seasons.

Beyond the success of the team, Meehan said it was a genuinely good club to coach and made the spring that much more rewarding.

"We had such team spirit this year," she said. "They're a wonderful group of kids to play with."

The opposition may find the Skippers a difficult group to play against if the girls continue where they left off.

There are a million sports stories to tell but some of the best happened this spring on the South Shore. Here are just a few.

*The Scituate High girls' track team finally ended Norwell High's unbeaten streak at 114 straight dual meets. The streak started way back in '83 when most of today's high school athletes were still watching Mister Rogers.

Give credit to the Scituate program and coach Bill Smith.

Smith, who has coached high school, college and Olympic champions in his long career was rewarded for his efforts by being re-hired for the next season by the SHS school administration. I guess timing is everything.

*The Silver Lake baseball team qualified for the Division I state tournament for the first time since '81.

The Lakers, who closed at 9-9 in a very strong Old Colony League are coached by NESN sports anchor Bob Rodgers, a former SL grad.

The Lakers have a lot of talent on their team.

Their top offensive gun is senior center fielder Chris Watson.

Watson led the league in hitting his sophomore and junior years and was named co-league MVP this year. Watson might be the best all-around high school baseball player on the South Shore.

The Lakers also have senior ace lefty Lou Chighisola, who pitched the entire season without allowing an earned run.

Chighisola throws in the 80s and can beat any team when he's on his game.

*The Marshfield High girls' tennis team came from nowhere to win a share of the Atlantic Coast League title this season.

The Lady Rams, who ended up tied with Duxbury, relied on an eighth grader at first singles with a freshman at second.

Eighth grader Kristin Modell finished 13-3 on the season and should dominate the ACL for years to come.

Ninth grade second singles player Katie Sibley was undefeated this season and give coach Roberta Daniele an impressive one-two punch for the next three years.

And at third singles the Lady Rams have steady junior captain Allison Steel.

There was talk of rebuilding at MHS at the start of the season but those words faded as soon as the Modell, Sibley and Steel started winning.

*The Hingham High boys' lacrosse team survived a tough schedule and a rock-throwing attack to end up as one of the favorites to win the state title after making the final four last year.

The Harbormen and coach John Todd ended up with only two losses this year and appear to be recovered from an ugly incident that happened on the bus ride home from a recent away game at Weymouth.

In that incident, the Harbormen were quietly minding their business on the bus when they were pelted with rocks by some unknown losers.

Two players were injured badly enough to require hospital care.

If the Harbormen go on to win the state

Supreme effort leaves laxmen short

The turning point in Cohasset High's gritty 9-8 loss to Weymouth in the opening round of tournament play on Tuesday came late in the third period with the Skippers holding a slim 6-5 lead.

Things began to look up as 12th-ranked Weymouth was assessed a penalty, giving Cohasset, the 20th seed in the tourney (7-7), a two-man advantage. But it was Weymouth, not the Skippers, who were able to capitalize on the penalty, tying the game and changing the course of the battle in Weymouth's favor.

Cohasset head coach Ken Ekberg said the key for a Skippers' victory was to keep possession of the ball on offense and away from the Weymouth defenders as much as possible. They weren't able to do it, but the Skippers can't be condemned for not trying.

"They really worked very hard," Ekberg said. "Weymouth is a good program, a quality program. I think we gave Weymouth all they could handle."

Like they have so many times this season, the Skippers scored their share of goals, divided among a slew of players. Jamie Buick led Cohasset with a pair of goals, while Chris Adams, who became the Skippers' all-time scoring leader with 170 points (88 goals 82 assists), had a goal and assist. Ken Leahy put home one goal and an assist and Chris McKenna, Jon Lax, Brett MacQuarrie and Matt Belson all had single goals.

Netminder Eli Kahn played a strong game in goal, finishing with 17 saves. The darkest moment in the game came late in the third period when Ben Redfield had to be transported to the hospital by ambulance after sustaining a separated shoulder.

South Shore athletes bulk up at B.C. High

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The sound of clanging metal and music blaring from a portable stereo fill the air in Boston College High's haven for weight lifting, the "Eagles' Nest." During the course of the school year, the room has athletes coming and going in a steady flow, putting in their "in-season" workouts. Between 40-50 athletes will work out on the weights during the two- hour stretch from 4-6 p.m.

But the athletes, many of whom hail from the South Shore, don't approach their lifting haphazardly. They follow the guidance of Scituate's Steve Conroy, a biology teacher at the school, who also holds the position of strength and con-

Menis, Maitland set PB's at class meet

Faye Menis and Tammy Maitland didn't take home any medals in Saturday's EMass Class D Track Meet at Weston High, but both reached milestones in their own right.

Menis, who just missed breaking into the top six, leaped 15'11" good for a new personal best in the long jump. Menis took seventh overall. Maitland, who had been improving her 400 meter time over the course of the last four meets, shattered her personal best in the event. Maitland won her heat in 62.4, bettering her previous fastest time by a whopping 1.2 seconds.

"The last few meets she has taken a second off every time," said head coach Ron Emmons.

Menis will be taking her new personal best and talent in six other events to the State Heptathlon Championships, June 12-13 at Weston. Menis is no stranger to the grueling competition, having finished 10th in the state last spring.

Girls' softball is underway

The 1995 Cohasset girls' softball season has opened with flying colors! This week's teams in the limelight are Grandpa's Girls II and Johnny's Angels.

GRANDPA'S GIRLS 2 — FIRST SOFTBALL GAME OF THE SEASON

By Connie Afshar
Special to the Mariner

Grandpa's Girls 2 played their first softball game of the season last Thursday evening in front of Cohasset High School. Though they lost to Charlie's Angels with a final score of 12 to 17, a great time was had by all and the team played extremely well. All of the players got on base and some wonderful fielding and batting was displayed in this first game of the season.

Lauren Smith, Abby Murphy and Ary Afshar pitched a great game while Katie Wenmark and Amy Parisi-Butman showed true talent working home plate as catchers. Elizabeth Ingber kept her eye on the ball as short stop and made some excellent plays with third base person Brittany Carroll. Leslie Thornton and Kelly Stone each scored twice while teammates Melissa Bates, Katie Roth, Brooke Baker, Caitlin Welby and Katie Grimm exhibited excellent fielding and scoring themselves. Even fifth-grader Meredith Bates, whose foot is in a cast with a broken heel, hit her designated runners on base and scored a run for Grandpa's Girls II!

JOHNNY'S ANGELS ARE ABOVE ALL OTHERS

By Susan Carr
Special to the Mariner

Johnny's Angels' sponsors, Olivia Peters and Debby Roffo of Above all Others hair salon, are very proud of all their little "angels in the outfield" and infield! So far the team is off to a heavenly start.

At the plate those Angel balls are really soaring high, thanks to the hitting talents of "Bat on the Ball Byrne," "Lightning Bolt Lewis," "Meet the Ball Murray," "Line Drive McLaughlin," and "Out of the Park O'Brien."

Also, these Angels are far from winging it in the field! "Always Thinking Afshar" smartly covered third for a crucial out and "Dugout Devaney" made a great catch at third for another big out in the opening game against the Pink Panthers.

Balls hit to the infield had a hard time getting by "On the Ball O'Donnell" and "Never Out of Gas Carr." Both girls consistently scrambled to make the important plays when needed.

"Fearsome Pierson" and "Great Catch Grossman" brilliantly handled the many important plays at first throughout the opening week games against the Pink Panthers and the Purple People Beaters.

A special added blessing to the team has been the strong all-around talents both at the plate and in the field of the Angels' two shining stars, "Home-Run Caron" and "Peppy Peters!"

Also fans, keep an eye out for "Quick Sprint Flint" who up to now has been the important spirit of the team. She is coming off the bench and is ready to play ball!

Based upon opening week, the Angels are sure to dazzle throughout the season ahead.

title, I can already see the headline: "Hingham rocks and rolls to state lacrosse title."

*And finally, the Scituate High girls' track team completed a rare sweep at the Class D championships on Saturday as the Lady Sailors took first place in the javelin, discus and shot put. That gave them 30 of their winning 62 points.

Regen Steverman won the javelin, Laura McGlynn won the discus and Danielle Hickey won the shot put. All three athletes are considered strong candidates to win the overall state title this weekend.

Scituate is proof that track and field is more than just running around in circles.

It was good to see just how many athletes were smart enough to stay out of the sun during Saturday's Division 4 Class Meet at Weston High's track. Athletes could be found in makeshift tents and under the bleachers, in the shade relaxing until their race.

Why stay out of the sun on a gorgeous day? Track meets, no matter how well-run, are notorious for dragging on most of the day. The sun has a draining effect and can tire you out all the more if you don't stay hydrated. There's nothing worse than arriving for a meet at 9 a.m. and waiting around to race at 3 p.m. Stay in the shade. You're better off.

—Joe Reardon

You can talk about your Westports, Westwoods and Nortons all you want, but Hanover High baseball coach Fran Coyle believes Norwell will be a team to keep an eye on when the Division 3 South Sectional tourney gets underway this Friday afternoon.

Incidentally, with their sterling 16-4 record, the Indians will have the home-field advantage for at least the first game, giving the Hanover crowd the chance to see its favorite squad play without having to travel to some land-that-time-forgot school.

Did I mention the same holds true for the Cohasset High girls tennis team, a squad I regrettably overlooked while it proceeded to dismantle practically every club that got in its way. Sorry girls, good luck in the tourney.

Girls roar into soccer playoffs

By Brian McKenney
Special to the Mariner

A powerful, balanced offense combined with a heroic defense produced a league-leading 8-1 record for the Cohasset girls team in the Under-14 division of the MYSA Spring Soccer League. One regular season game remains, at Hingham, Saturday, June 3. The team must then survive the two rounds of single-elimination playoffs to qualify for the state championships at Fort Devens June 24.

Spectacular goaltending by Cohasset's Alex D'Urso and tenacious defending by sweeper fullback Alyssa MacNamara have frustrated opposing offenders throughout the season.

"Jessie Zerendow and Megan Wall have been outstanding at the wing fullback positions, and Maura Duffy has also excelled," said assistant coach Brett MacQuarie.

Cohasset's midfield play has been led by Caitlin O'Neil, Keri Dinsmore, Jennifer Chastain and Caitlin Donovan.

The team has dazzled opponents with the league's most balanced scoring attack. Leading goal-getter, Jacqueline Kahn has combined with the lightning-fast Katie Brister, the multi-talented Bree McKenney and the versatile Aryanna Afshar in the well-oiled offensive machine. Annie Palone has played superbly at three different positions.

Head coach Brian McKenney was emphatic in his praise of the depth of the squad. "Meghan Corry and Caitlin Stansell have hustled at midfield," McKenny said. "Caitlin Roth has developed as a defender, and Jennifer Meehan, Caitlin Welby and Amanda Denz-Collins have added to our defensive power."

Whatever the playoffs may hold Cohasset can be proud of its terrific team.

14-15-year-old senior Little League team dominating

Bob Moody
Special to the Mariner

The 14-15-year-old team has started the season with an impressive 8-0 mark. The league consists of teams from Rockland, Avon, Sharon and Canton. Cohasset has played these teams aggressively.

Leading the team with defensive ability and offensive power is Greg Taylor. Defensively, the gloves of Alex Shwerin, Matt Lewis and Eric Hanian have helped keep the infield errorless. The performance in the outfield has been as solid with Ben Ketchum, Kyle Bunstein and Martin St. John netting anything hit their way.

The pitching has been the key to Cohasset's success; led by the steady arms of Rob Moody, Lewis, Taylor, Ketchum and newcomer Rich Harrington, the opponents' bats have been inactive. Catcher Mike Rossi keeps these pitchers focused while protecting the plate.

Offensively, Taylor, with timely hitting and power to all fields, has helped start many rallies. The bats of Rossi, Ketchum, Moody, Harrington, Bunstein and Lewis have also been active.

Competing the roster with great offensive and defensive capabilities are J.P. Laugelle, Steve Baker and Justin Golden.

Cohasset should be very proud of these players. They are well-coached by Paul St. John, Bill Ketchum and Mark Shwerin. The team usually plays on the weekend and could use our support.

Diamond Girls are real gems

By John Smoot
Special to the Mariner

The Diamond Girls got off to a great start in the Cohasset girls' softball league. The Diamonds scored 19 runs over two games behind solid hitting by Jessica Niessink, Lindsey Gardner and Lydia Guild.

Guild also anchored the team with her outstanding catching performances. Sarah Motley and Beth Smoot demonstrated great poise with excellent pitching performances.

Julia "Stingray" Lovallo, K.C. Camacho, and Kendra "The Tiger" Topalian played aggressively on offense and defense. Camacho and Clara Sceery are playing for the first time and both have turned in impressive performances.

Maggie "Lightning" O'Connor's quick bat pounded a ball that almost ripped the glove off an opponent's hand.

Sarah Pease, Elizabeth DeJulio, and Emma Gardner play the game with enthusiasm and hustle. All three have the versatility to play infield or outfield.

Leighanne Walsh scored what turned out to be the winning run in the Diamond's victory last Thursday night.

The season looks promising for Cohasset's Diamond Girls.

Youth football signups

The final signup for the fall season of Scituate-Cohasset youth football and cheerleading will be held Saturday, June 3, from 9 a.m. to noon, at the entrance of the main gymnasium at Scituate High School.

There are still openings for football players, ages 8-9, for the Mites team and for players, ages 12-13, for the Midgets. Players, ages 10-11, will be placed on a waiting list for the Pee Wees.

There are still openings in all age groups for the cheerleading squads.

The registration fee is $75 for football and $50 for cheerleaders. The fee covers the cost of the use of uniforms and equipment and a season-ending trophy party. Discounts are available for families with more than one child in the programs.

First-time players are required to produce a birth certificate prior to the first practice session in August.

The first game will be held Sept. 9 under the lights at the Scituate High School stadium. The program is part of the Old Colony Youth Football League. Other games will be played against Silver Lake, Marshfield, East Bridgewater, Duxbury, Barnstable, Rockland and Hingham.

Parents of players and cheerleaders are welcome to volunteer as timekeepers, galley workers, equipment managers and assistant coaches.

For more information, call Joe Hughes at 834-6504 or Warren Talbot at 545-3906.

Conditioning camps set for June

For those South Shore athletes looking to improve their overall strength and conditioning, they need go no further than Scituate resident Mark Conroy.

A former captain of the Sailors' football team and the strength and conditioning coach at Boston College High School for the past seven years, Conroy will be directing two camps in June at B.C. High's facility with the intention of "attracting and energizing as many South Shore public school athletes as possible."

Along with Conroy, the camp will be headed by a professional staff, including John Parker, the New England Patriots' strength coach; Mike Boyle — Boston University and Bruins' strength coach and Jon Josh, the strengh coach at Holy Cross.

The camps will be held from 5-9 p.m. on June 12-16 and June 26-30. For more information on the camps, call 617-436-3900 (Ext. 73 or 77) or 617-545-3176.

Rangers continue winning ways

By Bob Moody
Special to the Mariner

The major league Rangers have stretched their record to 12-0. Led by veterans Doug O'Brien, Eric Shea, Will Moody, Chris Caron and Mickey Palone, the Rangers have become a dominant force.

The latest win came at the hands of the Dodgers. The Rangers played steady baseball and defeated the Dodgers 19-6. Caron pitched three strong innings for the Rangers. Reliever Jeremy Tedeschi finished the game to help preserve the win. Hitting by Greg O'Connell, Eric Libby and Craig Davis delivered the offense necessary to win.

Rookies Brendan Goff, Ivan Pestone and Matt O'Grodnick have developed into solid players and helped in the Rangers' success.

South Shore athletes bulk up at B.C. High...

ditioning coach.

Through his training programs, which are altered slightly depending on the sport, many athletes have improved their performances and swear by his his methods. Conroy believes in doing lifts that help prevent injury and improve performance at the same time.

"I started at the end of last season as a freshman," said Cohasset's Matt Rossi who played on the football team at running back and defensive end as a sophomore. "I can't emphasize enough how much it improves your game."

Rossi had injured both his shoulders as a freshman before he began working out. He was preparing to play lacrosse in the spring and spent the winter strengthening his shoulders for the upcoming season.

"I basically lost the strength in both shoulders," Rossi said. "I got back the strength and gained more strength. In football you have to be strong. Lacrosse is more of a finesse game."

Rossi said Conroy's program did the job in helping him get back to 100 percent and has been a mainstay in the weight room ever since. He has complete faith in Conroy and has heard of his reputation as a knowledgeable coach in the conditioning field.

"He's a tremendous help," Rossi said. "I've talked to guys who go on to play football in college and they tell me it's in my best interest to listen to Mr. Conroy. He teaches the right things."

B.C. High athletes won't be the only ones lucky enough to benefit from Conroy's system. He will be holding Peak Performance Strength and Conditioning Camps two weeks in June. The first session runs from June 12-16 and the second takes place June 26-30. They will be held Monday-Friday from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m., The camp will cover strength, speed development, explosive-power, endurance conditioning, flexibility and optimum nutrition.

Conroy has put together an impressive staff, including Johnny Parker, the New England Patriots' strength and training coach, Boston University and Boston Bruins' coach Mike Boyle and the strength and conditioning coach at Holy Cross, John Jost.

The camp is specifically geared for high school athletes, ages 13-18, that participate in football, soccer, basketball, hockey, volleyball, lacrosse, track & field, wrestling and baseball.

Cohasset's Andy Wolan, a B.C. High student, works out in the "Eagle's Nest," the name given to the school's weight room.

Conroy's lifting program is made up of two categories. The core lifts include squats, cleans (power and hang) push press, push jerk, hip or trap bar and bench. Save for the bench press, all the lifts have one thing in common.

"They involve moving weight from a standing position on the ground," Conroy said last Friday, as 20 or so athletes were busy working out in groups of two and three. "The core lifts produce quickness and explosiveness."

The second category, auxiliary lifts, include biceps, curls and step-ups, which are done to improve stride frequency. These lifts are done to isolate and develop certain muscles the athletes need to excel in their particular sport.

Conroy makes himself available to all the coaches, no matter what the team, to work out an offseason program for their athletes if they so desire. However, he credits the dedication of the athletes themselves who follow the schedule by the letter.

"It's the athletes who really take the initiative and come in on a regular basis," Conroy said. "Given the long commutes for some students and their academic demands, I think it's a tremendous commitment these athletes make."

Conroy singled out two athletes in particular, Hanover wrestler Scott Wuori and Scituate football player Sean Cooney. "They do it on the field of play and on the mats," he said.

A junior, Wuori is only 5-foot-4 and 112 pounds, but Conroy said not to let his size fool you. "Pound for pound he's probably one of the strongest guys in here," he said.

Wuori has accomplished quite a bit on the mats, including second-place finishes in both the Division 1 South Sectionals and All-State meet. Wuori also won his weight class at the Whitman-Hanson Invitational Tourney and the Framingham Holiday Tournament. Voted the MVP of B.C. High's wrestling squad, Wuori was also named to the Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic team.

Conroy is more concerned with Wuori doing too much in the weight room than too little. He lifts after practice during the season and spends even more time working out in the offseason.

As a wrestler, Wuori has found the added strength and speed he has developed gives him an advantage when attempting a move on a competitor. "The strength you get from lifting helps you finish moves," he said.

Wuori finds it easier follow a thought-out schedule when he lifts, rather than going through sets of lifts without an overall goal in mind.

Cooney, who like Wuori was also a Ledger All-Scholastic, had a successful fall on the football field. He was picked to represent B.C. High on the Catholic Conference All-Star team and was named to the Ledger's All-Scholastic squad as well.

The 18-year-old, who will attend Trinity College this autumn, lifts up to four days per week during the season and ups the number to five through the offseason months.

"The lifting helps every part of the game," Cooney said. "It really makes a difference. It gives you that explosion when you hit somebody. It's that little bit extra."

The key to wrestling for Cooney is being able to gather momentum by powering off with his legs. He does more repetitions for endurance during the wrestling season when he drops from his football weight of 180 pounds to his 152-pound competitive weight during the wrestling campaign.

Although the majority of athletes who utilize the weight room on a regular basis are football players, there is a smattering of players from other sports who can be found doing their weight training in the afternoon.

Chris Condon, a junior from Abington, plays soccer and track. His times dropped drastically during the spring season and he has the work he put in in the weight room to thank for it.

"All my times improved throughout the season," Condon said. "I didn't get as tired as I did at the beginning of the season."

A look at Condon's times and performances in the 200 meter and 400 meter dashes and the triple jump, show he did indeed get stronger as the season progressed. Condon went from a triple-jump best of 34' to 37' and dropped 1-1/2 seconds (27 to 25.5) in the 200 meters. The full second improvement he made in the 400 meters made it a clean sweep season of personal records for Condon in every one of his events. He hopes to drop his times even further next year. He already said he'll be following Conroy's strength and conditioning workouts over the summer.

"There is a large group of South Shore athletes at B.C. High who are spending a good deal of time in the weight room," Conroy said.

"The Eagles' Nest" is rarely void of the school's biggest birds.

LACROSSE SKILL DEVELOPMENT CLINICS FOR GRADES 4, 5, AND 6

The Cohasset recreation department will accept telephone registrations at their office, at 383-6791, for an evening lacrosse skill development program, designed for youngsters who will enter grades 4, 5 and 6 in Sept., 1995.

Lacrosse clinics are designed to teach fundamental skills and concepts of lacrosse and will meet Tuesday and Thursday evenings, 6:30 to 8 p.m., at Osgood School Field, beginning Tuesday, June 13, through Thursday, June 29.

This specialized developmental program will be instructed by local college and high school lacrosse players and the fee will be $26 per person for the six sessions. Participants will need a helmet and lacrosse stick to enroll. Other equipment will be unnecessary as no contact scrimmages will be held.

APPLICATIONS FOR SOUTH SHORE SOCCER CAMP — 1995

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8-18. This is South Shore Soccer Camp's fifth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering for South Shore Soccer Camp, it is suggested that you write to the Cohasset Recreation Department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791 in the near future, to be assured enrollment.

South Shore Soccer Camp will be offered to both girls and boys during the weeks of Monday to Friday, July 31 to Aug. 4, and Aug. 7 to Aug. 11. Should a camper wish to attend both camp weeks, this will now be possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camp weeks must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Mondays to Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The cost for camp is $165 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available. South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players from the New England area.

VIP SOCCER CAMP REGISTRATIONS

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp, for children ages 4 to 7 years.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, ages 4 to 7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for 4- and 5-year-olds and meets 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday to Friday, July 17 to 21. The cost is $40 for the week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour per day program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday to Friday, July 17 to 21, for 6- and 7-year-olds. The cost is $70 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the front field of Cohasset High School.

BASEBALL CAMP

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages 5 to 12 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset town hall.

The South Shore Baseball Club has been contracted again this year to provide baseball camp, which will be held the week of Monday, June 26, at Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., camp for ages 7 and over and a half day, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5- and 6-year-olds.

The week long camp costs $120 per child for the full-day program, and $70 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Friday, June 30.

The South Shore Baseball Club, located at the South Shore Sports Center, Hingham, operates year round baseball instruction and has baseball camp for Cohasset Recreation for five years.

Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for baseball camp on a space available basis and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor of Cohasset town hall.

The South Shore Track Club begins

Once again the South Shore Track Club will begin this spring introducing to youngsters, ages 6-18, the basic training skills of track and field.

Chuck Martin, Norwell High School's cross country and track coach, plans to continue his youth program as both new and previous members are invited to register at the Norwell High School outdoor track facility.

Hoping to expand on its 65 members last season, the S.S.T.C. will hold practices every Monday and Wednesday from 6 to 7:30 p.m. through August 2.

Along with the weekly practices, which are not mandatory, youngsters will be able to compete in local track meets both in Norwell and at other track facilities.

With an atmosphere designed for the ages of the kids involved, the South Shore Track Club is a great way to discover fresh new talent and to simply have some summer fun. For more information, please call Chuck Martin at (617) 391-0458.

Aqua-Dux swim team

Come join the fun! The Aqua-Dux swim team will be participating in a summer recreational league, and will be competing against other South Shore swim teams. The summer session begins Monday, June 26, at the Percy Walker pool in Duxbury and runs through Aug. 12.

Practice times are Monday through Thursday, 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. Swim meets are every Friday at noon. Registration for all interested swimmers, ages six to 18, will be Tuesday, June 13, and Thursday, June 15, from 4 to 6 p.m., at the Percy Walker pool in Duxbury.

Registration may be made in advance by calling Nancy Krause at 617-834-6398.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray leads the Little League opening day parade in a police cruiser. Murray, a popular supporter of the Little League program in Cohasset, threw out the first pitch to kick off the season.

SECOND MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Second Mortgage given by James Hegarty, a/k/a James K. Hegarty, Trustee of Tessahoc Realty Trust under declaration of trust dated December 30, 1991 and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 9185, Page 25 to Peter Grahame Wade (the "Mortgagee") dated July, 1993, and recorded with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 10017, Page 115, of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing, the same will be sold at Public Auction at 2:00 P.M., June 20, 1995, on the mortgaged premises described below, being known as 103 South Main Street, Cohasset, Massachusetts and all singular premises described in said mortgage,

To wit: The land in Cohasset, being the premises shown as Lot B on a plan entitled "Plan of Land, Cohasset, Mass.", dated August 21, 1943, drawn by Joseph Selwyn, C.E. recorded in Norfolk Registry of Deeds at Book 2470, Page 426, said lot being bounded and described as follows:

NORTHEASTERLY by South Main Street, 50.33 feet;

EASTERLY by a curve forming the intersection of South Main Street and Spring Street, 20.15 feet;

SOUTHEASTERLY by Spring Street, 65.76 feet;

SOUTHERLY by land marked "Benjamin F. and Christine M. Curley" and as indicated on said plan 112.36 feet;

WESTERLY by said land marked "Benjamin F. and Christine M. Curley" and in part by land marked "Katherine B. Noonan" as indicated on said plan, 51.16 feet, and

NORTHWESTERLY by Lot A as indicated on said plan, 141.56 feet.

Containing 12,299 square feet of land according to said plan. Together with a right of way to pass and repass to and from South Main Street which right of way is more particularly described in Certificate of Title No. 54545 registered with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds at Book 273, Page 145. The property is currently owned by Richard A. Bunstein by deed dated March 29, 1995 and recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Book 10854, Page 308.

The Mortgagee reserves the right to postpone the sale to a later date by public proclamation at the time and the date appointed for the sale and to further postpone the sale to later date at any adjourned sale date by public proclamation at the time and the date appointed for the adjourned sale date.

Said premises will be sold subject to and with the benefit of all restrictions, easements, improvements, variances, special permits, outstanding tax titles, mortgages, UCC financing statements, liens, rights of tenants and parties in possession, unpaid taxes, unpaid water and sewer bills, municipal liens and other public taxes, assessments or liens, having priority over the mortgage described herein, if any, including, without limitation, a tax taking by the Town of Cohasset recorded in Book 8889, Page 313; Land Court Tax Lien Case No. 101869T.L.; and Notice of Lis Pendens recorded in Book 10716, Page 124. This is a Second Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate sold subject to the lien of a first mortgage currently held by Pauline V. Emilson, by assignment dated May 6, 1992 and recorded in Book 9343, Page 309.

In the event that the successful bidder at the foreclosure sale shall default in purchasing the within described property according to the terms of this notice of sale and/or the terms of the memorandum of sale executed at the time of the foreclosure, the Mortgagee reserves the right to sell the property by Foreclosure Deed to the second highest bidder provided that the second highest bidder shall deposit with the Mortgagee's attorneys, Palmer & Dodge, the amount of the required deposit set forth herein within three (3) business days after written notice of default of the previous highest bidder and title shall be conveyed to said second highest bidder within twenty (20) days of said written notice.

Terms of sale: TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS ($10,000.00) will be required to be paid in cash or by certified check at the time and place of sale as earnest money. The balance is to be paid in cash or by certified check within twenty (20) days of the date of the sale and shall be deposited in escrow with the firm of Palmer & Dodge at One Beacon Street, Boston, MA, pending recording of the Foreclosure Deed and related documents.

Other terms, if any, to be announced at the sale.

PETER GRAHAME WADE
present holder of said mortgage,

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
NORFOLK DIVISION
DOCKET NO. 95P1059A1

Estate of FREDERICK T. DOLAN late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that A. PATRICK MCCARTHY of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed administrator of said estate with surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before ten o'clock in the forenoon on June 14, 1995.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16A.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, this third day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and ninety-five.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

A curved, brick pathway leads to the soft, Colonial-red front door on the grey-brown, weathered, clapboard-covered Cape belonging to Laurie and James Hamilton at 298 King Street. An onion-shaped handmade basket is displayed on the front door holding bright yellow spring flowers. To the left side of the house is a low stone wall with a bed of daffodils and grape hyacinth. The opposite side of the yard is home to a wonderful stone well with shingled roof supporting a climbing variegated Euonymus.

Vol. XVII, No. 32 | Thursday, June 8, 1995 | 1-800-649-6661 | 75 cents

Upset with selectmen, harbormaster to quit July 1

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

With less than two years on the job, Cohasset Harbormaster Shawn Kelly says he's had enough and will resign.

The Braintree resident served as assistant harbormaster in Scituate for five years before being hired in Cohasset to replace former harbormaster Irving Gadow.

In a telephone interview, Kelly said he will step down July 1 and hopes to return to work in Scituate.

Kelly, whose days off are Tuesday and Wednesday, said selectmen will have his letter of resignation today (Thursday, June 8).

He cited selectmen's lack of support for and "micro-management" of his position as his reason for resigning.

Last week, selectmen were upset that Kelly was tying up his patrol boat at night at a private dock owned by Paul Trendowicz at the end of Parker Avenue and

9-1-1 service expected to start this week

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

Telephone and local public safety officials are expected to announce tomorrow that 911 emergency telephone service is now in effect.

An official announcement is scheduled for 10 a.m. Friday at Scituate Town Hall for activation of the service in Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, and Scituate.

On Tuesday, Blair Sutherland, deputy director of the Statewide Emergency Telecommunications Board (SETB), confirmed that, after a week of testing, the change-over was to take place June 7.

Conservation agreement reduces Staszko fine

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Under an agreement worked out with town counsel Richard Henderson, developer Donald Staszko has agreed to pay a reduced fine in return for not fighting the issue in court.

Conservation commission chairman Roseanne McMorris announced Tuesday night that Staszko will pay $5,000 for violating the commission's orders during the construction of a new septic system and wetlands replication at the Stop & Shop on Rte. 3A.

Under the terms of the agreement, Staszko will pay $2,500 when he signs the document and another $2,500 within 30 days.

On May 2 the commission socked Staszko with a $7,500 fine for various violations, which included obliteration of the wetlands buffer zone at the site.

During that meeting, Staszko said he did not realize that the work undertaken was outside the scope of what had been permitted and said that the violations

CHS Class of '95 is history

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner staff

The 65-members of Cohasset High's graduating class received their diplomas Sunday at the annual commencement exercises.

Held at the South Shore Music Circus on a picture-perfect day, this year's graduation ceremony held with the traditional program of featuring the students themselves, with no outside speakers.

Following Nicole Vasseur's a cappella rendition of the "Star Spangled Banner," Class of 1995 president Ryan Freeman recounted the adventures, misadventures, and activities of his classmates that highlighted their four years at Cohasset High.

He thanked the parents, "who put up with us all these years," and extended best wishes and good luck to Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher who will be leaving Cohasset to take on new duties as assistant superintendent in Hanover, New Hampshire.

On a bittersweet note, Freeman remarked that this was the last time the class will be together, and punctuated his remarks with "I love you" to his class-

Cohasset's week

Ledgewood still is topic

The conservation commission this week continued its hearing on a proposed extension of the Ledgewood Drive subdivision to Wednesday, July 5 at 8 p.m.

The commission is reviewing drainage and other issues which could affect wetlands.

In the meantime some board members are expected to visit the site.

ConCom consultant praised

During a detailed discussion of how to organize files and keep paperwork to a minimum, the conservation commission gave high praise to its consultant, Paul Shea.

"The best thing the town ever did was let us hire him," said commission chairman Roseanne McMorris.

After Shea received a round of applause, commissioner Jeffrey Waal said to general laughter, "You get either an applause or a raise."

Mosquitoes back in force

The mosquitoes have arrived. Recent spring rains have made conditions ideal for mosquito breeding. Residents can take action now which will help reduce these annoying pests from hatching and help reduce the need for chemical pesticide spraying of the adult population.

Mosquitoes breed in still water and killing the larvae is the safest and most effective method of controlling the adult population. Homeowners should search for and eliminate areas of standing water on their property. These areas could be wheelbarrows, wading pools, old tires or clogged gutters. If you remove the water, mosquitoes cannot breed and that means fewer mosquitoes hatch in your yard and your neighborhood. If you have large areas of standing water on your property, try to restore movement and if this is not possible treat with Mosquitos Dunks available from local hardware stores and garden centers. One Dunk will treat 100 square feet of water for a period of 30 days. These dunks will kill the mosquito larvae without impacting pets, wildlife or the surrounding environment, acccording to the mosquito control committee.

If you need further advice or assistance regarding mosquito control, please call the Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee at the Board of Health, 383-9900 ext. 120. Additional information about mosquito control and the safe use of insect repellents is available in the lobby of Town Hall directly across from the Recreation Department.

Air quality to be tested

The board of health Tuesday night signed an agreement with Environmental Health & Engineering, Inc. to study the air quality at town hall.

The $750 contract includes an inspection of the building and discussion with employees on the exact nature of the problem.

Air quality samples will likely be taken after the initial survey.

Health agent Dr. Joseph Godzik said the survey is "a more reasonable approach" than taking air samples immediately.

The testing has been done in response to charges by employees that the air quality and poor ventilation in the building is causing illness.

Health board member Robert Davenport said the testing company should be told that when air samples were taken several years ago, plastic covered the windows because the building was being painted at the time.

The money will come from funds already slated to pay for laboratory testing fees.

Godzik said that although the money had been earmarked to test water in tributaries leading into Lilly Pond. He said that because it has been an unusually dry year, the testing may be postponed. The money however, must be used by June 30.

If they do decide to test the water samples, there will be enough money, he said.

9-1-1 help for selectmen?

It appears to be taken for granted at town hall that selectmen's meetings have become the liveliest and most contentious of all boards.

While he was sitting in on a conservation commission meeting this week, selectman chairman Merle Brown remarked that the town is getting enhanced 911 service.

"Is that for the town or for your meetings?" quipped conservation commissioner Thomas Callahan.

Brown laughed.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE
ASK NOW — SAVE REGRET
QUESTION: I am very shy. If I ask too many questions when I view a home, won't the Realtor think I am just being nosey?
ANSWER: Never be ashamed to ask! I could not think of a worse time to discover unpleasant surprises than AFTER the deed has been signed, sealed and delivered. There is no need to be unpleasantly surprised. How do you avoid this frustration? Have a ready checklist of items to ask your REALTOR - especially on items the eye cannot see.
We LIKE our buyers to ask us questions. If we don't have all the answers, we'll get them! These are facts you should know BEFORE you sign the contract. Not after!

We're not surprised that the big Boston banks are showing interest in the South Shore.
Recently, it seems, those big Boston banks have discovered something we've known since 1834.
South Shore people are wonderful people.
So the big Boston banks have been infesting the South Shore in a feeding frenzy. And after devouring local banks, they end up offering customers higher fees and impersonal service.
HINGHAM INSTITUTION FOR SAVINGS
ESTABLISHED 1834
Maybe that's why more and more people are opening accounts at the Hingham Institution for Savings. We're one of the South Shore's oldest banks and we know what South Shore people want in banking services. And how they want to be treated.

9-1-1 service expected to start this week

While the actual change-over was slated to occur Wednesday, the announced operational date was delayed to Friday, to be sure the system is working without problems after its activation. Sutherland said both the SETB and NYNEX are now confident there are no remaining problems. But the emergency service is becoming operational a month later than originally planned.

Sutherland said problems arose last month with the "fail-safe" switching route, that allows an emergency call to be connected to a NYNEX operator if emergency personnel are unable to answer. The fail-safe component of the emergency telephone service is necessary to ensure all emergency calls are answered. This problem has now been corrected, Sutherland said.

He explained that each town has a first alternate responder, in the event the primary responder receives several emergency calls simultaneously, or if telephone service is disrupted, for example, by a storm. In these cases, a NYNEX operator will act as back-up for the first alternates.

Sutherland said Hull police will act as the alternate for Hingham, in the event Hingham dispatchers are unable to take an emergency call. Cohasset dispatchers will back-up emergency calls from Scituate and Hull. Cohasset's alternate responder is Scituate. In all cases, NYNEX will answer an emergency call if the first alternate is unable to do so.

Last month, selectmen in Hingham suggested using the State Police as a back-up, rather than NYNEX, reasoning that the State Police would be in radio contact with the towns' police departments. However, Sutherland said, the system was unable to connect a call to any second alternate. He said the SETB is still discussing this possibility with the State Police, and at some time in the future, it could become the second alternate. Significant telecommunications changes would be required before this could occur, Sutherland added.

According to Hingham dispatcher Joan Sullivan, all dispatchers have been instructed to answer 911 calls, "911. This line is being recorded. What is your emergency?" Callers will not know if their calls are being answered in their communities or by another town acting as back-up. In this way, no one will become confused, she explained. Sullivan added that each town will know the location from which the call originates, and will be able to direct emergency services to the proper location.

All police departments will continue to have regular telephone numbers which the public should use for general, non-emergency, calls, she said. Emergency calls may still be made to the regular telephone number, but the public should begin to use 911 for emergencies.

With 911 emergency service, callers will be able to contact their police, fire, and emergency medical services by dialing only these three numbers, which will speed up emergency response, as well as make it easier for children to summon help. The 911 service also creates a universal emergency services telephone number, which ultimately will be available throughout the country.

New equipment at the towns' dispatch centers will display the name and address of the caller. In some cases, a caller requesting emergency aid has neglected to give police or firefighters the address where help is needed, with potentially tragic consequences. The equipment is also compatible with tele-typewriters used by hearing- or speech-impaired persons.

In preparation for the 911 system, the four towns have purchased new communications equipment with dispatch services centralized at their police stations, and civilian dispatchers have been hired and trained in all facets of emergency response.

Harbormaster to quit July 1. . .

insisted that he use the town dock at Government Island.

Kelly, who said his boat was tied at the dock (which was under a different owner until it was sold to Trendowicz recently) all last year, said this was the final straw.

The town was not charged for the private mooring.

"They better never accept another gratuity with anybody," Kelly said.

He explained that he kept the boat at the private dock for security reasons. By leaving the boat all night at Government Island, the boat was becoming "an open dumpster" filled with coffee cups and beer cans in the morning, Kelly said.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown denied that his board was trying to run the harbor. Selectmen asked Kelly to move his boat off the private marina because of numerous complaints from citizens about the practice. Brown said to prevent vandalism, they asked Kelly to keep the boat on a mooring.

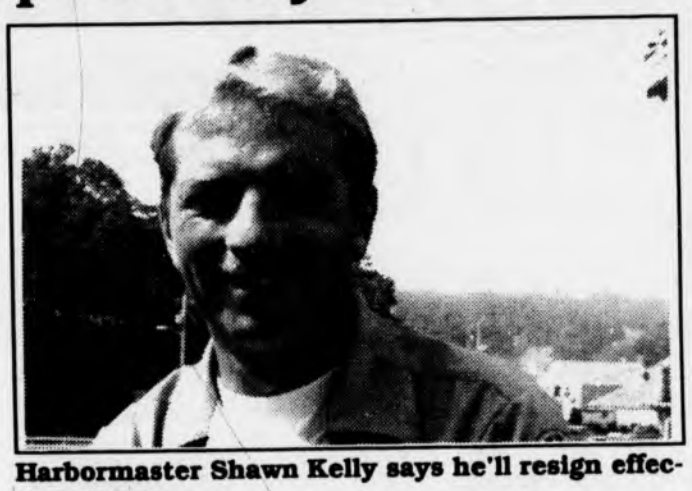
"But he didn't want to row out to the boat," Brown said.

There was also disagreement on how the boat should be handled in the winter months.

"Over the winter they (selectmen) wanted the boat in year round," Kelly said. "You don't ask firefighters to ride around in a convertible fire truck.

"You can't ask a harbormaster to get into an ice-ridden boat," he said.

Kelly explained that in the winter he would take the boat out of the garage in a heartbeat to go on a rescue.



Harbormaster Shawn Kelly says he'll resign effective July 1.

Brown said selectmen didn't require Kelly to keep the boat in the water in the winter and explained the request to do so came from the commercial fishermen, who felt it was a safety issue.

"We went along with him (Kelly) on that one," Brown said.

Brown said he was upset that Kelly will only give two weeks notice.

"This is the busiest time of the year," Brown said.

Kelly said it's time for him to move on.

"I tried and it didn't work out," Kelly said about his post in Cohasset. "I'm not happy here."

Coxe: more questions need answers in final rail study

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

The MBTA's draft environmental impact report crossed one hurdle when it crossed State Environmental Secretary Trudy Coxe's desk last Thursday. But the certificate on the Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation project in the Greenbush corridor, makes it clear that much more work needs to be done before the final draft is drawn up.

"We've reviewed all the comments from the opponents and proponents and have reviewed the MBTA's work and we believe they did an adequate job," she said.

"There are still questions that have to be answered which is not surprising to anyone, including the MBTA, because this is a draft," Coxe added.

In the final report, issues like noise and safety impacts along with a more complete analysis of other transportation alternatives will have to be addressed, she said, noting that at that point there will be a better sense of which direction the MBTA will go.

"This process gives the applicants (the MBTA) a clear picture about the key issues they need to pay a lot of attention to," she added.

Coxe pointed out that the certificate is not an "approval" of the project or endorsement of an alternative and stressed that it is not within her authority to do either. And while additional information must be developed, Coxe said the report provides much of the information required by the regulations, complies with the Massachusetts Environmental Policy Act (MEPA) ,and as such is found to be adequate.

The next step is in the hands of the MBTA's board of directors who will vote this summer whether or not to proceed with the $215 million project to restore rail service to the Old Colony Greenbush Line. A final EIR could be completed by the end of the year, said MBTA Environmental Manager Andrew Brennan, and that report would again have to be reviewed by Coxe.

The Federal Transit Administration will have the final say on the project.

"There will be future public comment periods on this. When, I don't know. It's in the hands of the MBTA now to choose and alternative and study carefully the impacts," Coxe said.

Train proponents like Polly Logan, a member of the Cohasset Committee for Commuter Rail, said she was pleased and encouraged by the green light to proceed given by the secretary.

"I'm very encouraged," she said, adding "I want people to become involved in the problems in their community and in their government. That's extremely healthy in this issue and other issues in the future."

Logan commended those on both sides of the train issue who took the time to write letters to-the-editor and to the state.

Logan is also pleased that transportation on the South Shore has become such an important issue, "regardless of what improvements are made, whether its a train, boats, buses or bicycles."

Still, Logan said she believes the train will return.

"It's essential to the growth of the South Shore. I think the train will come and should have come a long time ago," she said.

Opponents of the rail had a different interpretation of Coxe's certificate.

Nancy Buckley, founder of the anti-rail Coastal Coalition, commended Coxe and the certificate she signed.

"I thought she did an outstanding job of identifying the flaws in the study, which totally concurs with the Coastal Coalition's view that the study is flawed in its analysis of alternatives to the train," said Buckley.

Buckley said she is pleased that the MBTA board of directors will vote on a transportation alternative this month and added that she is confident that the board will decide not to build a train and opt for a intermodal system of buses and boats instead.

Carbone Lane approval likely despite delays

While it is a virtual certainty that it will approve the project in the end, the conservation commission is insisting that developer Lillian Carbone Sestito follow the letter of the law on the Carbone Lane subdivision.

Located near the Scituate line, Carbone Lane is a five-lot subdivision featuring expensive Colonial style homes. The developer is offering buyers one of several styles to chose from, at prices ranging roughly from $350,000 to $450,000.

Only one house has been built and sold, the remaining four lots have yet to be approved.

However, it was not the individual lots, but rather the roadwork, drainage and other site preparation that were the subject of an often tense discussion during the Tuesday night conservation commission hearing.

The project received permission to proceed in 1990, but work was not begun until 1993, after the permit had expired.

Commissioners have been angry that work was done without permission.

Board member Thomas Callahan said that it is incumbent upon the developer and his engineers to know the law. He stated that even though the project was initially approved in 1990, it now must follow more stringent new laws governing drainage and wetlands protection.

In particular, a drainage pond to hold runoff from the development will have to be rebuilt. Now constructed of stone, the new rules mandate that the pond be lined with plants instead.

Callahan told Sestito and her engineer that the plants should be chosen for their ability to remove nutrients from the water, which will eventually seep into wetlands. He said the plants do not need to provide wildlife habitat value since the site is adjacent to a woodland, which already provides habitat.

When Sestito objected to having to redo work that has already been completed, Callahan sternly stated that all work must be accomplished according to regulations and said that the project was undertaken without consulting the conservation commission.

Sestito strongly objected to any suggestion that the work was done intentionally without permission. She said they thought they had the right to proceed.

The hearing was continued until June 20 at 9:30 p.m.

Callahan had wanted it continued until July, but Sestito wanted to get the issue settled as quickly as possible.

Commissioner Veneta Roebuck agreed, saying that there was no need for further delay.

State rules: Gjesteby right to release 'secret' document

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

The now-famous letter proposing to settle the Cohasset Heights Landfill lawsuit against the town was a public document, the secretary of state's office said in a June 6 letter to town counsel Richard Henderson.

Therefore, selectman Martha Gjesteby acted properly when she released a letter marked "confidential."

In a five-page letter, Mary E. Schwind, supervisor of public records for secretary of state William Galvin, told Henderson that the letter in question, which proposed a settlement of the landfill's lawsuit against the town, was public and should have been released upon request.

"There is a presumption that all governmental records are public records," Schwind said.

When Cohasset heights landfill lawyer Anton Moehrke sent the letter to special counsel Michael Leon, it became a public document, regardless of whether or not it was stamped "confidential."

"... it was placed in the public arena when forward to a municipal employee. Accordingly, the requested record is a public record and should be made available ..." Schwind stated.

She also said it is illegal to agree to keep a document secret, which appears to have happened twice in this case.

"Please be advised that an agreement to withhold public information directly conflicts with the provisions of the Public Records Law and cannot exist in harmony with such," Schwind wrote to Henderson. "The document was forwarded to a municipal employee in his capacity as special town counsel. Neither a public employee, nor a governmental agency may shield a document from the mandatory provisions of the public records law by marking it confidential or by entering into an agreement to keep its terms confidential."

First, the three attorneys involved — Anton Moehrke, representing Cohasset Landfill who wrote the letter; Michael Leon representing the town and Richard Henderson, town counsel — agreed among themselves that the letter should remain secret.

When selectmen finally received the letter five days later, they also agreed to withhold it.

When Gjesteby released it, neither the board of health, nor the conservation commission had apparently received the letter, even though both are intimately involved with the landfill situation.

Although she conceded that certain exemptions do allow for the suppression of documents, Schwind determined that the letter in question did not meet them.

As for Henderson's argument that the letter discussed a lawsuit and should remain private, Schwind said that only "executive session minutes may be withheld from disclosure . . .the court did not interpret 'records" to include documents considered within an executive session. The requested document is clearly not part of the minutes; therefore it cannot be withheld pursuant to the Open Meeting Law."

The law also exempts some documents between board members or between members of various boards which may help in their policy making decisions.

Schwind found that since the letter came from an outside lawyer, Moehrke, and was sent to special town counsel, it does not meet that criterion.

"Correspondence between opposing sides to litigation cannot be characterized as either inter or intra-agency communication," the official said.

After the other selectmen exploded after they discovered that Gjesteby had given the letter to Kevin O'Donnell of SAFE, a citizen's group opposed to the expansion of the landfill.

At a stormy May 22 selectmen's meeting, Gjesteby said she thought the document should be public.

Selectman Jane Goedecke, on the other hand, was quoted as saying the action constituted "a breach of ethics."

After a discussion of censuring Gjesteby, the board voted four to one — with Peter Pratt voting no — to ask Henderson what disciplinary measures could be taken against Gjesteby.

Pratt was later quoted as saying that he had wanted a ruling on the privacy of the document.

At their May 8 meeting, selectmen also argued the release of documents.

The other selectmen, in particular Michael Sullivan, criticized Pratt for seeking a ruling on the subject from the state without consulting the other board members.

Pratt said he wanted a ruling on whether town counsel has a responsibility to disclose documents to selectmen and whether those are public.

Goedecke has said that the letter's release is an effort to prevent a settlement with the landfill.

She charged that the town's efforts to settle the legal issues surrounding Cohasset Heights have been "thoroughly stymied by less than five people in this town. I will not be tyrannized. This is the last straw," she was quoted as saying in the May 25 Mariner.

Staszko fine. ..

ceased when they were brought to his attention.

Consulting engineer Paul Shea told the commission that during a visit to the site he discovered that there was no botanist on hand to supervise the capture and relocation of animals, primarily frogs and turtles, who are being taken from the wetlands in the center of the site to the area in the rear.

Staszko agreed to let Shea supervise the movement of the animals, which is now complete. The developer pays the consultant's fees in such cases.

For the next phase of the project, grasses and shrubs will be planted in the new wetlands area. Shea explained that some of the plants were saved from the old wetlands, while others will be new.

Staszko was not on hand at the meeting to sign the agreement as scheduled.

Staszko is trustee of Cohasset Development Trust, owner of the plaza, which includes Stop & Shop and several smaller stores.

In the past, Staszko has said that he wants to locate a major clothing store at the site.

Water restrictions

Effective May 1, all Cohasset water department customers are asked to follow an odd/even watering schedule. Those living in even-numbered houses are able to water on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Residents in odd-numbered houses may water on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday. There will be no watering on Mondays.

Summer water restrictions still remain in effect because all distribution improvements have not been completed, water department officials said.

Recycling money

The town has earned $4,130 from the sale of recycled materials for the month of April, the health board announced this week. The money will be deposited in the general fund.

Sunday, May 21, Jennifer M. Plante of 798 Jerusalem Rd., Cohasset, received a Bachelor of Arts degree in English and Drama from Tufts University. Jennifer is a dean's list student who presented, as part of her senior project, a work-in-progress play "The Strange Wake of Antonio Tsol" at the Arena Theater at Tufts. She has also been accepted in the Master's Program at Columbia University School of the Arts in New York. She plans to attend the Oscar Hammerstein II Center for Theatre Studies in the fall. She is one of 15 nationwide to be accepted into this program, something that everyone is extremely proud of!

We also salute Cilla Goff, who earned herself a spot on the dean's list at Boston College through all of her efforts. Good going Cilla!

William J. Flaherty of 93 Linden Dr. was honored by Boston University recently, there was a 25th Recognition Dinner held in his honor! Mr. Flaherty is presently the director of procurement at Boston University, a busy gentleman indeed. It is nice when people are shown how they are appreciated through events like that, we congratulate you.

Happy belated birthday greetings go to Mimi, a wonderful young lady, loved and admired by all who know her!

Speaking of young ladies, how about Ann Leonard's latest feat? She was part of the Senior Olympics that were held at the end of May, and won four Gold Medals! The standing long jump, the running long jump, the shotput and the javelin.

Naturally her family is extremely proud of Ann, and get this everyone — she is 81 years young! Isn't that super?

Here's news about another Cohasset Super Star, Andrew Pozatek, who has certainly made a name for himself in the tennis world!

Matt Pierce works on scraping and repainting Cohasset Teen Center. His classmate Chris Adams shared the task recently as their Cohasset High senior project. Stay tuned to the Cohasset Mariner each week for the latest Teen Center happenings.

Andrew was the captain of the tennis team at Milton Academy, the undefeated team that is. He was the number one singles player, and he was voted the Most Valuable Player in the ISL, as well as being named to the ISL All-star team.

Andrew is off to the University of Pennsylvania in the fall, we're sure to hear lots more about him and his tennis prowess.

Steve Pozatek also made his name known in tennis, as the Most Valuable Player for Middlebury College (for the second year, folks). He played the most matches of any tennis player in college history.

Steve was the number one singles player and captain, you can bet that Middlebury will miss him (he just graduated with honors from the prestigious school) — Steve's accepted a position with Merrill Lynch in New York City, and we all wish him the best!

I made a grave error of omission last week, talking about the Mass. Metro, Club AAU 16 & under boys basketball team and how the boys are trying to raise money to help defray expenses while representing us in Oklahoma City! I left out two key players who will also be representing Cohasset and Massachusetts in the tournament, J.L. Williams and Burke Davis. Both are also members of the CHS basketball squad, and the Mass. Metro. Club AAU, and are going to Oklahoma City — any support for this National Championship bound team would be great. Call Burke Davis at 383-0785 or J.L. Williams at 383-0814.

They will be glad to give you any more information that you would like! Again, I apologize to you both for the omission of your names, J.L. and Burke!

Curtis Spence Ludlow was among the more than 550 students graduating from Jacksonville University April 29. The son of Jeffrey and Marcia Ludlow, he received a Bachelor of Science degree with a major in business administration. At JU, he was a member of Sigma Chi fraternity and Alpha Kappa Psi national business fraternity.

The South Shore Music Circus is having a special concert for senior citizens Sunday, July 23, at 2 p.m. with the Sammy Kaye Orchestra. They will also be offering lots of shows that seniors can get discounts for (for a group of 20 or more): Victor Borge, Rosemary Clooney, Al Martino, Gerry Vale and Roger Whittaker — for more information, call David Sheehan at the Music Circus, 383-9860.

Part of the festivities in store for you during the weekend of June 16 to 18 will take place behind the bus depot, where parents are urged to bring a child and a canned good and receive a free ice cream and a puppet show! It will be June 16, from 3:30 to 5 p.m., and it will be a great treat for your child, as well as providing canned goods for those in need. What a way to get a super weekend off to a super start!

Attention golfers: The Lenny Davis Classic Retirement Golf Tournament, sponsored by the Cohasset Firefighters Local 2804, will be played at North Hill June 22. It will be a 10 a.m. shotgun start with cash prizes and a barbecue steak dinner. $55 per person includes golf, cart, dinner and prizes. Call the Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Local 2804 for more information.

Susan Morley and Talbot Dewey, Jr.

Dewey/Morley

Susan Morley, a daughter of Roger Morley of Speracedes, France and the late Juanita Morley, was married June 3 to Talbot Dewey, Jr., a son of Priscilla Dewey Houghton and the late Talbot Dewey of Millis and Cohasset.

The Rt. Rev. John B. Coburn, retired Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts, performed the ceremony at the Dewey home at Sandy Cove, Cohasset.

The bride, who is keeping her name, graduated from Johnston College, received her M.Ed. from Beacon College and her PsyD. from Antioch in Clinical Psychology. She works at Boston Regional Medical Center. Her father, a business consultant, was the former president of American Express.

The bridegroom graduated from Beloit College, received his M.A. from Antioch and is director of Charles River Creative Arts Program in Dover, Mass., and Urban Improv in Boston. His father was a paper consultant with Carter, Rice, Storrs and Bement in Boston, and a theatre producer. His mother is a writer and arts consultant.

High five to the Class of 1995

High five to the Class of 1995. So much has gone on during your 18 odd years on this planet.

In the year of your birth, 1977, the ink on your birth certificate was hardly dry when a certificate of another kind was being signed by 15 countries including the U. S. and the U.S.S.R. It was a pact curbing the spread of nuclear weapons.

President Carter pardoned Vietnam draft dodgers. Scientists used bacteria to make insulin and identified a previously unknown bacterium as the cause of "legionnaire's disease."

A 15-year-old named Roger Clemens was working on his rocketry on a high school mound in Texas.

A 20-year-old from French Lick, Indiana named Larry Bird was showing Indiana State basketball fans an intensity they will never see again.

Amnesty International won the Nobel Peace Prize.

When you were saying "hello world," Richard Dreyfuss was winning the best actor Oscar for "Goodbye Girl."

"Annie Hall" was the top picture. and its star Diane Keaton was the best actress. The Eagles won the grammy for "Hotel California."

A peanut farmer from Georgia Jimmy Carter was president.

The Raiders beat the Vikings in the Super Bowl. Montreal outskated the Bruins for the Stanley Cup. Seattle Slew won the Triple Crown.

Portland was the NBA champion. Courageous won the America's Cup. Los Angeles beat Philadelphia in the World Series. And Boston's own Jim Rice was the home run king with 39 four-baggers.

Were you looking for peace in kindergarten?

Well, certainly Hollywood was when they chose "Gandhi" as the best picture with Ben Kingsley winning the Oscar for his title role. This Meant "E.T' went home without any top awards.

Who could forget the famous "Tootsie." Jessica Lange won best supporting actress for her role.

Rosanna took home a Grammy for "Toto."

Gjesteby states her reasons

(Ed.'s note: Selectman Martha Gjesteby read this statement at the May 30 selectmen's meeting).

I would like to set the record straight without interruption.

Earlier in May, the Board of Selectmen received a communication from Cohasset Heights Limited that was called "a proposal for global settlement." It was marked confidential.

In my view any such communication of settlement proposals are public documents and Mr. Barry with his lawyers have no right to tell the Board of Selectmen how to run their business.

To test my view and seek a second opinion, I decided to confer with Atty. Kevin O'Donnell, who is knowledge about Cohasset Heights Landfill matters. He agreed fully with my view and unbeknownst to me decided on his own to pass the document to a local paper.

Some selectmen on the board keep saying that the members should act as a team. I agree when possible we should, but since we have all been elected individually we are expected to follow our own judgement for the best interests of the town.

If some of the selectmen wish to do what I would view as compromising our best interest in the matter of Cohasset Heights Landfill, that's their choice.

I would never agree to do so and I would keep insisting the people, our electorate, have a right to know what's going on. Finally, I consider it a moral obligation and my duty to inform the people of Cohasset about pending litigation offers.

'Conspiracy theorists' are mistaken

letters

To the Editor

I write as one of the town officials involved in the CHL issue. The views expressed here are my own. I am very frustrated and perplexed by the actions of some fellow officials and members of SAFE, which now seem to be editorially applauded by your paper. There is a strong implication that other town officials are acting improperly, and I do not intend to see myself and these other dedicated officials so tarnished.

Earlier this year, the CC, BOH and BOS met to begin developing a coordinated strategy and policy on CHL, which was in large part lacking over the years. The reasons were to coordinate and improve the town's management of this matter from both policy and budget perspectives and to deal with the immediate problem of the explosion in costs brought on by the two suits CHL has filed. The intent of this joint action is appropriate. We should expect that the town will act in a well-planned and responsible manner on major issues, and that the officials elected and appointed to do this job will in fact do it.

Readers should know that no town board is conducting, or has conducted, any negotiations with CHL on a global resolution of all issues, and certainly not on the terms CHL has outlined. Indeed, "the conspiracy theorists" know that such negotiation is absolutely not the case. CHL, on its own, submitted a global settlement proposal. This does not mean the town is negotiating with CHL. The town has no control over an unsolicited proposal or its content. There was no harm in receiving it, and receiving it doesn't mean we'll act on it. All that was decided by the boards was to receive the proposal, whatever it was to say. No decision to act on it was, or has been, made.

As one of the officials involved, I am personally insulted and outraged for my colleagues' sakes, at the slanderous, irresponsible, conspiracy-crazed accusations along this line. To those who make the accusation, I say prove it.

The simple intent of your boards was to plot a coordinated strategy and policy with respect to the many issues regarding CHL. Litigation is inextricably intertwined in any discussion about CHL, and the litigation was clearly the dominating feature of the board's discussions. I, for one, believe that it is patently ridiculous to expect one side to openly discuss and debate its litigation strategies in open view of its opponent. I do not think the open meeting law, which is not a black and white as the self-appointed experts would make it seem, requires that. Discussion of any litigation settlement proposal, in my view, falls under the proper rubric of confidentiality. It is unfortunate that special counsel did distribute the proposal to the

(Ed.'s note the following letter was sent to selectmen).
Dear Mr. Brown:
Re: CHL settlement/expansion

Following the open meeting with CHL in April, we expressed our support of continued and vigorous litigation against CHL, based on the current problems/violations at the landfill. We were extremely dismayed to read about the confidential proposal that is pending. Possible contamination of our water supply and continued odor problems seem to us to be a very public issue!

Granted, the technical issues involved in a lawsuit and in the whole CHL mess are complicated, but isn't it your job to attempt to educate the town and allow for public input rather than to resolve the issue without public involvement?

Expanding CHL should never be considered. Allowing its existence above Lily Pond is a mistake we will be paying for forever. Fighting to win the water redistricting suit may cost Cohasset dearly, but what is protecting our largest water source worth?

Please allow the public to provide its input before making binding agreements with CHL.

Say no to CHL expansion

(Ed.'s note: the following letter was sent to selectmen).
Mr. Chairman,

I'm writing to tell you that I am not pleased with the board conducting secret negotiations with Mr. Barry/CHL. As a resident of Cohasset, I feel the public should be involved in all of these negotiations.

I live on King St., past Lily Pond. I ride my horse in the woods that surround CHL. I have experienced firsthand the noxious aroma emanating from the dump. Call it a landfill if you like, but it's a dump! I don't want any more dumping than we already have to tolerate. Learn from the mistakes other towns have made. We have a chance to keep this under control, rather than just cleaning up the mess down the road. Prevention is cheaper in more ways than one. So I say we should not let Mr. Barry bully our town. Just say no!

Cheryl L. Grabert

'Conspiracy theorists' are mistaken

boards. We at least should have seen it. That unfortunate decision has now fueled the current troubles and the theorists' animosities to special and town counsel that apparently will never die.

That said, the citizenry should be confident that those matters properly subject to an open meeting will be discussed in such a forum. The conspiracy theorists are not the only ones interested in open government in this town. No board or individual has advocated or implemented a policy that the public will not be heard on this issue. I can also unequivocally state that none of the other officials involved consciously or intentionally wished or wishes to violate the open meeting law. I defy the conspiracy theorists to prove otherwise and deeply resent their accusation.

The disclosure of the proposal is now a moot point. Had I known what it said, I would have advocated its release simply from a strategic point of view, since it shows CHL for what it is. But that's not the point here — it's just a bonus. The point is why jump the gun? Why couldn't we officials even get the opportunity to do our jobs, review the document, and then discuss the document and decide on its release at the next joint meeting, as should have happened? By what right does any one official make unilateral legal interpretations outside of the municipal process? I think I am on safe ground in speculating that none of your town officials agree with the CHL proposal. So on what basis do the conspiracy theorists believe the contrary, thereby justifying their actions outside the bounds of law?

The disclosure issue is now displaced by more serious issues. Selectmen Gjesteby violated, in my view, a very serious trust in leaking the document. It pains me deeply to point this out. However, it is a very serious matter when one official takes it upon him/herself to violate confidentiality, the rules of executive session and the town's attorney-client privilege. It is further alarming that your papers would applaud such an act. If those who support this act are so interested in following the law, then it works both ways.

Also problematic is having board members going behind the back of their own board. Last year, a CC member was soundly criticized for doing just that and was not reappointed, in a 5-0 vote by all current selectmen. While all of us on these boards can and should advocate our positions, when you are a government official, some of your individual rights are necessarily sacrificed to the preservation of the authority and integrity of the institution of which you are a member. An opposing board member wishing to appeal a decision must recognize his duties to that board. If the position is so strongly held, that member should either resign to further the fight or request the board to take the matter higher. At minimum, he/she should inform the board of the intent to go to a higher authority. That didn't occur last year, and someone took the fall. Now, it seems to have happened here, but self-serving sanctimony is telling us a different rule applies.

The conspiracy theorists are not the sole possessors of political morality. They have recklessly accused the rest of us of selling the town down the river, an accusation they know to be false. They have taken it upon themselves to become the thought police on municipal law, and to defy any sense of properly-asserted confidentiality or trust among town officials. They even draw outsiders into questionable conduct. Their political and personal agenda, though, defies understanding and logic. While they stridently advocate that the town "do something" about CHL, their very actions have ground the town's efforts to a halt. They have, or have had, a number of political and philosophical allies among the memberships of the three boards. So why are they worried that their views will not be heard, or even carry the day? What do they think will happen or is happening? Why is it politically necessary to divide our own house? Somebody please explain that.

The town boards are, and should act as, a team. Personal agendas and animosity must be buried. Baseless accusations against fellow officials must stop. Constructive, concrete suggestions on what to do about CHl are needed. If negotiation proves to be the way to go to effectively deal with the realities of CHL, then all officials and interest groups must work together to ensure that any deal made is in the town's best interest. Merely criticizing us without justification and offering no constructive course of action or alternatives on the other hand does not advance any of our shared interests.

Landfill expansion should be stopped

(Ed.'s note: a copy of the following letter to Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown was sent to the Mariner for publication).

Dear Merle,

Members of SAFE are gravely concerned to hear about negotiation overtures with Cohasset Heights Limited in the nature of a "Global Settlement." In our view, it is premature to be discussing any expansion of Area V. Area V is not even out of the EIR stage at the state permit level. The town has spent the last four years vigorously opposing this proposal and reminding the state of our problems with the current operations.

It is time for all the boards to review their own responses to the DEIR, the SDEIR, the SSDEIR, and the FEIR. It is time for the boards to renew their focus on their job at hand and that is the regulation of the current operation.

We all need to realize that CHL has done a marvelous job of clouding the issues. These lawsuits are nothing less than a sinister business strategy in order to halt Cohasset's efforts to protect our town's resources. There is nothing like financial distress to get people into a panic. It is true that the town does not want to squander legal funds but the big question is

"Were we right on the issues that we are being sued for?" Ask your fellow townspeople, "Were we right to draw this line in our water resource district to protect Lily Pond from possible contamination?" Of course we were! Also, do our citizens want you to give up this line simply because we are being sued by a private business wanting to expand a problematic landfill? We think not!

Ask your fellow townspeople, "Do we want our appointed Conservation Commission to do their job and enforce our state Wetlands Protection Regulations?" Of course we do! What do our residents want the Conservation Commission to do when there is serious documented damage?

There are two choices. Cohasset can cave in and give this expansion to CHL with certain concessions. Is there any long range wisdom in this choice? We think not. This expansion is 27.5 acres but it must be noted that this is not nearly the extent of CHL's land holdings. We would be fools to believe that there is anything in the future but more expansions and bigger and bigger problems for the town.

The second, and better choice is clear. Our boards must stop the in- fighting and refocus on what is right for the town. Get the financial assurance in place, make CHL clean up their environmental damage, and do not be intimidated into giving away the farm. This is our town and we have the right and the responsibility to protect it!

Linda Keller
President, S.A.F.E.

Disapproval of landfill voiced

Dear Mr. Brown and Selectmen:

We are uniting to voice our disapproval of any consideration of an expanded CHL landfill. We need to fight to win the water resource district suit, and the public needs to be kept informed in all happenings involving the Cohasset Heights landfill. We want no secret deals!

Support for two vacation weeks urged

To the Editor:

I am writing to apologize to our School Committee for not speaking up sooner on the issue of spring vacation scheduling, and for waiting for someone else — in this case, our children — to do it for me.

The School Committee, I believe, has apparently forgotten the level of stress our children experience every day. Constantly, they are told they must achieve higher standards in academics, athletics or the arts. The stress is no less on our teachers. How many of us really know what it's like to maintain control over and to teach 25 students in a classroom for an entire school day, and then conduct after-school meetings with parents? School Committee members, whose teaching experience dates back 20 years, have to recognize that times have changed and gotten tougher.

After close examination, school committees in Randolph, Falmouth and other communities rejected the idea of consolidating February and April vacations into a single week. Among other reasons, they realized that the two existing weeks include holidays; consolidation would, in most years, add only three days of school.

Throughout the state, at the schools most would consider the best in the Commonwealth, the February-April schedule remains in effect. Private schools, though not on the same schedule, routinely give students two — or more — weeks off. Our neighboring town, Hingham, considered consolidation, responded to the concerns of parents, teachers and students, and decided not to cut back.

I would hope that the Cohasset School Committee members, after careful reconsideration, would realize they've made a mistake, and do the same. And I'd like to congratulate Nicole Santoro for having the courage and initiative to step forward and reopen this debate.

Kind thoughts appreciated

To the Editor:

The children of Eileen Frances Kurtz would like to thank the hundreds of friends who thought of us all during our very sad and difficult time. Your very kind words of sympathy did soothe us all in ways we cannot truly express. Your beautiful and thoughtful cards of sympathy and caring also helped to ease our pain. Your generosity of food and beverage helped keep our strength up as we sadly completed our last loving good-byes to our mother.

She loved you all and you all showed us how much you loved her. We thank you.

Conservation to review Parker Avenue work

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

After a lengthy and strained discussion Tuesday night, the conservation commission members told Paul Trendowicz that they will review renovations he has already done to a house at 33 Parker Ave. to determine whether the project falls within their jurisdication.

Commission chairman Roseanne McMorris asked conservation commission member Thomas Callahan to leave the room because he is the lawyer representing Trendowicz in his attempts to buy part of the Hagerty Property, also on Parker Ave., from the town.

Veneta Roebuck, another conservation commission member, also left the room because her daughter works for the same engineering firm as Robert Alvarez, Trendowicz's engineer.

After considerable objection, Trendowicz and Alvarez, agreed to submit a request for determination of applicability, RDA, which the commission will review to decide whether or not it has jurisdiction over the case.

They also said they plan to issue a notice of intent within three weeks, which will indicate a larger plan at the site which will fall within the commission's jurisdiction.

According to the law, although the conservation commission has jurisdiction over most work done near a wetland, marsh or body of water, renovations which do not alter the original outline of a building are exempt.

Trendowicz and Alvarez argued that their renovations did not alter the footprint of the house.

"The work was cosmetic in nature," and therefore an RDA is not necessary.

"That's up to us to decide," said McMorris, who pointed out that the submission of RDA's is routine procedure for property owners in wetlands areas. She added that the commission was not implying that Trendowicz proceeded with the work improperly. "There is not an issue of fault here," she stated.

The other commissioners agreed with her.

Building inspector Robert Egan had issued a building permit on April 21 for the work. The conservation commission secretary, Pat Walsh, said that no member of the commission had signed the permit.

The subject was on the agenda because of questions raised by Robert Davenport of Sohier Street.

He said that he had seen pressure treated lumber piled on the ground at the site, which is a violation of conservation commission policy to avoid potential pollution. The lumber cannot be sawed or stored directly on the ground in a wetlands area. It must be on a canvas or off the ground. In addition, it cannot touch the ground after it has been used in building.

Davenport said, "Up until this weekend it looked like pressure-treated wood was on the ground." Noting that other applicants have been taken to task about pressure treated wood, Davenport said he hoped Trendowicz was not receiving special treatment.

He also said the commission has jurisdiction because "there is a change in footprint."

Paul Shea, consulting engineer for the commission said that he had visited the site and that the pressurized lumber was not on the ground at the time of his visit.

Hagerty committee keeps options open

At a lively meeting held last week, the Hagerty Property Acquisition Committee made clear that it has not recommended that anything be done with the property.

The committee is currently reviewing possible site plans with engineers Civil Designs, Inc. of Boston. The group said that after looking a possible uses for the site, a recommendation will be made to selectmen on whether to sell some or all of the property or to keep it in town hands.

The town has owned the harbor front property since town meeting appropriated $475,000 for the purchase in 1993.

Consisting of a Victorian mansion which used to house the Cohasset Colonials showroom, a cutting room and a historic boathouse dating to the 1850's, the site at 33-37 Parker Ave. has been under considerable discussion at town hall lately because of an offer made by Beach St. resident Paul Trendowicz to buy the house and former cutting room for $200,000.

Hagerty committee members said that while anyone is welcome to appear before them to discuss proposals, they have yet to decide on whether or not the property should be sold. They also pointed out that selectmen would have to declare a property surplus and solicit bids before any sale could be completed.

In addition, the tough new rules governing septic systems, known as Title V, could affect a potential sale if the septic system at the building does not pass.

One member said the house could even be torn down to increase public access to the waterfront, stating that the interests of all citizens should be considered, not simply those who want a location to launch their boats.

There was also some discussion about a potential conflict of interest on the part of conservation commission member Thomas Callahan, who has appeared before selectmen and the Hagerty committee as the attorney representing Trendowicz.

There appeared to be a consensus among committee members that they not be pressured, but rather they indicated they preferred to wait until their process is completed.

Parking, a picnic area and public access to water are all being considered for the site.

"We should develop our own concepts before going to selectmen," said Max Pounder, who is a non-voting member and also serves on the design review board.

Veneta Roebuck, who chaired the meeting in the absence of Alfred Moore, agreed, suggesting that whatever is done with the Hagerty site be part of an overall strategy for Cohasset's waterfront.

The group did agree to ask selectmen several specific things:

- to put up the no parking sign on the right hand corner of Parker Ave., which has fallen down.
- to review the town's potential liability for the light pole near the boat launching area. Every year a few boaters are electrocuted when metal boat masts come in contact with electric power lines. Some on the committee felt underground power lines would be safer.
- to appoint Pounder and David Wadsworth, now non-voting committee members, to full voting status.

The next meeting will be July 13 at 7:30 p.m. at town hall.

Caitlin Connolly

I have had the opportunity to observe Caitlin, not only on the basketball court, but in the classroom and community as well. I have never met a young woman more dedicated and driven for excellence. Whether she is staying after school or coming early to practice in order to improve for her team, organizing this school's recycling efforts or volunteering her time and enthusiasm to the new teen center, Caitlin is an inspiration and should be recognized for the special and extraordinary person she is.

— Ms. Hughes

— Student of the month —

It is with great enthusiasm that we nominate Caitlin Connolly as student of the month.

An active participant in the Community Volunteer Service group and social awareness organization, Caitlin devotes a great deal of her time to service in the school community. She has been instrumental in starting a paper recycling program at CHS, the only one of its kind in the state of Massachusetts. She has coordinated the efforts of the Cohasset Board of Health, North Shore Recycling Company and the Social Awareness Organization to make this highly worthwhile project a reality. In addition, Caitlin has facilitated a tolerance and inclusion program at the Deer Hill School, "Into the Green Circle — Teens Teaching Inclusion."

For her dedication to the improvement of CHS and society at large, we proudly nominate Caitlin Connolly as student of the month.

— Mrs. Duffy, Mr. Newkirk, Ms. White

School Council elections

Elections were held recently for new members to school councils. Parents who were elected are: Osgood School — Linda Nash, Lynne Sheridan; Deer Hill School — Susan Turgiss; Junior High/Senior High — JoAnn Grew and Victoria Hurley.

Senior chorus attends music festival

The Cohasset Senior Chorus, directed by Bryan Marks, and the Concert Band, directed by Marcia Lajoie, attended the Heritage Music Festival in Newport, RI on May 12 and 13.

Both groups performed challenging repertoire before three judges and received "Excellent" ratings. Both the band and chorus were awarded first-place plaques.

A professional clinician worked with each group, providing constructive feedback for their further development. Following the performances they toured Newport and attended the awards banquet.

Dance is Friday night!

There will be a dance at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School from 7:30 to 10 p.m., Friday (June 9). Jim O'Sullivan and John "Goat" Hughes will be the DJ's. Come and celebrate the end of classes and take an exam study break. This is a fund-raising event for the Cohasset Teen Center. mates.

Co-salutatorians Ann Dane and Candice Buckley shared their speech as, they said, they have shared all their school years in Cohasset. Reading alternating paragraphs of their speech, the young women recounted class projects that taught them more than could have been learned from a book.

For a sixth grade enrichment project, they learned about Buckminster Fuller by constructing a geodesic dome from toothpicks. This year, they studied the development of fruit flies, with Buckley displayed in a left-over vial.

They noted their differences, as well as their mutual respect.

To their classmates, parents, and teachers, they said, "Thank you for letting us be ourselves."

Graduation day marks the end of a stage in their lives, valedictorian Jessica Jenkins said. She spoke about the road that lies ahead of her and her classmates, and that the education they have received up to this time has prepared them to "forge our own way."

While the graduates have memories of their school years in Cohasset, it is important for them to stay alert and not look back.

Cohasset school superintendent Stephen Hart noted how he has always enjoyed watching small children mesmerized as their teachers read to them. He then took the opportunity to read aloud to the graduates, from "The Giving Tree," by Shel Silverstein.

Hart urged the graduates to focus on the moral of that story, by remembering those in their lives who have given selflessly to them, and to remember to give back to others.

To wrap up the ceremony, applause and cheers went up from the hundreds of family members and friends of the graduates, as School Committee chairman Ralph Kidder presented diplomas to the Class of 1995.

One of the lottery's best sellers is a tough sell locally

❒ Cohasset continues to support moratorium on Keno

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

The lottery's most controversial game is also its second most popular, said Massachusetts Lottery Commission Spokesperson Deirdre Coyle, who noted that Keno, a lotto style game implemented in 1993 grossed $68 million last year.

For fiscal year 1995, Coyle said Keno is expected to gross $250 million, that's about $60 million net, and a considerable portion of the lottery's $636 million contribution to the state, of which much comes back to Massachusetts cities and towns.

But some communities are worried about Keno and feel it brings to local convenience and variety stores, restaurants and pubs a game more addictive and closer to casino style gambling.

The game can be played between noon to 11 p.m. daily, costs a dollar to play, and a new game begins every five minutes. Based on the same format as Megabucks, Mass Millions and Mass Cash, Keno has a base of 80 numbers. Players choose between one and 12 numbers from one to 80 and the game selects 20. The player decides by how many numbers he chooses what kind of odds he faces. With fewer numbers chosen there are lower odds, but also lower prizes, Coyle said. The odds and prizes can vary greatly depending on the way the game is played.

For example, if a player chose four numbers and all four hit, the player wins $100. If 12 numbers are chosen and all 12 are among the 20 the machine picks, the player wins $1 million.

Coyle explained that Keno which currently is available to the public at 1,200 locations —that's up 950 from last year — was initiated through legislative mandate and supported by the governor. Coyle pointed out that only 25 of Massachusetts 352 towns and cities have voiced concerns about the game and only five of those have formally complained to state Treasurer Joseph Malone, who is also the chairman of the lottery commission.

Coyle said the concerns and complaints vary from some towns wanting to have local control over where Keno can and cannot go, to a push by some communities for a complete ban on the game.

Currently the Keno issue is in conference committee as the state wraps up its fiscal year 1996 budget, and Coyle said while the House budget included a six-month moratorium on new licensing starting July 1, the Senate version looked only for an increase in local control over the game.

"We're in a holding pattern right now," said Coyle, who noted that Malone said he would support either option and felt there needed to be some analysis of the game.

Cohasset is among the five towns that have formally complained and support a moratorium that would allow no new licensing within the community.

Currently, Cohasset residents can play Keno in town only at Joe's Market, a convenience store on route 3A. Selectman Peter Pratt said the moratorium would not rid Cohasset of the one Keno location, but would prevent new ones.

"Only an act of the legislature can remove Keno operations from where they are today," said Pratt, who said he is pleased and proud that Cohasset is petitioning for the moratorium. Pratt noted that while there are a few different versions of the local option bill, the Massachusetts Municipal Association supports the strongest powers possible at the municipal level.

Pratt, who has long been a staunch opponent of casino gambling, said casino opponents take "a dim view of Keno."

"It's more like a casino type game," said Pratt, who noted that children too have greater exposure to the game because of the kinds of locations in which it exists. In addition to its similarity to casino gambling, the frequency of the games encourages players to congregate for longer period of times in the establishments where it exists and that is another problem for communities, Pratt said.

"To have the state shove this down our throats is wrong. Weld and the legislature made a mistake in doing this. Local communities should have a right to ban this," he said.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) has long opposed casino and or casino-style gambling.

"You can really become addicted to it," she said, noting that many who might be enticed to play, may not be able to afford to.

Murray, favors a strong local option that would give communities the right to ban Keno altogether.

Seaport Bond Bill could buoy commuter boat service

By Alice C. Coyle
Mariner Staff

The train issue idled in the background as local legislators took Lt. Governor Paul Cellucci on a tour of the Hingham commuter boat facilities Tuesday.

Cellucci, state Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) and State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) were in town this week to publicize the new Seaport Bond Bill — legislation that will help Massachusetts ports compete economically, and could cover the expense of harbor dredging in South Shore communities.

The bill could also provide for improvements in the commuter boat facilities and parking at the shipyard, said Cellucci, who maintained the bill will help not only large Massachusetts ports like Boston and New Bedford, but also smaller coastal communities by improving access to their harbors for commercial and recreational use.

"Regardless of the train debate, this is something that needs to be done," Cellucci said.

If approved, Hedlund said the Seaport bill will be the main bonding vehicle for the state this year.

Boat boosters Martha Reardon and private commuter boat operator William Spense were on hand to push new and improved boats and service to Boston and the airport from Hull and the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy.

But no improvements can stay afloat if much needed dredging projects don't take place.

Hingham Harbor Development Committee member Peter Lemonias told Cellucci that poor harbor conditions have led to several groundings and because the harbor has filled in so much, the Coast Guard will no longer send boats into the channel to assist boaters for two hours on either side of low tide.

"At low tide, it's nothing but a mud flat," Murray said.

The harbor has not been dredged since 1985 and survey results show that removing the 150,000 cubic yards of silt will cost more than $2 million.

The boat ramp is not available at low tide at all and Lemonias estimates that mariners can successfully launch their boats just three hours each day for 1-1/2 hours on either side of high tide.

"The need for dredging is high and funds are difficult to come by," Lemonias said, noting that Hingham has made a commitment to its 25 percent share by appropriating $225,000 through town meeting and by setting funds aside in HDC dredging account funded through a percentage of boat excise taxes.

Cellucci, who heads the Governor's Seaport Council with representative from both large and small ports, said with all of these harbor related projects, "it's a question of setting priorities."

"I come from a small town," said Cellucci, a Hudson native.

"I'm very sensitive to the needs of small communities and will pay particular attention as we allocate resources, to towns like Hingham."

And Cellucci gave commuter boat fans a boost by maintaining that he and Governor Weld are "very big on commuter boats and an intermodal approach to transportation."

"The Seaport Bond Bill's passage will give us the resources to see that the infrastructure is here," Cellucci said.

Regardless of the Greenbush issue, we have to have boats as well. And we can't have them without dredging and a place to park, he added.

Rail opponents and proponents were all on hand in case the discussion should switch tracks from boats to trains.

William Grimes, founder of the pro-train group Back on Track, said he was pleased that everyone behaved themselves and did not turn the event into another forum to debate the train.

"We don't have a problem with expanding the boat facilities and improving the port area," said Grimes who looks forward to having rail transportation and improved water use.

Nancy Buckley, founder of the anti-rail Coastal Coalition was also pleased with Cellucci's visit. Buckley said Cellucci has been very impressed with the ferry system owned and operated by New York businessman Arthur Imperatore who privately runs a ferry and bus system with no state subsidy.

"It was exciting to see how impressed he was," said Buckley who was glad to report that Cellucci does not seem to be suffering from the "serious psychological condition — the Lionel Complex."

Rabies clinic is offered

The Cohasset Board of Health will sponsor its first Rabies Clinic for the year with the assistance of the South River Veterinary Services on Saturday, June 10, in the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium for cats only from 10:30 a.m. to noon and for dogs only from 12:05 to 1:30 p.m. Dogs must be leashed and cats caged. No strays will be accepted.

State regulations require that all cats as well as dogs be immunized for rabies. With the current rabies epidemic, immunizations are an important step in protecting animals and humans. The immunization costs are: rabies, $8; distemper, $10; feline leukemia, $10; Lyme disease, $12.

Other tests available are heartworm, $15 and feline leukemia test, $20.

Pet owners from surrounding communities are invited to participate. Checks made payable to SRVS or cash will be accepted.

Help clean up the Swim Center for summer

The Cohasset Swim Center will hold a Clean-up Day on Saturday, June 10, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. There is poison ivy, broken glass and rubbish that needs to be removed from the pool grounds before opening day on June 17.

The Swim Center staff encourages all pool members, young and older, to come and lend a hand for part of the day. Participants are asked to bring their personal gardening tools if possible.

Friends, music, refreshments and the anticipation of a great summer swim season will all add to the success of the day. For further information call Chris Kondrat at 383-9752 or Scott Theriault at 383-6530.

NOTICE TO MY PATIENTS

I do NOT recommend that you have a mammogram taken by the mobile van that is coming to Cohasset, Saturday, June 10, 1995.

I DO, however, recommend that appropriate mammograms be done at the South Shore Hospital, Women's Health Care, or the Driftway Radiology Association in Scituate.

SSAC Festival on the Common June 15 to 18

It's worth marking your calendar now for this annual spring festival on Cohasset Common and at the South Shore Art Center from June 16 to 18, especially with this year's added attractions to celebrate the South Shore Art Center's 40th anniversary!

Since 1955 the art center has strived to cultivate arts in the region and one outstanding annual event has always been this, the longest-running outdoor arts festival in the country.

No one will be disappointed — art lovers can lose themselves in the juried national, art or photography exhibitions, music lovers will enjoy entertainment from classical to folk to big band, auto fans will relish the Connecting Rods Auto Clubs antique cars, children always relish spending an hour in the kids' tent making a masterpiece and everyone can shop at more than 100 crafters while sampling food and desserts of all kinds — especially at the now famous Strawberry Festival.

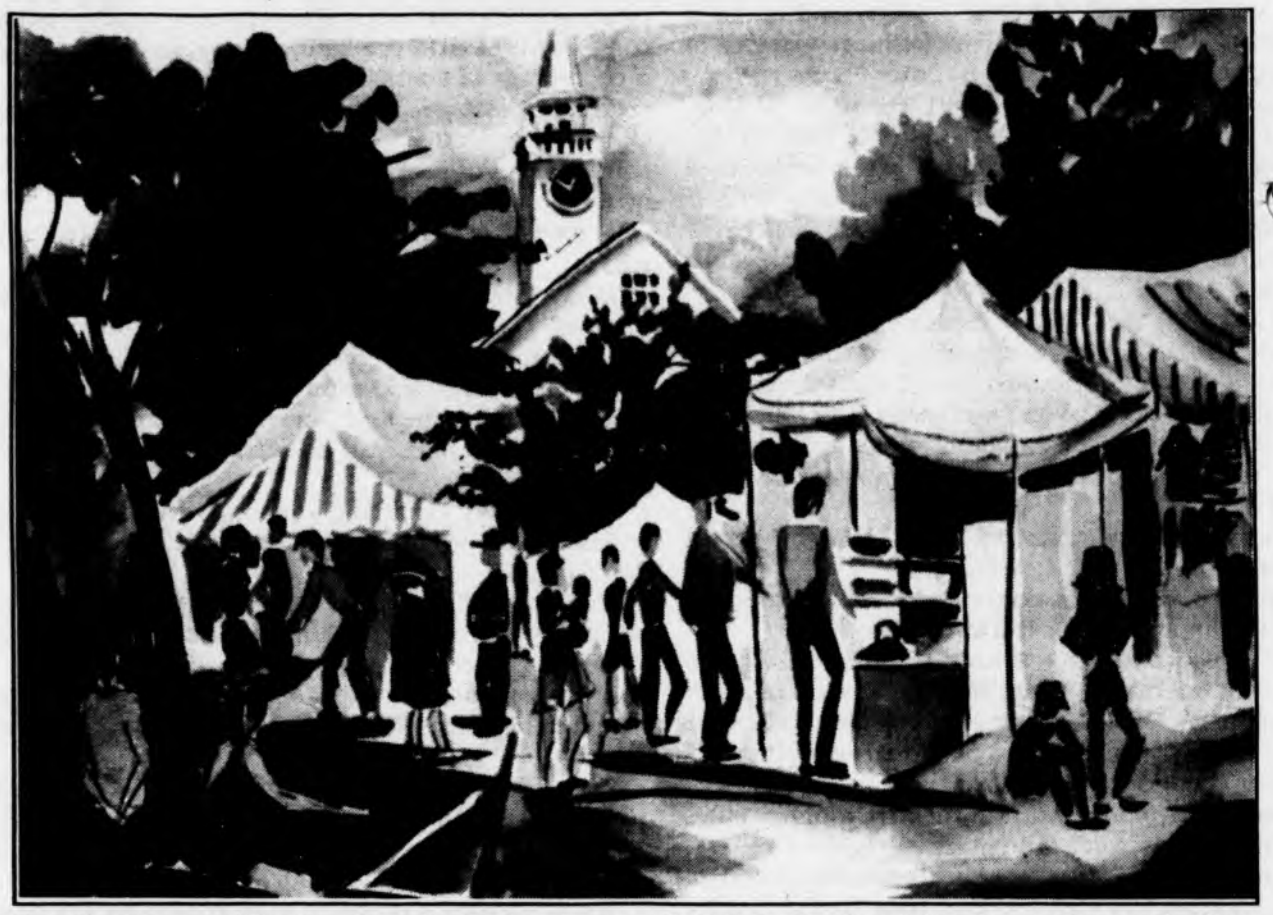
The Festival On The Common runs Friday, June 16, from 3 to 9 p.m., Saturday, June 17, from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., and Sunday, June 18, from noon to 6 p.m. Continuous free trolley service is available from the South Shore Music Circus, courtesy of the Tom O'Brien car companies of Quincy and Kingston.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday, continuous festival events at the art center and on Cohasset Common include "Mirror, Mirror..." the center's first national exhibition, the Young Artists Juried Exhibition, the Juried Art and Juried Photography Exhibitions, members' show, 100 craft artisans, a variety of international food vendors, a creativity tent for children, artist demonstrations and paint-alongs, constant entertainment on the Center Stage on the Common, a community participatory sculpture, the always popular Annual Strawberry Festival at the adjacent Second Congregational Church and Harborfest Committee sponsored activities.

Special daytime events Friday, June 17, include; Kidsfest Carnivale at the SSAC creativity tent for children, ice cream festival and game (Harborfest Committee) from 3 to 5 p.m., a carillon concert by Mary Kennedy at St. Stephen's Church overlooking the common at 4 p.m., and WATD remote broadcast from the common.

From 5 to 9 p.m. Friday, the SSAC 40th anniversary extravaganza, "Celebrate the Arts," sponsored by the Bank of Boston, offers a "first night" celebration in June. Events include David Neiman on the hammered dulcimer, Peter Yae's Chinese cultural dance troupe, bagpipe player Mathew Malloch, the Stockwell Brothers new-grass/folk concert, Joe Howard and the "Art of Magic," participatory art and demonstrations of pottery, origami and mask making with Syma, Nancy Connolly and Naoe Suzuki, and the awards ceremony. Strawberry Festival begins.

Saturday, June 17, additional events include: Model boat building and race, sponsored by Ernst & Young, at 10:30 a.m. (pre-registration/limited enrollment/ free: call the art center at 383-ARTS), a participatory community sculpture with artist Chris Hidell, antique to current car display, St. Stephen's carillon concert at 11 a.m., Renaissance and Baroque music on the hammered dulcimer by David Neiman in the gallery at 11 a.m.; on center stage/Cohasset Common dance exhibition 10 a.m., Frank Shooshan Granite City jazz band at noon, CHS dramatic club, 4 p.m., South Shore Men of Harmony, 5 p.m., and South Shore Bay Band with Fran Duran 6:30 p.m.



"Festival," an original watercolor by Duxbury artist Elsie Chadwick has been chosen for this year's festival posters and T-shirts.

The First Parish of Cohasset presents the Concord Chorale Gospel Concert at 8 p.m. (call 617-383-1100). Harborfest Committee activities on this day include a pancake breakfast ($4) at 8 a.m. at the lightkeeper's residence and a clambake at 6:30 p.m. ($30) at the Cohasset Sailing Club. Call 383-0787 for Harborfest details.

Additional events for Sunday, June 18, include continuation of the community sculpture, antique car display, St. Stephen's carillon, 1 p.m., Father's Day activity at SSAC children's tent 1 to 3 p.m., Harborfest Blessing of the Fleet, 1:30 p.m., Cohasset Harbor, the Harborfest parade, 2:30 p.m., and Chowderfest, 3 p.m. ($6); Cohasset Dramatic Club "Annie" excerpts, 3:30 p.m.; Spanish musical dance troupe, 4:30 p.m., sponsored by Cohasset Diversity Committee.

An important highlight of the weekend for the South Shore Art center is its first national juried exhibition in the Bancroft Gallery. The opening reception for "Mirror, Mirror..." a self-portrait exhibition sponsored by the Shawmut Bank, will be Thursday, June 15, from 7 to 9 p.m. Admission is free and includes refreshments, talks with the artists and filming of the live cable television show "Pierson to Person." The juried show attracted over 500 entries from around the country with 58 works selected by the Exhibition Committee from a review of slides that were unidentified to ensure impartiality. Artist were chosen from California, Florida, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Washington, New York, Massachusetts and eight other states. The exhibition will continue from festival weekend through August 6.

The Festival on the Common is the perfect answer for a summer weekend. There are events for family members and friends of all ages — you will probably want to come more than once to be able to enjoy everything!

Programs are available the day of the event when you park at the South Shore Music Circus, at the South Shore Art Center, at the four arborway entrances to the common and at the entrance to the art tent on the common. For 40 years the South Shore Art Center has proudly been able to keep the festival a free admission event due in large part to the continued support of our many sponsors and donors who believe in the arts. The SSAC does ask for a $1 donation at the children's activity tent, where children are guided through many arts projects they proudly bring home. to cover the increasing costs of materials.

If you have any questions regarding festival, the schedule of events or overnight accommodations, call the art center at 617-383-ARTS.

Parking is limited surrounding Cohasset Common, and Tom O'Brien car companies have made continuous free trolley service available from the South Shore Music Circus parking lot on Sohier St. to ensure the safety of all. The trolley ride only takes one minute — far less time than driving in circles looking for a parking spot!

All events are organized by the South Shore Art Center unless otherwise noted. For information please call the art center at 617-383-ARTS, or for Harborfest Committee events, 383-0787.

South Shore artists included in the exhibition are Virginia Allen of Scituate, Tara Law Campbell of Marshfield, Wendy Goldstein of Scituate, Julie Hawkins-Burnham of Cohasset, Eleanor LeBlanc of Hull, Constance Flavell Pratt of Norwell, Chris Rifkin of Hingham, Beverly Rippel of S. Easton, Rosemond Spinelli of S. Easton, and Valerie Fore Vitalie of Scituate. The opening reception includes refreshments, talks with the artists and the live cable television show "Pierson to Person." The exhibition will continue through festival weekend until Aug. 6.

ASP car wash June 10

The Appalachia Service Project will sponsor a spring Car Wash on Saturday, June 10 at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave. (next to town hall), from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

A donation of $5 is requested. In the event of rain the car wash will be cancelled. All proceeds will benefit the group's home repair work week planned for June 24 through July 2 in Kentucky.

Coastal exploration camp offered

The South Shore Community Center is establishing a summer enrichment program in cooperation with the Hull Lifesaving Museum and Cohasset High School. The program would offer a summer program providing three two-week camp sessions to accommodate up to 90 children, ages four through 10. A percentage will participate through partial or full scholarship sponsor support.

Professional staffing for the program will be enhanced with high school-aged aides and job opportunities will be available to high school students expressing an interest in marine biology, the environment or early childhood education. The professional staff will provide training sessions for instructors and aides, including first aid, curriculum objectives and early childhood basics.

Consultants have been enlisted through CHS, Hull Lifesaving Museum and the local lobster fishing community. On-site locations include the Lifesaving Museum, CHS marine biology lab, Government Island, Sandy Beach and the SSCC.

For further information call the SSCC at 383-0088.

Cohasset Little League spurred by rich history

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

The wooden bleachers and well-maintained grass and infield dirt give the Harold P. Barnes Field that old rustic New England look. There has been talk of replacing the worn bleachers with aluminum seats, but the overall consensus has been to repair the bleachers that are now standing. Aluminum is more artificial than wood and there is fear the meticulously maintained field would lose much of its Cooperstown-like appeal.

Beyond the left-field fence are the batting cages, there for the more than 500 kids between the ages of 5-18 who want to brush up on their swings or just plain get in some extra batting practice. From Sunday to Saturday the field is alive in a sea of movement, drama and color as more than 25 games are played on the field, 10 in the Major League alone.

Starting to get the overall picture? Little League is alive and well in the small seaside community with teams for players of all ages and abilities. There is currently a farm, minor and major league. Two pony league teams also field rosters. The LandSharks are an extension of the league and field high-school age players.

The girls softball league, run by Susan Carr, is flourishing with its nearly 150 players and there is also a District 8 traveling squad.

John Carr, who served as president of the league from 1991-94, has seen a number of changes during that span. "When I first got involved in '91, we had 200 kids," Carr said. "Now there are over 500 kids so it has grown."

Obviously, with so many kids involved in the program and the array of teams, Barnes Field is a hot bed of activity during the summer months. "It's real tight," Carr said. "That field is being used constantly."

When the regular season winds down and the All-Star squads are selected, Cohasset teams take to the road in various tournaments. And despite the town's size, the players give a heck of a lot more than a token challenge against towns that are bigger with more youngsters to draw from.

"For a town our size, we have done very well against towns much bigger. I'm not saying we win all our games but we hold our own," Carr said.

Changes have also been made to improve the field. Batting cages, a pitching machine and a sprinkler system have all been added and there has been talk about lights being erected for additional night games.

"It has always been an idea," Moody said, "it's just a matter of doing it."

The concession stand, which has been renovated, is always a big draw on any evening at the ballpark. The stand has proven to be profitable as well, having grossed approximately $3,800 in a single month.

Opening Day for Little League is always a big day for players and parents alike and in Cohasset it remains one of the biggest events of the spring. League organizers spare nothing in making the field look extra special.

The field is decorated handsomely with five flags along the left-field line and another five down right field. Red, white and blue is draped over the outfield fence, giving the field an All-American, apple pie feel to it. The setting, with trees beyond the outfield fences and a winding street well-behind home plate could make one feel as though he is a character in a Rockwell painting.

"It really was Americana," Moody said, thinking back to this year's annual parade of players and coaches, followed by the ceremony at the field. "It makes you feel really good about the field."

One big fan and supporter of the league is State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset). Murray has thrown out the first ball for several years. This year she admitted home plate looks further away every year. Nevertheless, it didn't stop Murray from throwing a nasty pitch to hit.

"I just let it fly," she said with a laugh. "I hit the inside corner for a strike."

Murray's association with the league runs deeper than her popularity as an elected official. Her father, Nate Hur-

I've been watching as many state tourney games as possible and the following are a few observations worth sharing.

*Whenever a batter hits a foul pop in a baseball or softball game every fan watches to see if the ball will hit a car. I've seen a couple fouls bounce off roofs and door panels but I've yet to see one hit pay-dirt and shatter a window. Maybe if I keep my fingers crossed and think happy thoughts my dream will come true.

*Softball players have the most fun. First of all, the girls' in high school softball don't have to wear hats like the boys do in baseball so you can actually see the expressions on their faces. Most look very happy on the diamond. Softball players also high five each other after every tough catch or base hit. They genuinely want to see their teammates do well and they show their gratitude. And lastly, high school softball players always seem to bring lots of snacks and beverages to the games. I've seen grapes, sliced oranges, pretzels as well as Gatorade, ice water and soda this year alone. By the way, bring a sportswriter a snack and maybe he or she will write something nice. (P.S. I like pizza and nachos.)

*The MIAA still needs a dope-slap for some of their dumb tourney rules. For example, why do Division I baseball teams have to play nine innings in the post-season after playing seven inning regular season games. No other division in high school baseball or softball plays nine innings in the tourney. What's next. four periods for Division I ice hockey games.

*And one more slap for the MIAA. Why aren't there any linesman used in high school tennis matches until the state tourney finals? As it is now, the players on the court make the call on a ball being

Girls get second chance in tennis tourney

By Joe Reardon

If nothing else, the Cohasset High girls tennis team will go down in the books as the only team to be allowed a double-elimination in the Division 2 South Sectional tourney.

Just days after losing a close match to Canton, 3-2, the Skippers learned it would be them and not the Bulldogs who would be facing South Shore League rival Scituate in the next round.

So how could that be? It seems Canton forfeited its victory over Cohasset when it was learned that an ineligible player participated in the match against the Skippers.

Cohasset head coach didn't find out about the forfeit until Monday night. Scituate was warming up when its squad was notified by athletic director Leo Liatsos that the Skippers would be the team to beat and not the Bulldogs.

Cohasset and Scituate had split their season series 1-1, but it was the Sailors who won the rubber match with a decisive 4-1 victory. Cohasset finished its season with a none too shabby 13-3 record.

"We were glad to have another chance," said Meehan. "I was hoping to win two matches. They were looking to win but Scituate was the better team."

Cohasset had to settle for one, however, as All-Stars Karen Niessink, whose older sister Kristin received a varsity letter, and Kristin O'Connell teamed up at No. 1 doubles to win their match 0-6, 6-3, 6-0. The Skippers also received a strong showing from Alexis Zerendis, who lost in straight sets but not before pushing her opponent to the limit, 4-6, 5-7.

Meehan said the team was a little rusty after believing its season was over and didn't seem to be overly motivated for the match. Meehan, however, held a long team meeting with the squad and it did the trick in getting the Skippers back in the tourney mode.

The Festival on the Common is the perfect answer for a summer weekend. There are events for family members and friends of all ages — you will probably want to come more than once to be able to enjoy everything!

Programs are available the day of the event when you park at the South Shore Music Circus, at the South Shore Art Center, at the four arborway entrances to the common and at the entrance to the art tent on the common. For 40 years the South Shore Art Center has proudly been able to keep the festival a free admission event due in large part to the continued support of our many sponsors and donors who believe in the arts. The SSAC does ask for a $1 donation at the children's activity tent, where children are guided through many arts projects they proudly bring home. to cover the increasing costs of materials.

If you have any questions regarding festival, the schedule of events or overnight accommodations, call the art center at 617-383-ARTS.

Parking is limited surrounding Cohasset Common, and Tom O'Brien car companies have made continuous free trolley service available from the South Shore Music Circus parking lot on Sohier St. to ensure the safety of all. The trolley ride only takes one minute — far less time than driving in circles looking for a parking spot!

All events are organized by the South Shore Art Center unless otherwise noted. For information please call the art center at 617-383-ARTS, or for Harborfest Committee events, 383-0787.

South Shore artists included in the exhibition are Virginia Allen of Scituate, Tara Law Campbell of Marshfield, Wendy Goldstein of Scituate, Julie Hawkins-Burnham of Cohasset, Eleanor LeBlanc of Hull, Constance Flavell Pratt of Norwell, Chris Rifkin of Hingham, Beverly Rippel of S. Easton, Rosemond Spinelli of S. Easton, and Valerie Fore Vitalie of Scituate. The opening reception includes refreshments, talks with the artists and the live cable television show "Pierson to Person." The exhibition will continue through festival weekend until Aug. 6.

ASP car wash June 10

The Appalachia Service Project will sponsor a spring Car Wash on Saturday, June 10 at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave. (next to town hall), from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

A donation of $5 is requested. In the event of rain the car wash will be cancelled. All proceeds will benefit the group's home repair work week planned for June 24 through July 2 in Kentucky.

Coastal exploration camp offered

The South Shore Community Center is establishing a summer enrichment program in cooperation with the Hull Lifesaving Museum and Cohasset High School. The program would offer a summer program providing three two-week camp sessions to accommodate up to 90 children, ages four through 10. A percentage will participate through partial or full scholarship sponsor support.

Professional staffing for the program will be enhanced with high school-aged aides and job opportunities will be available to high school students expressing an interest in marine biology, the environment or early childhood education. The professional staff will provide training sessions for instructors and aides, including first aid, curriculum objectives and early childhood basics.

Consultants have been enlisted through CHS, Hull Lifesaving Museum and the local lobster fishing community. On-site locations include the Lifesaving Museum, CHS marine biology lab, Government Island, Sandy Beach and the SSCC.

For further information call the SSCC at 383-0088.

Cohasset Little League spurred by rich history

By Joe Reardon

The wooden bleachers and well-maintained grass and infield dirt give the Harold P. Barnes Field that old rustic New England look. There has been talk of replacing the worn bleachers with aluminum seats, but the overall consensus has been to repair the bleachers that are now standing. Aluminum is more artificial than wood and there is fear the meticulously maintained field would lose much of its Cooperstown-like appeal.

Beyond the left-field fence are the batting cages, there for the more than 500 kids between the ages of 5-18 who want to brush up on their swings or just plain get in some extra batting practice. From Sunday to Saturday the field is alive in a sea of movement, drama and color as more than 25 games are played on the field, 10 in the Major League alone.

Starting to get the overall picture? Little League is alive and well in the small seaside community with teams for players of all ages and abilities. There is currently a farm, minor and major league. Two pony league teams also field rosters. The LandSharks are an extension of the league and field high-school age players.

The girls softball league, run by Susan Carr, is flourishing with its nearly 150 players and there is also a District 8 traveling squad.

John Carr, who served as president of the league from 1991-94, has seen a number of changes during that span. "When I first got involved in '91, we had 200 kids," Carr said. "Now there are over 500 kids so it has grown."

Obviously, with so many kids involved in the program and the array of teams, Barnes Field is a hot bed of activity during the summer months. "It's real tight," Carr said. "That field is being used constantly."

When the regular season winds down and the All-Star squads are selected, Cohasset teams take to the road in various tournaments. And despite the town's size, the players give a heck of a lot more than a token challenge against towns that are bigger with more youngsters to draw from.

"For a town our size, we have done very well against towns much bigger. I'm not saying we win all our games but we hold our own," Carr said.

Changes have also been made to improve the field. Batting cages, a pitching machine and a sprinkler system have all been added and there has been talk about lights being erected for additional night games.

"It has always been an idea," Moody said, "it's just a matter of doing it."

The concession stand, which has been renovated, is always a big draw on any evening at the ballpark. The stand has proven to be profitable as well, having grossed approximately $3,800 in a single month.

Opening Day for Little League is always a big day for players and parents alike and in Cohasset it remains one of the biggest events of the spring. League organizers spare nothing in making the field look extra special.

The field is decorated handsomely with five flags along the left-field line and another five down right field. Red, white and blue is draped over the outfield fence, giving the field an All-American, apple pie feel to it. The setting, with trees beyond the outfield fences and a winding street well-behind home plate could make one feel as though he is a character in a Rockwell painting.

"It really was Americana," Moody said, thinking back to this year's annual parade of players and coaches, followed by the ceremony at the field. "It makes you feel really good about the field."

One big fan and supporter of the league is State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset). Murray has thrown out the first ball for several years. This year she admitted home plate looks further away every year. Nevertheless, it didn't stop Murray from throwing a nasty pitch to hit.

"I just let it fly," she said with a laugh. "I hit the inside corner for a strike."

Murray's association with the league runs deeper than her popularity as an elected official. Her father, Nate Hur-

Girls get second chance in tennis tourney

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

If nothing else, the Cohasset High girls tennis team will go down in the books as the only team to be allowed a double-elimination in the Division 2 South Sectional tourney.

Just days after losing a close match to Canton, 3-2, the Skippers learned it would be them and not the Bulldogs who would be facing South Shore League rival Scituate in the next round.

So how could that be? It seems Canton forfeited its victory over Cohasset when it was learned that an ineligible player participated in the match against the Skippers.

Cohasset head coach didn't find out about the forfeit until Monday night. Scituate was warming up when its squad was notified by athletic director Leo Liatsos that the Skippers would be the team to beat and not the Bulldogs.

Cohasset and Scituate had split their season series 1-1, but it was the Sailors who won the rubber match with a decisive 4-1 victory. Cohasset finished its season with a none too shabby 13-3 record.

"We were glad to have another chance," said Meehan. "I was hoping to win two matches. They were looking to win but Scituate was the better team."

Cohasset had to settle for one, however, as All-Stars Karen Niessink, whose older sister Kristin received a varsity letter, and Kristin O'Connell teamed up at No. 1 doubles to win their match 0-6, 6-3, 6-0. The Skippers also received a strong showing from Alexis Zerendis, who lost in straight sets but not before pushing her opponent to the limit, 4-6, 5-7.

Meehan said the team was a little rusty after believing its season was over and didn't seem to be overly motivated for the match. Meehan, however, held a long team meeting with the squad and it did the trick in getting the Skippers back in the tourney mode.

I've been watching as many state tourney games as possible and the following are a few observations worth sharing.

*Whenever a batter hits a foul pop in a baseball or softball game every fan watches to see if the ball will hit a car. I've seen a couple fouls bounce off roofs and door panels but I've yet to see one hit pay-dirt and shatter a window. Maybe if I keep my fingers crossed and think happy thoughts my dream will come true.

*Softball players have the most fun. First of all, the girls' in high school softball don't have to wear hats like the boys do in baseball so you can actually see the expressions on their faces. Most look very happy on the diamond. Softball players also high five each other after every tough catch or base hit. They genuinely want to see their teammates do well and they show their gratitude. And lastly, high school softball players always seem to bring lots of snacks and beverages to the games. I've seen grapes, sliced oranges, pretzels as well as Gatorade, ice water and soda this year alone. By the way, bring a sportswriter a snack and maybe he or she will write something nice. (P.S. I like pizza and nachos.)

*The MIAA still needs a dope-slap for some of their dumb tourney rules. For example, why do Division I baseball teams have to play nine innings in the post-season after playing seven inning regular season games. No other division in high school baseball or softball plays nine innings in the tourney. What's next. four periods for Division I ice hockey games.

*And one more slap for the MIAA. Why aren't there any linesman used in high school tennis matches until the state tourney finals? As it is now, the players on the court make the call on a ball being witz, was one of the league founders back in the 1950's and recognized there was a need for activities for the town's youngsters.

"They wanted to get something going for the kids in town," Murray said. "There wasn't much for the kids back then."

The league had humble beginnings with eight Major League teams before the Pony League started in the late '50s.

Baseball flourished for several years but eventually began to wane, as the number of kids in the league decreased. Murray's husband, Phil Murray Sr., breathed life back into the league and, as a coach, came up with rules he followed to benefit the kids.

"Phil made sure every player played two innings and every 12-year-old played in the majors.

If there were few activities for boys, there were even less for girls. Murray was one of the lucky ones. She is happy to see a softball league was implemented within Cohasset. "I was the only girls allowed in the boy scouts so naturally I'm pleased there's a girls softball league," she said.

More recently, Barnes Field began to have more renovations done. There are now clearly marked foul poles down both lines to eliminate arguments as to whether or not a ball is fair or foul. The decision to erect the poles was clearly motivated by a controversial incident in the Major League championship three years ago between the Dodgers and Pirates.

The series was tied 1-1 in the double-elimination series. With the bases loaded in Game 3, one of the Pirates drilled a pitch down the left-field line. Carr said he was in a perfect spot to see the ball was "about five-feet foul." Unfortunately, the umpire thought differently and the hit was ruled a grand slam. The Pirates went on to win, but the Dodgers came back with a vengeance the following year to post a 22-0 record and easily win the town title.

Ironically, as much as he supports and puts his time into the Little League program, Moody is somewhat saddened by the fact he sees fewer and fewer kids playing pick-up games amongst themselves.

"When I was a kid and they had Little League, we all still played on our own," Moody said. "Now you don't have a game unless there are coaches, uniforms and umpires. You never see pick-up games anymore and I think that's sad."

Moody remembers how excited he was as a youngster to receive his official team hat, making him an official member of a team.

"It was very important to get that hat when I was a kid," he said. "That's the comparison I can make between what it was then and what it is now."

Cohasset Little League has served as an excellent feeder system into the high school program, but because the school is so small, the not all the players are selected to a team. On top of that, lacrosse has become the king of the spring sports season for boys. Moody believes many of the top baseball players wind up on the lacrosse team.

"Kids who are baseball players go out for lacrosse because it's like football and they like the fast pace and aggressiveness," Moody said.

Both Moody and Carr believe lacrosse is a quality sport and can fully understand its attraction. But deep down, the two think baseball is the superior sport.

"Lacrosse players are players afraid to get hit by a baseball," Carr said. It doesn't take as much thought to play. Baseball is more of a cerebral sport.

"That's the thing about baseball that's unique. I think it involves a lot more thinking than most sports. It's the one true sport."

During his five years of coaching the minor leagues, Carr has dozens of bizarre, funny stories that have stuck with him. One year he told Eric Libby, [illegible]n an eight-year-old, how to run the b[illegible]s if he hit the ball in play. Carr explained to Libby that if he saw him waving his arms at first base, it was Libby's signal to continue to second base.

Libby then proceeded to drill a pitch past the outfielders that should have been an easy double at the least. As Libby approached first base and while Carr was waving his arms frantically for him to continue to second, Libby came to an inexplicable stop. He looked down and there was no first base. First baseman Sammy Dolph was smiling ear to ear and said to Carr, "Pretty smart, eh coach?"

On another occasion Carr was looking for the on-deck batter, Pat O'Hare. After searching all over for him, Carr finally spotted O'Hare...nearly at the top of a pine tree in the outfield...waving with delight.

"We skipped him and went on to the next batter," said Carr with a laugh.

John Rolandelli, who coached from 1982-1994, was part of the movement to bring the Pony League back and integrate it with Scituate. In 1993 a Senior League began for 16- to 18-year-olds. A year later the LandSharks, a Senior Babe Ruth team was formed and was an immediate success from the start. The team defeated Canton to win the South Shore League Babe Ruth Championship. Three players from the squad, Nick Welz, Chris Rolandelli and Brendan Kinchla were selected to the South Shore All-Star team and beat the North Shore in tournament play with Rolandelli driving in the winning run.

Rolandelli points to the parents who give up their time and put in several hours with the league as a major reason it has flourished.

"The enthusiasm has been growing over the years," he said. "There's a lot more parents and coach participation.

"The league seems to be moving right along."

Skippers baseball wrap-up

Jim O'Sullivan

Cohasset baseball moves ahead

By Jim O'Sullivan
Mariner correspondent

Nick Welz's 77th varsity baseball game had a bittersweet ending. The Skippers lost the game to the Carver Crusaders, but Cohasset's senior captain closed his high school career by bashing a home run, much like Ted Williams' last at-bat.

Welz hit .378, the team's leading batter, with two home runs, along with some key pitching stints. Snubbed by the league All-Star voters, Welz performed solidly and led the team, according to head coach Ron Ford.

"Nick's leadership really helped us this year," Ford said. "He really started hitting, giving us some help with the long ball, and just stepping up when we needed it."

But Welz wasn't alone in his excellent play. Senior shortstop Brendan Kinchla also received praise from Ford.

"Bubba has the best hands of any player I've ever coached," he said. "He's very smooth and a lot of other coaches have said the same thing. Bubba's got fantastic instincts and he had the uncanny ability to make the big play. He always makes the big play."

Jonah Berger, sidelined for a portion of the season with a hand injury, was the Skippers' catcher. "Jonah was very solid behind the plate for us. His defense was a key for us," Ford said.

Ford was also very excited about his junior-hurler Greg Stevens. Stevens, who was also left off the All-Star team, checked in with a 2.77 ERA and smacked the ball at a .275 clip.

"Greg was our big horse," Ford said. "He won five in a row and has been our best pitcher the last two years. I'm definitely looking for big things from him next year."

Eric Henry, a junior outfielder, was Cohasset's second leading hitter with a .333 average. This from a player who, according to Ford, hadn't played competitive baseball since his Little League days. Ford called Henry "a major talent, a big surprise for us. Eric is going to be very, very good next season."

Sophomore Kevin McKenna, a first baseman who also plays soccer and hockey, was another Skipper who deserved to play on the All-Star team but was denied. McKenna was one of the most consistent members of Ford's crew, hitting the cover off the ball at the rate of .296. McKenna should put up big numbers for CHS for the next two years.

Despite Cohasset's 8-12 record, the best in years, and just missing the state tournament, Ford seemed more excited about the future. Time and time again, Ford repeated, "This year, we've set the standard. From now on, this program will only improve."

Welz also talked eagerly of Cohasset's youth. "From here on up, we're only going to improve. It's a credit to the Little League program. We've got guys who have been playing together since they were 8. The unity's there, and kids are building up their skills. We're going to be good."

In two years, when Cohasset is competing for a state title, the seeds of success can be traced back to this season. Or can it go as far back as when Cohasset brought in the tandem of coaches Ron Ford and Bob Knurek to rebuild the program? In two years, Knurek and Ford have turned around a perennial doormat program, into a competitive squad.

So, while Berger, Kinchla and Welz should be praised for their excellent careers at CHS, Cohasset baseball should look ahead to the future and anticipate next year's team, which will bring back a squad that started two juniors, three sophomores, and one eighth-grader this year. Cohasset baseball is on the rise.

out or in. Can you imagine if John McEnroe was calling his own shots at the U.S. Open? Every call would be in his favor. It is time for some changes in the rules. Players calling their opponents shot can lead to arguments, catcalls from the fans and possibly some sort of riot. Tennis is always fun until a riot breaks out.

*Some teams have really come alive in the post-season. The 9-9 Silver Lake baseball team rolled to back-to-back victories against Hingham and Bridgewater-Raynham last Thursday and Friday to reach the quarter-final round. And the Abington High softball team pulled a HUGE upset against Randolph in the opening round. As they say, you never know what's going to happen until you get out on the field and play.

*As for the athletes, there are a few who you can't help but watch every time they are on the field or court. They might strike out or make an error but you still watch them because you never know when they will do something special.

We in the sportswriting profession call this charisma. Reggie Jackson had it for the Yankees way back and Jose Canseco (when he's not injured) has it today for the Sox.

At the high school level some of these charismatic athletes include:

Norwell High super twins Meg and Amy Barao. On Monday the dynamic duo led the Lady Clippers to a first round win the Division III softball state tourney against Holbrook. Both hit, ran and cheered their team to victory and had a blast along the way. By the way, both Meg and Amy are two standout basketball and soccer players as well. However, I still cannot tell them apart without guessing.

Silver Lake centerfielder Chris Watson is also on the list. He is a big reason why the Lakers are the surprise of the Division I South bracket. This senior centerfielder can hit the ball as far as anyone and can run like a deer. He won the OCL batting crown as a sophomore and junior and was named MVP of the league this year.

*Hingham High lacrosse players Rich Santoro, Mike Sheridan and Tim Brett have charisma on the field as well. This high-scoring trio can light up a scoreboard the way Espo, Hodge and Cashman used to with the Bruins. All three are fast, crafty and lethal around the goal. Hingham has an excellent chance of winning the state crown. And as Phil Esposito once said when asked about playing defense: "If I score four goals and the other team only scores three, who wins?"

LACROSSE SKILL DEVELOPMENT CLINICS FOR GRADES 4, 5, AND 6

The Cohasset recreation department will accept telephone registrations at their office, at 383-6791, for an evening lacrosse skill development program, designed for youngsters who will enter grades 4, 5 and 6 in Sept., 1995.

Lacrosse clinics are designed to teach fundamental skills and concepts of lacrosse and will meet Tuesday and Thursday evenings, 6:30 to 8 p.m., at Osgood School Field, beginning Tuesday, June 13, through Thursday, June 29.

This specialized developmental program will be instructed by local college and high school lacrosse players and the fee will be $26 per person for the six sessions. Participants will need a helmet and lacrosse stick to enroll. Other equipment will be unnecessary as no contact scrimmages will be held.

APPLICATIONS FOR SOUTH SHORE SOCCER CAMP — 1995

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8-18. This is South Shore Soccer Camp's fifth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering for South Shore Soccer Camp, it is suggested that you write to the Cohasset Recreation Department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791 in the near future, to be assured enrollment.

South Shore Soccer Camp will be offered to both girls and boys during the weeks of Monday to Friday, July 31 to Aug. 4, and Aug. 7 to Aug. 11. Should a camper wish to attend both camp weeks, this will now be possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camp weeks must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Mondays to Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The cost for camp is $165 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available. South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players from the New England area.

VIP SOCCER CAMP REGISTRATIONS

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp, for children ages 4 to 7 years.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, ages 4 to 7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for 4- and 5-year-olds and meets 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday to Friday, July 17 to 21. The cost is $40 for the week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour per day program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday to Friday, July 17 to 21, for 6- and 7-year-olds. The cost is $70 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the front field of Cohasset High School.

BASEBALL CAMP

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages 5 to 12 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset town hall.

The South Shore Baseball Club has been contracted again this year to provide baseball camp, which will be held the week of Monday, June 26, at Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., camp for ages 7 and over and a half day, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5- and 6-year-olds.

The week long camp costs $120 per child for the full-day program, and $70 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Friday, June 30.

The South Shore Baseball Club, located at the South Shore Sports Center, Hingham, operates year round baseball instruction and has baseball camp for Cohasset Recreation for five years.

Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for baseball camp on a space available basis and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor of Cohasset town hall.

The Golden Girls are King's Jewelers' jewels

By Susan Cox
Special to the Mariner

The Golden Girls softball team has shown promise and progress over the last few outings. Amanda Cowing has done double duty in the field and as catcher, with Amanda Watts sharing the catching duties. Pitching for the Golden Girls has been splendid work for Meredith Ronan, Kristen Devine and Ashley Leahy, who happens to hold one of the biggest bats for the team. Sarah Donovan's bat has come a long way this year as have her fielding abilities. Sharing the outfield with Sarah, both Cara Foley and Kelsey Henderson have proven that the squad has what it takes to field a fine team. Infield positions have been rotated among Maureen Equi on first, Zoe Davis on second, and Megan Cox, with her big throwing arm, at third. Shortstop has been reserved for Danielle Kupsc who has made several crucial plays from midfield. Anna Roche, the newest softball recruit, has been sidelined by a broken wrist, but has come to bat and is enjoying learning the game. Kerin Kearney rounds out the rotation and can be used wherever needed. The Golden Girls, sponsored by King's Jewelers, are looking forward to a great second half of the season as they move into playoff contention.

The Pink Panthers step out strong

By Irene Barry
Special to the Mariner

The Pink Panthers finally got their hats and they are playing like a new team! Not even the threat of thundershowers could deter the enthusiasm at Barnes Field Saturday.

Lindsey Feig fielded the first hit of the afternoon with finesse. Marisa Mello followed it up with a split off the pitcher's mound to stop the next play. Debra Regan kept the runs down with a great performance as catcher at home plate. Caitlin Gontarz moved the game forward with a double play early in the game. The girls had a solid third inning with hitting and scoring by Marisa Mello, Corey Evans, Lindsey Feig and Meghan Marr. With a fast catch to stop the play on each throw in the fourth inning, Corey Evans looked like a pro at first base. Maura McKenny and Courtney McDonald closed the fourth with strategic teamwork at shortstop and third base. Outfield was always safe from a score with Carling Sturino and Calla Staszko covering their territory. Gillian Weber's outrageous hit in the sixth inning kept her team cheering in the dugout until she came home. The opposition found it harder to score by the end of the game against the impressive performance Frannie Noble gave at second base. The Panthers were looking to Lindsey Dean for a repeat of her triple play against the Lady Bugs earlier in the week. She showed her teammates what fielding is really about.

Although missing from this week's game, the memory of great plays at first base at the hands and glove of Gillian Simons reminded the girls just how good a team they are.

Keep your eyes open for a season of teamwork and good ol'-fashioned fun with the Pink Panthers. They make Judy's Candyland proud!

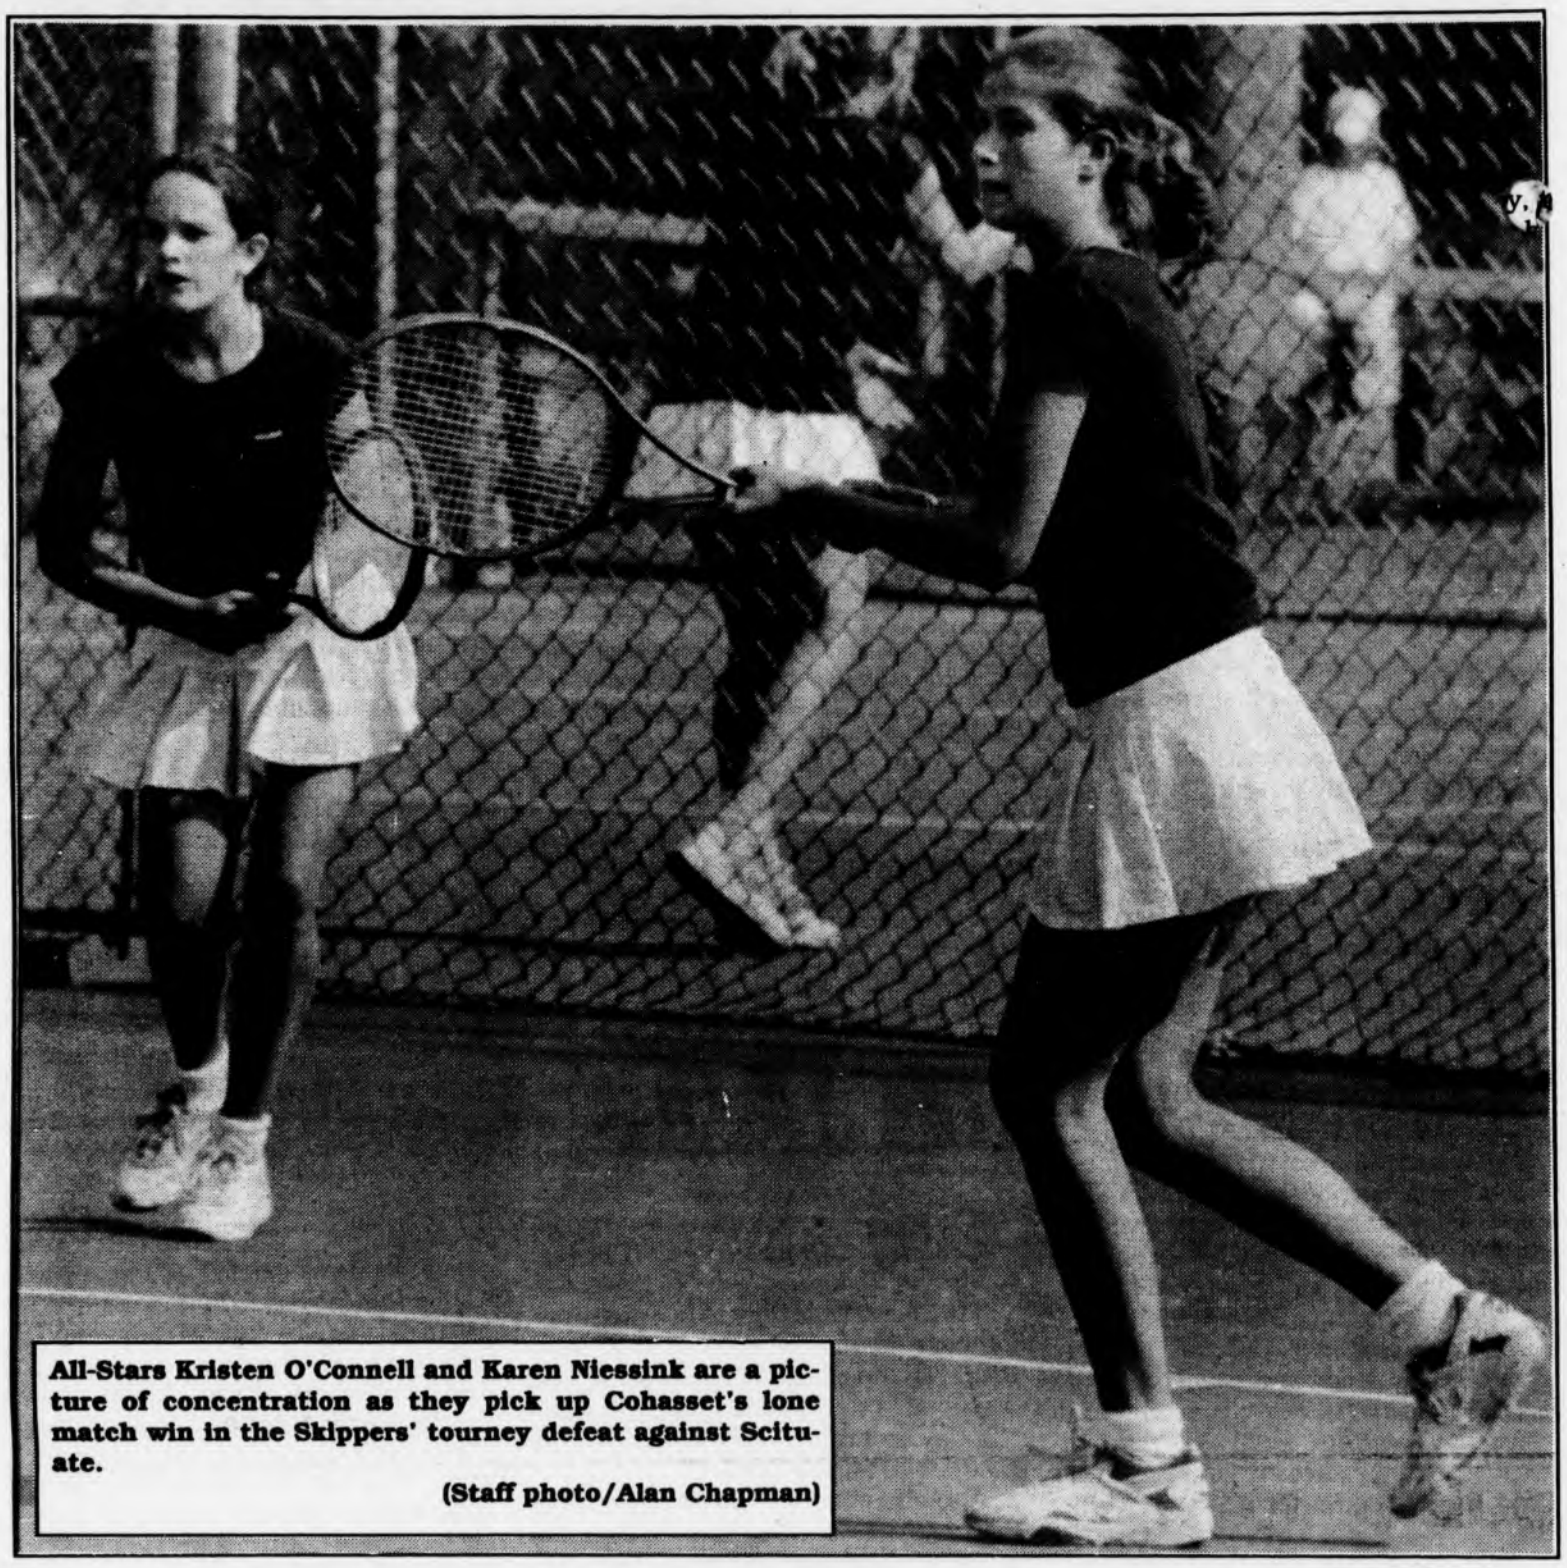
Conditioning camps set for June

For those South Shore athletes looking to improve their overall strength and conditioning, they need go no further than Scituate resident Mark Conroy.

A former captain of the Sailors' football team and the strength and conditioning coach at Boston College High School for the past seven years, Conroy will be directing two camps in June at B.C. High's facility with the intention of "attracting and energizing as many South Shore public school athletes as possible."

Along with Conroy, the camp will be headed by a professional staff, including John Parker, the New England Patriots' strength coach; Mike Boyle — Boston University and Bruins' strength coach and Jon Josh, the strengh coach at Holy Cross.

The camps will be held from 5-9 p.m. on June 12-16 and June 26-30. For more information on the camps, call 617-436-3900 (Ext. 73 or 77) or 617-545-3176.



All-Stars Kristen O'Connell and Karen Niessink are a picture of concentration as they pick up Cohasset's lone match win in the Skippers' tourney defeat against Scituate.

Rec. Dept. offers program

The Cohasset Recreation Department is sponsoring a Summer Playground Program from Wednesday, July 5 through Saturday, Aug. 19.

Age cut-offs, times and fees are as follows: three- and four-year-old program — Aug. 31, 1990 through March 1, 1992 (9:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., $115); 1/2-day five-year-old program — March 1, 1989 through Sept. 1, 1990 (9 a.m. to 1 p.m., $125/$225); full-day five- through 12-year-old program — Aug. 31, 1982 through March 1, 1989 (9 a.m. to 3 p.m., $140/$240).

There is a $25 non-refundable activity fee.

Three named to tennis All-Star squad

Laura Slotnick, Karen Niessink and Kristin O'Connell were all voted by league coaches to the South Shore League's 1995 All-Star Tennis Team. Slotnick, an 11th-grader, was selected to the squad for the second consecutive year in singles, while Niessink and seventh-grader O'Connell were picked for girls doubles. Scituate and Norwell had seven selections each. Norwell won the Girls Tennis Sportsmanship Award and Carver garnered the award for the boys.

SECOND MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Second Mortgage given by James Hegarty, a/k/a James K. Hegarty, Trustee of Tessahoc Realty Trust under declaration of trust dated December 30, 1991 and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 9185, Page 25 to Peter Grahame Wade (the "Mortgagee") dated July, 1993, and recorded with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 10017, Page 115, of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of the conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing, the same will be sold at Public Auction at 2:00 P.M., June 20, 1995, on the mortgaged premises described below, being known as 103 South Main Street, Cohasset, Massachusetts and all singular premises described in said mortgage,

To wit: The land in Cohasset, being the premises shown as Lot B on a plan entitled "Plan of Land, Cohasset, Mass.", dated August 21, 1943, drawn by Joseph Selwyn, C.E. recorded in Norfolk Registry of Deeds at Book 2470, Page 426, said lot being bounded and described as follows:

NORTHEASTERLY by South Main Street, 50.33 feet;

EASTERLY by a curve forming the intersection of South Main Street and Spring Street, 20.15 feet;

SOUTHEASTERLY by Spring Street, 65.76 feet;

SOUTHERLY by land marked "Benjamin F. and Christine M. Curley" and as indicated on said plan 112.36 feet;

WESTERLY by said land marked "Benjamin F. and Christine M. Curley" and in part by land marked "Katherine B. Noonan" as indicated on said plan, 51.16 feet, and

NORTHWESTERLY by Lot A as indicated on said plan, 141.56 feet.

Containing 12,299 square feet of land according to said plan. Together with a right of way to pass and repass to and from South Main Street which right of way is more particularly described in Certificate of Title No. 54545 registered with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds at Book 273, Page 145. The property is currently owned by Richard A. Bunstein by deed dated March 29, 1995 and recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Book 10854, Page 308.

The Mortgagee reserves the right to postpone the sale to a later date by public proclamation at the time and the date appointed for the sale and to further postpone the sale to later date at any adjourned sale date by public proclamation at the time and the date appointed for the adjourned sale date.

Said premises will be sold subject to and with the benefit of all restrictions, easements, improvements, variances, special permits, outstanding tax titles, mortgages, UCC financing statements, liens, rights of tenants and parties in possession, unpaid taxes, unpaid water and sewer bills, municipal liens and other public taxes, assessments or liens, having priority over the mortgage described herein, if any, including, without limitation, a tax taking by the Town of Cohasset recorded in Book 8889, Page 313; Land Court Tax Lien Case No. 101869 T.L.; and Notice of Lis Pendens recorded in Book 10716, Page 124. This is a Second Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate sold subject to the lien of a first mortgage currently held by Pauline V. Emilson, by assignment dated May 6, 1992 and recorded in Book 9343, Page 309.

In the event that the successful bidder at the foreclosure sale shall default in purchasing the within described property according to the terms of this notice of sale and/or the terms of the memorandum of sale executed at the time of the foreclosure, the Mortgagee reserves the right to sell the property by Foreclosure Deed to the second highest bidder provided that the second highest bidder shall deposit with the Mortgagee's attorneys, Palmer & Dodge, the amount of the required deposit set forth herein within three (3) business days after written notice of default of the previous highest bidder and title shall be conveyed to said second highest bidder within twenty (20) days of said written notice.

Terms of sale: TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS ($10,000.00) will be required to be paid in cash or by certified check at the time and place of sale as earnest money. The balance is to be paid in cash or by certified check within twenty (20) days of the date of the sale and shall be deposited in escrow with the firm of Palmer & Dodge at One Beacon Street, Boston, MA, pending recording of the Foreclosure Deed and related documents.

Other terms, if any, to be announced at the sale.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

The gardens at the home of Lena and Ron Goldberg, 15 Nichols Road, are a magnificent display of springtime color. The sweeping lawns have curved garden beds perfectly placed, skillfully lizing the natural curve and flow of the land property has been so artistically landscapec the house and property have become one – perfect site — a pleasure to behold. A Japanese red maple anchors the front bed as it sweeps up the gentle hill filled with daffodils; tulips of yellow, red, oranges and pinks; Basket of Gold with its brilliant golden yellow blooms; and other perennial favorites. Maple trees nearer the street are surrounded by beds of either yellow or red tulips. Be sure to take a walk by to enjoy this picture-perfect setting.

Student protest held for the benefit of Mr.Kite

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The last day of classes Tuesday is one that English teacher William Kite won't soon forget.

Although he may not be back next year, about 70 junior & senior high school students gave Kite a send-off that was geared to get attention.

The English department head, who has taught for 20 years at the high school, is being laid off or "RIF-fed," education jargon for Reduction in Force.

Supt. Stephen Hart said the issue is clear cut. Kite is the least senior member of the English department and therefore contractually has to be the first to go unless there's a significant difference in teacher performance among the members of the department.

Hart said fewer English sections next year necessitate the reduction of one teacher in the nine-member department. He said under the con-

Sergio Munoz, Ryan Sawchuk and Jessica Slotnick lead the student protest Tuesday. About 70 junior/senior high school students and 30 teachers demonstrated in front of the school against the Reduction in Force (RIF) of 20-year teaching veteran William Kite.

Selectmen hear revived Deck Point project plans

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

After hearing very tentative plans for 90 moderate and market rate townhouse apartments proposed for Route 3A, near the site of the previously-proposed Deck Point subdivision, selectmen unanimously agreed to a philosophical endorsement of mixed-income housing in Cohasset.

Chartis Langmaid, chairman of the housing partnership committee, asked for a general endorsement so that discussions with the developer interested in the parcel could continue.

Selectman Jane Goedecke initiated the general statement, which said the board "reconfirms its willingness to comply with the executive order on affordable housing and to work the with local housing partnership and other committees."

(The order she referred to was issued some ten years ago by the state and mandates that the town come up with affordable housing equal to ten percent of its housing stock. Executive secretary Gregory Doyon told the Mariner in February, 1990, that Cohasset had 2,512 housing units at the time and would need some 170 units to meet the state figure of 275 affordable units.)

90 UNITS PLANNED

Langmaid explained that she and Lois Weltman, also of the housing partnership committee, recently met with realtor Kathleen Douglas, who is marketing the

Planning board expected to support Shaw's

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Baring some unforeseen circumstance, the planning board will approve the Shaw's supermarket proposed for Cushing Plaza next week.

The discussion has been scheduled for 8 p.m. Wednesday, June 21 on the second floor of town hall.

Last week planning board chairman Alfred Moore told Shaw's representatives the board was not ready to vote on the plan then because he wanted to work on the language of the various conditions the board intends to attach to their approval.

Moore said that in order to reduce the possibility of a lawsuit, he wanted the wording of the approval to be correct.

"A lot of people are watching very closely what goes on here. I'd like to get it (wording) right," he said. "We'd like it to be as professionally done as possible."

Moore said "We're agreed in principal," adding that planners would only consider the wording of the approval and conditions. Further public comment will not be considered.

Fire alarms out of service

The Fire Department has announced that on Tuesday, June 20, the town municipal fire alarm system will be out of service for alterations. All municipal fire alarm boxes will be out of service. Alterations to the system are necessary to complete the implementation of centralized dispatch services, Fire Chief Roger W. Lincoln said. For more information, please call the fire department's business number 383-0616.

Harbor duties are split

In the wake of the resignation of harbormaster Shawn Kelly, selectmen have agreed to temporarily split the duties of that office between Police Chief Brian Noonan and Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon.

Upon learning of Kelly's resignation, Noonan sent a June 8 letter to selectmen offering his services and pointing out that in the past, the police department was in charge of harbor security patrols.

After a brief discussion, selectmen agreed that administrative harbor matters, such as maintenance of the list of those waiting for boat mooring space, should be handled by Doyon.

In the meantime, they gave Doyon the all-clear, so he can advertise the position in the Mariner and other local papers. Doyon said the ideal candidate should live in the area.

Selectmen did not refer to a June 7 letter from Fritz Pfaffmann, chairman of the harbor committee, which urged that John Winters be appointed harbormaster.

Pfaffman said Winters is the unanimous choice of the committee.

According to Pfaffman, the position does not have to be advertised. He said the position must be filled as soon as possible with the approach of the busy summer season.

Cohasset's past promoted

The historical society will sell T-shirts displaying Minot's Lighthouse, as well as pins and other items celebrating Cohasset's glorious past, from a booth at town hall during this weekend's arts festival.

Selectmen approved the booth at their Monday night meeting.

Appointments are voted

Selectmen this week appointed John P. Conroy of Atlantic Ave. to fill a vacancy on the council on aging.

Four were named to the drug and alcohol committee. Ellie Wall, Mary Mack and Clark Chatterton will fill two-year terms, while Keith Knowles will fill a one-year position.

A representative from the police department will likely be named soon and a student representative will be elected by high school students in the fall.

Cope named to concom

To replace Robin Grinnell, who is resigning from the conservation commission effective June 31, selectmen this week picked Susan Cope, who is now an associate member of that board.

Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said he has spoken with Cope and is impressed with her intelligence and enthusiasm. Other selectmen and conservation commission chairman Roseanne McMorris, who was at the meeting, agreed with Brown.

Cope will become a full commission member July 1.

Henderson is reappointed

With no discussion, selectmen reappointed Richard Henderson town counsel by a three to two vot[illegible]land.

Selectmen Jane Goedecke, Merle Brown and M[illegible]ael Sullivan voted for the appointment, while Peter Pratt and Martha Gjesteby voted no.

Later in the evening, Pratt said the town has not been getting adequate legal advice (see related story) on certain issues, such as the open meeting law.

Gjesteby said later that she is not displeased with Henderson, but wants to investigate other possible legal alternatives in an effort to reduce legal costs, in particular the use of special counsels to supplement town counsel on particular cases.

Selectmen also approved a $3,774 bill from Henderson.

We're not surprised that the big Boston banks are showing interest in the South Shore.

Recently, it seems, those big Boston banks have discovered something we've known since 1834.

South Shore people are wonderful people.

So the big Boston banks have been infesting the South Shore in a feeding frenzy. And after devouring local banks, they end up offering customers higher fees and impersonal service.

HINGHAM INSTITUTION FOR SAVINGS
ESTABLISHED 1834

Maybe that's why more and more people are opening accounts at the Hingham Institution for Savings. We're one of the South Shore's oldest banks and we know what South Shore people want in banking services. And how they want to be treated.

Two new school principals to come on board

The Cohasset School Department has appointed two new principals for the Deer Hill and Junior/Senior High School.

Donna M. Hartlage of Plymouth has been hired at a salary in the $50,000 to $60,000 range as principal of the Deer Hill School.

Curtis Collins of Marshfield has been hired at a salary in the $60,000 to $70,000 range as principal of the Junior/Senior High School, Supt. Stephen Hart said.

Hartlage, who holds a bachelor's degree from North Adams State and a master's from Bridgewater State, is an administrator with the Chelsea Public Schools and replaces Kenneth Ekberg who took an early retirement last fall. Ekberg served as principal of Deer Hill for 20 years, Hart said.

"She has a great deal of enthusiasm and a really strong background in elementary education as an administrator and a teacher," Hart said about Hartlage.

Collins, who taught English at Cohasset High and served as head of the English department prior to becoming an administrator, is principal of Dennis-Yarmouth Regional High School. He replaces Mary Ellen Gallagher who is resigning as principal of the junior/senior high to accept a position as assistant superintendent of schools in Hanover, New Hampshire.

"Collins has a great deal of administrative experience working in a high school," Hart said.

Collins, who was named 1995 principal of the year by the Massachusetts Secondary School Administrators, is on the Carnegie Commission for the Restructuring of the American High School for the 21st Century and serves on the state Department of Education Advisory Committee for the Professional Development of Principals.

Both candidates were picked from a pool of about 40 applicants each.

Harborfest raffle winners

Monday night's selectmen's meeting started on a cheery note as the winners of the Harborfest raffle prizes were announced.

Selectmen and others in the room pulled names from a box and Robert Martin announced the lucky winners, who were: T.P. Bulu, III, Robins Garage, Shirley Twekesbury, Sue Grant, Chartis Langmaid, Helene Thornton, Daniel Martin and Greg Thornton.

Town accountant praised

J. Michael Buckley, Jr. is doing an excellent job as town accountant and should be reappointed, selectmen agreed Monday night. They will soon begin negotiations with Buckley for a new contract.

In addition, they voted to give him a 2-1/2 percent pay increase for the remainder of his current contract.

During the calendar year 1994, Buckley received $39,908.99.

"He (Buckley) continues to be a significant asset to the Town of Cohasset," said Selectman Michael Sullivan.

Selectman Jane Goedecke praised Buckley's "creativity" and his "willingness to initiate" new ideas. "We are very happy," she said.

Harbor project funding

During their marathon meeting Monday night, selectmen unanimously approved an additional $2,000, so Nucci & Vine Marine Engineers will be able to take sediment samples from the section of the harbor between the Roy estate and the Cohasset Yacht Club.

A state grant will reimburse the town for $1,500 of the appropriation, according to executive secretary Gregory Doyon.

Selectmen still in uproar over 'confidential' letter

By David Johnson
Mariner correspondent

Despite a ruling from the secretary of state that the document in question was public, three selectmen remain furious that Selectman Martha Gjesteby released a letter outlining a possible settlement of the Cohasset Heights Landfill lawsuits against the town.

The board is clearly trying to get the town's case against (CHL) back on track, and officials will meet with the town's lawyers to discuss the case Monday, June 19 at 7:30 p.m. at town hall.

Although selectmen tried to keep the discussion focused Monday night, intense feelings about the subject erupted anyway, marring the meeting with a nasty half-hour fight.

This was only the latest in a series of bitter exchanges which indicate a seriously divided board.

Town counsel Richard Henderson appeared toward the end of the long meeting to announce the need to discuss the CHL lawsuits.

Noting that the town has gotten sidetracked on what he called "procedural issues," Henderson said, "There's a need to spend some serious legal time," on the subject.

He suggested the June 19 meeting, in which selectmen, the board of health and the conservation commission could talk with himself and Michael Leon, of the blue-chip Boston firm, Warner & Stackpole, which has represented the town in the two legal actions brought by CHL.

Selectman Peter Pratt, who earlier in the evening was one of two selectmen voting not to renew Henderson's contract, wanted to know if the meeting would be held in public.

"Yes it is an open session," Henderson replied, adding that some issues involving legal strategy might have to be held in executive session.

In what appeared to be a move to cover himself in the event of a likely legal challenge, Henderson stated that he will tell the Norfolk County District Attorney's office in advance what items are likely to be discussed in executive session.

"I'm going to do what's right and not be pushed around," he said. "Some discussion might be detrimental to the town's position."

A legal challenge to any executive session discussion appears likely.

John McNabb, a member of a group opposed to further expansion of the landfill, SAFE, has filed a complaint with the district attorney's office over the selectman's use of executive session. The DA has asked for the minutes of an executive session held on May 3 between selectmen, the board of health and conservation commission.

Selectmen had intended to go into executive session Monday to discuss changes in those minutes, [illegible]ch Gjesteby requested, but none of the board members would make the necessary motion and questions about those minutes remain unresolved.

Pratt then told Henderson that no selectman had ever doubted the need to go into executive session when necessary.

However, Pratt told Henderson that the question arose over what documents were public.

"I believe you and special counsel had a misconception - " Pratt stated.

"I never had any misconception," Henderson fired back, adding that he had simply wanted to the state to rule on the particular letter in question.

At this point, Roseanne McMorris, conservation commission chairman, stood up to say that her board did not want to meet with selectmen.

She explained that the first lawsuit filed by CHL was not brought against the conservation commission

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

THE RIGHT PRICE

QUESTION: How do I go about setting the right price to sell my house? My neighbors' and friends' suggestions vary by thousands of dollars – not even close.

ANSWER: What your house is worth is not what you think it is, or what the buyer might think it is. Its true value is determined by its location, the general economic climate, the current local real estate situation, the age of the property and the wear and tear it has seen.

Call in a well-established local REALTOR for this vital determination. He or she is in constant touch with the local market and KNOWS what homes are selling and at what price.

Selectmen still in uproar over 'confidential' letter itself, or against the town, but rather it named the seven individuals, including herself, who were serving at the time.

She said they were being represented by Leon through the town's legal insurance policy.

(The second suit brought against the town over the delineation of the water protection district is a separate issue. In that suit, CHL claims the water district incorrectly includes part of the landfill.)

"It is our feeling that this is not working effectively," she stated. "We want to meet with our lawyer. The conservation commission is not interested in meeting with the other two boards."

McMorris went on to state that the commission had made substantial progress in settling the lawsuit when it was working independently with Leon.

"We were deeply disturbed that one member of this board took it upon herself to violate the confidentiality - " she said.

"I disagree," Gjesteby interjected.

"I know you do," McMorris replied and she repeated her point that they were being sued as individuals and wanted the case against them settled.

Selectman Michael Sullivan agreed with McMorris.

"There was a break of trust," he stated. " . . . there is no longer a comfort level in working together."

"I reiterate that I didn't violate anything," Gjesteby repeated, looking for some reason at Henderson.

"I'm not in this debate," the town counsel snapped. "You don't have to lecture me."

Henderson said that if the conservation commission didn't want to attend, it didn't have to "listen to what our very expensive lawyers have to say."

As Henderson was leaving, McMorris asked him if there would be time for the commission to talk with Leon separately on Monday night. When the lawyer told her that would be possible, McMorris said her group would be there.

The issue remained dormant for some 20 minutes while selectmen mopped up some small items on their agenda, then the dispute broke out all over again.

Kevin O'Donnell, a lawyer and SAFE member to whom Gjesteby gave the letter in question, asked if he might speak.

"On May 22," he began, "Mrs. Gjesteby was roundly criticized-"

Selectman chairman Merle Brown cut him off.

"We saw your letter," he stated. "I'm sure you're going to get it to the press." But he said there has been enough discussion and he would not allow any more.

"That's really unfair," said McNabb. "The public has a right to speak."

Brown replied, "It's been in every paper in town, maybe even the New York Times. We've had enough of it."

There was another brief discussion of other subjects, when Roy Fitzsimmons spoke from the audience.

He wanted to know if the vote to censure Gjesteby had been rescinded now that the secretary of state had ruled in her favor.

Goedecke explained that the vote was to ask Henderson what disciplinary actions they might take against Gjesteby.

"Nothing can be done," Goedecke said.

"This is the first I've heard of it. I would like a written report from the town counsel," Gjesteby said, addressing executive secretary Gregory Doyon.

Pratt told Brown he had never heard of anyone being shut off during a selectman's meeting. Pratt said that to impose subject matter that the public may bring up during meetings had implications that made him uncomfortable.

Brown asked if anyone wanted to move to go into executive session, but no one would.

Goedecke said that she would not make that motion because it would seem as if she didn't want to hear or respond to O'Donnell.

"Alright, Kevin," Brown finally said. "Go ahead and say what you were going to say so we could close our meeting."

"Mrs. Gjesteby was roundly criticized . . ." O'Donnell said, citing Goedecke for spending a "a great deal of time and flourish" to criticize Gjesteby.

"In fact, Mrs. Gjesteby was in fact 100 percent correct."

In his letter to Goedecke, delivered earlier, O'Donnell said, "A prompt public apology will help restore civility and credibility to this board. Whether you chose to apologize or not will reveal the quality of your character."

Her voice shaking, Goedecke said, "I may have spoken with a great deal of flourish, but I spoke with sincerity. I still hold that opinion. I felt the wrong was done."

She went on to say that the three boards agreed to abide by the decision of the state regarding the secrecy of documents on the case.

Goedecke also accused Gjesteby of changing her opinion on the letter, at first saying she was not sure and then later insisting that it was a public document.

Sullivan agreed, stating that Gjesteby had had every opportunity to reconvene the group of officials if she had wanted to release the document.

"She didn't care about the majority," he said.

Gjesteby said that the letter in question was not part of an executive session. "The document I released was not anything that was in executive session," she said. "I do not abrogate executive sessions. I felt it was a public document."

"You voted to take it to the state," said Sullivan.

"The tragedy here in the town of Cohasset," said Pratt, "Is that we forgot the fundamentals. . . unless there is a very good reason, the business of the public is should be conducted in public. We have had abysmal legal counsel."

He added that dissenting is a basic right and that Gjesteby was right in dissenting about the suppression of the letter.

McNabb suddenly said that he was surprised about what he called "a breach of trust by the attorneys representing us. I'm surprised that Michael Leon, who practices municipal law and Rich Henderson, who is town counsel" did not know the law.

"These are very fine lines," Sullivan said.

"No these aren't," McNabb replied.

Goedecke cited a recent document regarding the possible settlement of the state's lawsuit against the town over the sewer. She said they were told by the state to keep it a secret.

"We accepted it," she said. "I think we can expect there was confusion on this."

Citing the letter from the secretary of state, O'Donnell said the agreement to keep a public document secret was illegal.

In her June 6 letter on the matter to Henderson, Schwind said, "Neither a public employee, nor a governmental agency may shield a document from the mandatory provisions of the Public Records Law by marking it confidential or by entering into an agreement to keep its terms confidential."

Congratulations to Sally Hamill of Cohasset who plays on the Bay State Magic Club AAU 14 and Under Girls Basketball Team. She is a starting guard on the Massachusetts State Championship Team. She will be representing Cohasset and the state of Massachusetts in the Girls National AAU Tournament to be held July 22-29 in Indianapolis, Indiana.

This will be the second consecutive year that Sally and her teammates will have gone to the National Junior Olympic Tournament. They are also competing for the New England AAU Championship June 30-July 2.

Brianne McKenney, from Cohasset Jr/Sr High School, was honored for her outstanding verbal and/or mathematical ability discovered in the 1995 annual Talent Search conducted by the Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth. The seventh grade honor student, who scored well above the mean for high school seniors on the SAT:I Reasoning Test, received a certificate of merit at the state level in an awards ceremony June 4th at Boston University.

Great going Brianne, that's awesome!!

The University of Kansas held its graduation recently, and we salute Michael D. Moyer, son of John and Suzanne Moyer of 231 King Street, as being one of the grads! He earned himself a bachelor of arts degree in Communication Studies, congratulations Michael.

This year's graduating class at Thayer Academy were a fortunate group, they heard an address from Senator John Kerry.

Nicolas Michels of Cohasset was among the audience/class grads, we're sure he will remember his graduation day for some time to come! Nicolas will be going to the University of Alabama in the fall.

Paul Rayment and his daughter Mary Ellen Rayment of Cohasset were among the 47,000 people who took part in the recent Walk for Hunger. Participants raised $3 million for 510 emergency feeding programs in Massachusetts.

Melinda Johansen received a diploma at the 159th Gould Academy commencement exercises Saturday, May 27th in Bethel, Maine. The daughter of Frederick Johansen of Cohasset, she was a member of the chorus as well as the varsity soccer, basketball, and tennis teams, and was honored with the Francis "Hi" Berry Award, recognizing outstanding competitive spirit through example and overall competence in athletics.

Melinda plans to attend Simmons College in the fall.

Mary Larson and Leah Taylor Roy, members of the Derby Academy Parents' Association, were applauded by Headmaster Edward Foley for their services to the school and all of their hard work throughout the year — they were integral in an auction and social in the fall entitled "Moon Over Maui".

Cohasset certainly won't be the same without the smiling face of Margaret Young, who passed away last week. There was one lady that was always there for everyone, and who worked endlessly for so many organizations and individuals. A great mother and wife, a nice person, she certainly will be missed by all of us.

Happy belated birthday greetings go to two fine ladies this week—Fran Walton celebrated hers May 30, and Elinor Kennedy turned 93 June 6. Here's to many more for two neat people!!

Babson College conferred Bachelor of Science degrees on 330 graduates at its 76th commencement ceremony held May 13 in Wellesley, Mass. The Honorable William F. Weld governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, was the commencement speaker.

Peter M. Smith, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter W. Smith of 21 Fisher Road, graduated cum laude with a major in Accounting, and we surely congratulate him

Congratulations go to Michael Anthony Riley, who earned himself a spot on the Dean's List with distinction at Duke University for the spring semester. Mike is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Edward Riley of 483 Jerusalem Rd, who must be very proud of him and his hard work.

Talking about scholars distinguishing themselves, how about Doug Schultz who just completed his sophomore year at Colby College and earned himself a spot on the Dean's List there! You can bet that Doug's parents, Gerry and Regina, are bursting their buttons with pride at his efforts!

Finally, Boston College High School sends us more great news — Matthew W. Higgins, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Higgins of 211 N. Main Street and Joshua K. Roth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Roth of 33 Riverview Dr., both graduated from the prestigious school Sunday, May 28th. Congratulations.

That's the news for this week, please don't forget to let me know what's happening in your family!

Marietta P. Baynard

Marietta (Pratt) Baynard, 77, of New Port Richey, FL, formerly of Tarpon Springs, died June 1 at home.

"Honey," as she was known in her hometown, was born in Cohasset and graduated from Cohasset High School in 1935. She worked for Liberty Mutual Insurance Company in Boston for several years and later for the city of Tarpon Springs and the Tarpon Springs Historical Society.

She was a member of the Historical Society, Friends of the Library and the first Methodist Church, all in Tarpon Springs. She was the past president of the PTA at Tarpon Springs Elementary School and a Sunday School Teacher at the First United Presbyterian Church, Tarpon Springs. For many years she was a Red Cross volunteer.

Mrs. Baynard was the wife of the late Jesse Baynard and the mother of five children, Owen Baynard, Anne Waldschmidt and Janet Kuehne, all of New Port Richey, Joan Schmidt of Gainesville FL and Joy Cass of Winchester, MA. She also leaves two brothers, John Pratt of Wayland, MA, and Edwin Pratt of Spring Hill, FL and nine grandchildren.

She was the loving sister of the late Edna Pratt, Elmer Pratt, Warren Pratt, Burtram Pratt and Alta Pratt Winsor.

Services were held June 3 in Tarpon Springs. A memorial service was held at the Episcopal Church, Winchester, June 12.

Donations in her memory may be made to the Cohasset Historical Society; the Second Congregational Church, Sunday School Dept., Cohasset or to Mt. Hermon Missionary Baptist Church, Scholarship Fund, P.O. Box 265, Tarpon Springs, FL 34688-0265.

Rachel Lent

Rachel (Cosby) Lent, 90, of Cohasset, died June 2 in South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, after a brief illness.

Born in Westfield, she and her late husband, Deane Lent, lived in Cohasset for many years.

Mrs. Lent was a second-grade teacher in Cohasset for 23 years.

She leaves a son, Peter van Lent of DeKalb Junction, NY.

A memorial service will be held Aug. 25 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

Police: 383-1055
Fire: 383-0616

While 9-1-1 is at the tip of our tongues this week — it's important that we all write town these two important numbers four routine business at the Police Department (383-1055)/Fire Department (383-1066).

It wouldn't be a bad idea to make a note of these numbers and post them by the telephone as a reminder along with the number 9-1-1 which should be used for emergencies only.

Twice this week in Cohasset, the new 9-1-1 system picked up "silent" calls, meaning the caller did not say anything.

The first was a domestic abuse incident and thanks to the state-of-the art system which prints the address of the caller — the police were able to respond even though the alleged abuser had ripped the phone off the wall after the victim dialed 9-1-1.

The second incident was a silent medical emergency call about someone who had gone into a diabetic coma.

In both cases, the police or fire department was able to respond and prevent a serious incident from becoming a tragedy.

The police are distributing magnets, bookmarks, coloring books, posters, and stickers to schools this week. Police Chief Brian Noonan said the department has more and citizens are encouraged to stop by the station to pick them up.

Now that 9-1-1 is on line, we can all breathe a little easier.

But please remember, 9-1-1 is for emergencies only.

In non-emergency situations, turn to your NYNEX White Pages and record the administrative numbers for police, fire, and medical help in the space below ✍

Festivitis

Have you got cravings for strawberries and chowder, a need to shop like mad, and a penchant for art, lots of it?

Not to worry. You have that annual Cohasset affliction: Festivitis — a bug that affects Cohasseters in differing degrees this time of year.

The cure is painless: depending on your symptoms, just spend all or part of the weekend on the Common enjoying the spectacular Festival on the Common.

This year's Festival on the Common promises to be one of the best ever.

Go, enjoy! We'll see you there.

House, garden tour was a success

letters

To the Editor:

The House & Garden Tour Tuesday, June 13, to benefit the Cohasset Historical Society was a great success. Six private houses, all predating 1900 and each with a distinctly different and lovely garden, were viewed by more than 300 visitors from all over eastern Massachusetts. Also part of the tour were the Society's Maritime Museum and Wilson House and the First Parish Meeting House. It was a wonderful display of the things that make Cohasset a special and historic town.

The Society's particular thanks go to Patsy Rabstejnek, Chairman of the Tour, and to Anne Vanderweil as Co-Chairman, who led more than 100 volunteer helpers in making this a winning day for Cohasset and the Historical Society. Our thanks go, also, to the homeowners who so generously shared their properties with us.

It is rewarding to know that the Historical Society has so much support from so many people.

It's the legal quality that counts

To the Editor:

At least two recent letters have criticized the selectmen's decision not to issue RFP's for legal services related to Cohasset Heights. Somehow, the writers equate getting the lowest rates with the best chance for winning the legal struggle "to avoid a mountain of hazardous waste!"

A comparison of rates for professional services such as legal and engineering is popular with amateurs and government bodies. But in the pragmatic business world, it is recognized that intangible services shouldn't be bought like materials, machinery, construction, or other tangible things. It's one of the reasons the private sector does things with more long term satisfaction and economy than does government.

It's the quality of service that counts. An hour of a competent professional is worth many hours of a less competent person, when considering the effect of his or her advice on the final quality and/or cost.

One doesn't shop for the cheapest doctor, and shouldn't for engineering, legal, or other professional services where quality of advice should be the prime criterion. Such "economy" can be costly!

Finally, the activist opponents of Cohasset Heights should refrain from exaggeration and from demonizing the owners and all they do. It repels responsible people, rather than attract their support, whatever the merits of the case.

Arts Recognition Night celebrates ten years

(Ed.'s note: the following was read during the annual Awards Night at the high school and a copy was provided to the Mariner for publication).

To the Editor:

Tonight (May 25) is the 10th anniversary of Cohasset High School's Arts Recognition Night. In 1985, a dedicated group of parents founded the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club to support and promote all the fine and performing arts at Cohasset High School. They also organized this now traditional awards ceremony to honor all students who contributed to the arts at Cohasset Senior High School during the academic year.

Tonight, parents and students also honor Cohasset High School teachers of the arts. Parents and students recognize that behind every student here tonight stand teachers who inspired them...to discover their new talents, to create, to excel. At the Arts Open House just before this ceremony, our teachers' creative use of innovative technology in the classroom was evident in all the student demonstrations. The broad range of arts activities organized this year by our dedicated teachers is highlighted on the back of your program.

To begin the year, the Drama Workshop, under the direction of Ron Emmons, produced "Godspell," a powerful musical drama of friendship, loyalty, and personal sacrifice. Other productions, "I Have Mothers" and "Newton's Second Law," also challenged our students to stretch their understanding...and themselves. For the 14th year, Cohasset High School competed in the State Drama Festival. This year's entry, "Lovers, Winners," set in Ireland, presented a tragic image of adolescent conflict. The State Festival, Emerson College Festival, and Boston Globe Drama Scholarship competitions brought individual acting awards to our students and recognition for our community.

CHS Artists honored at arts recognition night

The Arts Boosters Club hosted the annual Cohasset High School Arts Recognition Night May 25 in the CHS cafeteria, immediately following the CHS arts open house. Approximately 200 senior high school students, their parents, and teachers gathered to honor CHS artists, dramatists, musicians, writers and all creative students involved in the arts. Invitations were mailed to parents of students who were recognized by arts teachers Joel Antolini, Maureen Duffy, Ron Emmons, Marcia Lajoie, Bryan Marks, John Packard, Tom Sippel and Jo-Ellen Wood.

The evening's program provided a tribute to all CHS artists. Each teacher presented awards for individual achievement, the arts boosters presented a new Shining Light award for two students who sang the National Anthem at football and basketball games, Nicole Vasseur and Krisen Niessink. Assistant principal Jack DeLorenzo presented the undergraduate study award and principal Meg Gallagher recognized the outstanding senior in the arts.

Arts Recognition Night celebrates ten years

Who will forget our spectacular all-school musical, "Guys & Dolls," a remarkable collaborative effort among teachers, students and parents. With Jo-Ellen Wood and Bryan Marks directing gangsters, mission dolls, and "Hot Box" girls, Marcia Lajoie working the Pit Band, Joel Antolini and Tim Sippel building Chicago sets, Maureen Duffy designing 1940's costumes and John Packard lighting and recording every line, our teachers and students created a wonderful treat for the whole community. Parents also worked hard to provide essential programs, communications, publicity, and parties. Bravo, and thanks to everyone.

Persuading teenagers to perform in public, especially solo, is in itself an art form, and all year our music teachers have "gone the extra mile" to create opportunities for our students to perform. At the Valentine Cabaret, the Pops, at Christmas and Spring concerts, at SEMSBA and District, Gold Seal and American Musical Foundation competitions, as well as the Newport Music Festival, Bryan Marks and Marcia Lajoie led Cohasset musicians with great patience and skill,...and our students excelled.

John Packard's A-V studio wizards, under his gentle direction, videotaped countless CHS events for future community audiences, an outstanding service, while he trained students in essential new technology. Did you try a video self portrait at the open house tonight?

Our Technology Education genius, Joel Antolini, combined his skills with art and technology to help his students create remarkable works with woodworking and drafting. Your delicious cake this evening comes courtesy of Maureen Duffy's students in the culinary arts, and her dedicated work with fashion design his inspired a new field of artists.

Art teacher Tim Sippel has encouraged students to create wonderful artwork, which decorate CHS walls and the village center. Have you admired the new murals in the science wing, as well as the historical Cohasset scene outside the art center and "seasons" on a village wall? His students have won prestigious awards in the Hingham Art Festival, Wang Center, All State and Boston Globe Scholastic Art competitions. In collaboration with Marcia Lajoie and John Packard, he helped students create a most interesting and innovative Avant-Garde Arts Nights, showcasing Cohasset's artistic fun and funk.

In Whispers and Shadows, the literary and arts magazine, the creative inspiration of advisors Jo-Ellen Wood and Tom Sippel is revealed in the work of 50 young artists, writers and editors. This year, thanks to funding and mailing help from the Arts Boosters, each family, grades 7-12, will receive a copy of this significant student publication. Our senior citizens, public library, art center and chamber of commerce look forward to this annual gift from Cohasset High School.

Tonight, as we honor students, we express our deep appreciation to Cohasset High School's teachers of the arts, with our gratitude for your unique wisdom, talent, and sympatico. As teachers, role models and artists, you are truly an inspiration to our children.

The Grand Tour — with Ginger Ferenz, 383-2863

A glimpse of the Verrochi residence at 90 North Main Street can be seen through the front entry pillars and gates. The circular garden bed anchored by a Japanese Red Maple is always perfectly maintained and planted displaying color that changes with each season. The springtime show is one of pale pink tulips. Spring flowering bulbs are planted in the beds near the entry gates while color is repeated in the pink flowering Dogwoods and yellow forsythia.

Summer puzzle club starts

Deer Hill librarian Marge Murphy will again be leading the Summer Puzzle/Reading Club. The sessions are scheduled to begin Monday, June 26, and will continue every Monday and Tuesday from 7 to 8:45 p.m. in the Paul Pratt Library.

Children in grades two through six are welcome. Parents must pick up their children promptly at 8:45 p.m. before the 9 p.m. closing time. Call Sue Terry, Children's Librarian, for further information.

Kids can become "natural" readers this summer by participating in the library's 1995 summer reading program, "Reading is Natural." The Paul Pratt Library invites children and their families to join in a celebration of the environment, reading and animals all summer long.

Pick up those reading logs

Reading logs may be picked up at the Library beginning June 19. Participants will record books they read or minutes and hours spent reading. Participants in grades one through six who reach their reading goal will be awarded a free paperback of their choice from books provided courtesy of the Friends of the Library.

There is also a program for "Almost Readers" and their families, which includes younger children who enjoy being read to or who are just beginning to read themselves with help.

All participants in the program will receive certificates of merit signed by Governor Weld and will enjoy an end-of-summer party. Children and families will receive bookmarks, game sheets and coupons for reduced admissions to many of the cultural and recreational attractions in our region. Materials are provided by the Massachusetts Regional Library Systems.

For further information call the library at 383-1348.

Homemaking is topic at LDS

Women of Cohasset and Hingham will find Homemaking at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints relaxing and fun this week with its choice of classes, including "Summer Boredom Busters," "Light Meals" and "Lighten Up."

The meeting will run from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday, June 15, at the church, 379 Gardner St., Hingham.

Members and friends are welcome. For further information call Polly Doggett at 383-1847.

COHASSET: LIGHT AND SPACIOUS – You'll marvel at the feeling of light and spaciousness. Leaded windows, abundance of storage, 2 FRs, walk-up attic, garden porch, private setting. In a neighborhood you'll love. $349,000.

Band Concerts

During the past five seasons, concert funding has been provided through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc. Each June, the Board of Directors of the South Shore Music Circus takes under consideration the request of the Recreation Commission for concert funding, hence, certainty of concerts is not absolute until mid-June, each season.

Based upon continued SSMC funding, the schedule for the 1995 season is as follows:

Saturday, June 17, 1995 — 2 p.m. (Frank's Big Band).

* Tuesday, July 18, 1995 — 7:30 p.m .
* Tuesday, Aug. 1, 1995 — 7:30 p.m.
* Tuesday, Aug. 15, 1995 — 7:30 p.m.

* Performing will be the 30 piece South Shore Concert Band under the direction of Mr. Richard P. Whitmarsh.

Concerts are held on the Cohasset Common, are free of charge and the public is cordially invited. It is a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, insect repellent is a good item to have available.

Outdoor Golf Lessons

The Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments will co-sponsor outdoor golf lessons for beginner and intermediate levels, throughout the Spring and Summer months. The lessons will be taught by Cohasset Golf Club's Assistant Pro, Mr. Andy Moulton.

Sessions will begin at various times throughout May, June and July and are five weeks in duration, meeting one hour weekly from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. and again from 7:15 to 8:15 p.m. Also, morning classes are available Tuesdays at 10 a.m. and 11 a.m: from May through August. The fee for this program is $65 per person for the 5-week session.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791, or the Scituate Recreation Department at 545-8738. Should you need to borrow clubs to participate in lessons, please indicate this at the time of registration. All classes will be held at the Jenkins School Field, Scituate.

Dog Obedience Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will continuously, throughout the summer, offer dog obedience classes taught by Mrs. Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Tuesday evenings, on the Cohasset Common.

For both the beginner class and the intermediate/advanced class, dog owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4". Absolutely no spike collars.

The beginner class will teach basic obedience and responsible ownership to novice pet owners. Helpful hints on ownership, voice directions, basic commands and exercise beneficial to those thinking about eventually showing their dog, will be included. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department beginner class. For all classes the fee is $46 for the 8-week, one hour per week program.

To register for the next session available please call the Recreation office at 383-6791. A new session will begin approximately every 8 weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis. Classes meet on a year-round basis, indoors during the fall and winter months.

Step Aerobics

Dr. Mary Jane Butera will offer a 12-week, 24-class, summer special session for step aerobics designed for all ages and all abilities.

The 12-week summer session will begin Tuesday, June 6 and costs $100 per participant for the 24 classes which meet Tuesday and Thursday evenings, 6:30 to 7:45 p.m., Cohasset Town Hall. The 12-week session ends Thursday, Aug. 24. All classes include low-impact warm-up, stretching, a cardio-step segment, muscle conditioning, abdominal work and a peaceful, relaxing cool-down. The program is for both men and women, for all ages and all ability groups. Please call the office (383-6791) for further details.

Youth Tennis

Youth tennis will begin Wednesday, July 5, and continue for 7 weeks, through Aug. 18. Youth tennis registrations will be held, starting Monday, June 19, and continue throughout that week, as follows: Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 12 noon and again 1 to 3 p.m. and Thursday evening, from 5 to 7 p.m. The program is offered for children age 7 through 18 years of age. The program is designed on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. The fee for the one 7-week session of instruction, two days a week, is $44. $10 discounts are available for additional children in a family.

Lessons for beginners, intermediates, and advanced players are offered.

Fridays are special clinic or tournament days.

Rain days: If it rains before 9 a.m., all tennis classes will be cancelled for that day.

Nelta Tournament

The Nelta Tournament will be held Friday, Aug. 4. More information will be forthcoming through the tennis classes. Registration for this event will be done through the Youth tennis classes.

If interested, please register through the Recreation Department office the week of June 19 at the designated times and days listed above. Classes will begin Wednesday, July 5.

Adult Tennis

The Recreation Department will offer tennis classes for beginner and intermediate tennis players, continuously throughout the summer on various evenings. The classes are one hour long and a session is 5 weeks in duration. New sessions will begin approximately every 5 weeks.

Beginner classes meet Tuesday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m., and the intermediate classes will meet from 7 to 8 p.m., Tuesdays. Advanced (Tournament level instruction) classes meet Thursday evenings from 6 to 7 p.m., and advanced beginner will meet from 7 to 8 p.m. Thursdays. Classes will be limited in size. Additional classes will be formed should demand dictate. All classes will meet at the Recreation Commission Tennis Courts at the top of Norfolk Road, next to Miliken Field.

To register, please call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791. The fee for the 5-week program is $45 per person. Payable by check to the "Town of Cohasset." Each participant will need a racquet. Classes do not meet if weather is inclement, and should you be in doubt, due to weather conditions, please call the Recreation office. Prior to class time.

A. Each permit issued will, for vehicle owners, have your plate number printed on the sticker. Should you require a new permit, due to a change in plate number, please bring back the original sticker, and you will be issued a new permit for $2.

Section III. Period of Grace

A. Beginning May 1 of each year, you will be issued at no charge, a permit for the remainder of the current season. This permit will expire May 31, by which time you must obtain a new permit, at the established rate.

Any questions regarding parking permits should be directed to the Recreation Department Office, first floor, new wing, Town Hall, or call 383-6791.

Cohasset gears up for Festival on the Common this weekend

People of all ages are looking forward to a weekend of free art, entertainment and workshops on beautiful Cohasset Common and at the South Shore Art Center, as Cohasset's annual Festival on the Common kicks off Friday, June 16. The festival will offer activities sure to please the youngest child as well as the most senior visitor, as it continues through Sunday, June 18.

CHILDREN'S ACTIVITIES

A Children's Activity Tent, sponsored by Lois and David Weltman, will offer several hands-on workshops on Friday from 3 to 5 p.m. All young artists are invited to stop by the Honor Roll Courtyard for a free ice cream festival sponsored by Harborfest.

Beginning at 4:30 p.m. in the Children's Tent, Joe Howard will present the "Art of Magic," followed by special workshops on puppets with Nancy Connolly and origami with Naoe Suzuki. Syma will inspire everyone by working on her pottery wheel set up right net to the tent. Workshops continue all day Saturday and Sunday, with a special Father's Day project on Sunday at 1 p.m. The model boat-building project and races are set for Saturday at 10:30 a.m. There is no entry fee, but preregistration is required by calling 383-ARTS.

JURIED PHOTOGRAPHY SHOW

The Festival also offers a Juried Photography, Juried Art and Members' Show in the Main Tent on the Common. The South Shore Art Center's first national exhibition, "Mirror, Mirror . . ." and the Young Artist Exhibition will be featured at the Center and more than 100 craft and artisan booths and international food vendors will be on the Common. The famous Strawberry Festival at the Second Congregational Church and roving entertainment and concerts on the Common stage and other locations will all add to the excitement of the event.

New additions this year include an art installation in process on the Common called "Guardians," by artists and sculptors Wesley Reddick and Chuck Lathrop and a participatory community sculpture for all, overseen by sculptor Chris Hidell.

Although there is no parking around the Common, Tom O'Brien Car Companies will have courtesy vans and trolleys running continuously from the South Shore Music Circus parking lot.

FESTIVAL HOURS NOTED

Festival hours are Friday from 3 to 9 p.m., with folk music, bagpipes, a Chinese dance troupe, hammered dulcimer music and magic from 5 to 9 p.m., sponsored by the Bank of Boston; Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday from noon to 6 p.m. Special musical acts on Saturday include the Frank Shoosan Jazz Band at noon, South Shore Men of Harmony at 5:15 p.m. and the South Shore Bay Band at 6:30 p.m.

Sunday brings Harborfest's popular Blessing of the Fleet, marching parade at 2:30 p.m. and a Chowderfest at 3 p.m.

Although all Art Center events are free, the Festival on the Common is a major undertaking and the Center asks visitors to consider making a $2 donation at the Main Tent. The Art Center sponsors scholarships, school programs such as "Arts To Go," speakers and other programs all year long. For specific schedule information call the SSAC at 383-ARTS.

Concord Chorale concert

The First Parish of Cohasset, Main St., will present the Concord Chorale in a Gospel Concert on Saturday, June 17, at 8 p.m. as part of Cohasset's Arts Festival/Harborfest celebration. The award-winning chorale will return to fill the halls of the Meeting House on Cohasset Common with their resounding music.

Cohasset has a special affection for the chorale because three generations of the DeVaughn family have sung in it. Adrienne DeVaughn, who sang in last year's concert along with her musically talented grandmother, graduated from CHS this year.

Tickets are $7 ($5 with a Harborfest button) and are available through the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church office, open Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. For further information or to purchase tickets call 383-1100.

Door prizes at Harborfest court

Cohasset Yoga Center yoga classes, dinner at La Delat, video rentals of your choice from Stop and Shop Video, dinner at MacArthur's Restaurant in Hingham — all these door prizes will be offered at the Salad Court at First Parish this weekend during Harborfest '95 and the Festival on the Common.

First Parish will present a Garden Tent Refreshment Center at its Parish House, 23 North Main St., opposite Cohasset Common. The salad court will be open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, June 17 and Sunday, June 18.

Cool, refreshing watermelon, delectable Caesar and tossed salads, iced fruit punch, peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and thirst-quenching spring water will be featured. Tickets for door prizes are free of charge with any purchase. Call the church office between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m., Monday through Thursday, for further information (383-1100).

Teen Center celebrates Move Up day

The Cohasset Teen Center will be open from 7 to 10 p.m. the Friday and Saturday nights of Harborfest and the Festival on the Common, June 16 and 17. Next year's seventh-graders who will be moving up to the high school in September are welcome at the Center beginning Friday night at 7 p.m.

Summer hours for the Teen Center will be 7 to 10 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. Beginning Tuesday, July 11, the Center will also be open Tuesday evening.

Fastball speed trap ready

A radar-scanning fastball throw event will open on the Common Friday at 3 p.m. Three balls may be thrown for $1, and participants will be awarded a certificate documenting the speed of their fastball, as measured by a police radar gun.

The Fastball Speed Trap will be open from 3 to 9 p.m. Friday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday as part of the Festival on the Common/Harborfest Weekend. All profits will help support the center.

Enright exhibits photos

The photography of Norwell resident Sean Enright will be featured in the South Shore Art Center's annual Juried Photography Show not once, but six times. Enright is in his first year at the Art Institute of Pittsburgh, and this is his first competition.

Of the three first-place awards, Enright secured two with his photographs, "Prayer Flags" and "Jubilee Kitchen." He also won third place and an honorable mention. Prizes were awarded by professional photography judges Rodger Kingston and Rose Marston to only 14 of the almost 100 entries. Two additional entries of Enright's were also chosen for the general exhibition.

Enright is a graduate of Vermont Academy and attended Wittenberg University in Ohio prior to studying at the Art Institute. He is the son of Judy Enright of Norwell and the late John J. Enright Jr.

The Juried Photography Exhibition is part of the 40th annual Festival on the Common at the SSAC and Cohasset Common June 16-18.

Salad court at First Parish

The First Parish Church of Cohasset is offering a Garden Tent Refreshment Center as part of Cohasset's Arts Festival/Harborfest celebration. The Salad Court will be located at the Parish House, 23 North Main St. opposite Cohasset Common, and will be open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Saturday, June 17 and Sunday, June 18.

Watermelon, Caesar and tossed salads, iced fruit punch, peanut and jelly sandwiches and cold spring water will be on sale.

Tickets for door prizes are free of charge with any purchase. For further information call the church office, Monday through Thursday, at 383-1100.

Student protest held for the benefit of Mr.Kite tract, Kite can accept an involuntary leave of absence for two years and would be hired back if an opening occurs.

But to the students, Kite is a super teacher and the school committee and administration are all wrong.

No sooner had the dismissal bell rung at about 2 p.m. Tuesday, than several dozen students assembled in front of the school. Student organizers, who had called the press, set up a microphone and one by one, numerous students gave their testimonials.

Laura Slotnick, a junior, accused the school committee of dismissing the students' concerns at a recent meeting.

"They talked about money and legal contracts. They said 'you don't know, what you're talking about.' They looked down at all of us.

"They were right, we wouldn't understand."

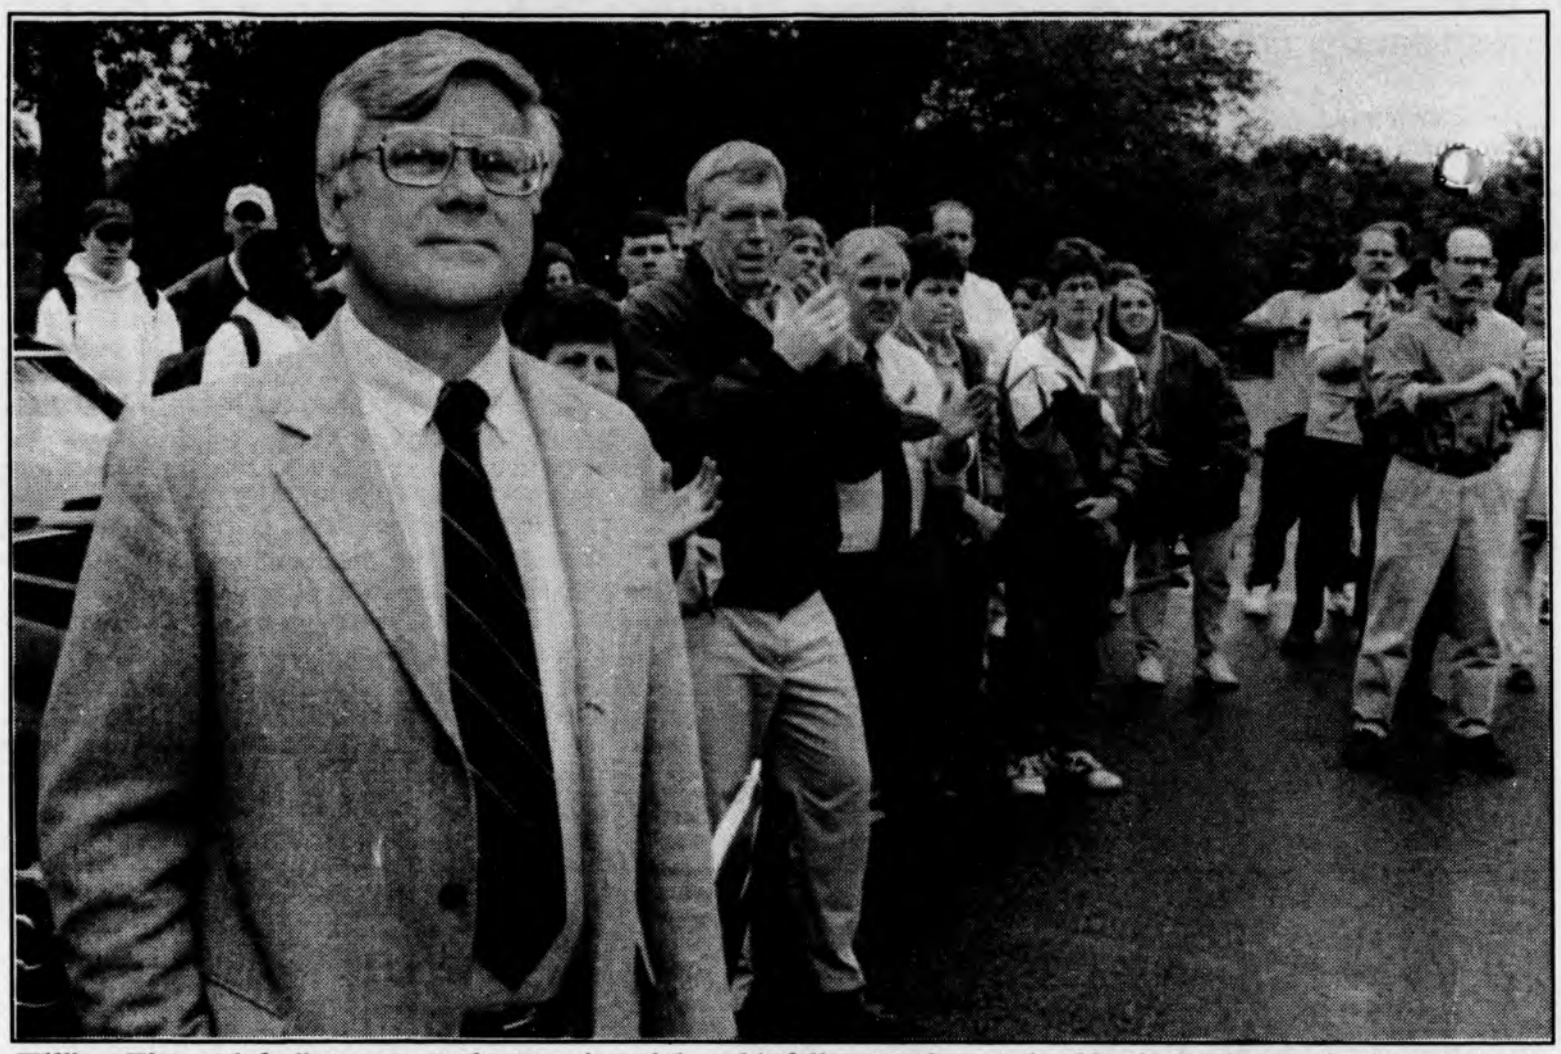
Slotnick questioned why a dedicated teacher like Mr. Kite with 20 years of effort to the school would be let go.

"How can you ever put a price on that?" she asked.

About 30 teachers including Kite joined the rally about 1/2 hour after it got underway.

Speaking for the Cohasset Teachers Association (CTA), Edward Leary said over the past two weeks, there have been discussions between the administration and the union about a teacher possibly moving out of the English Department to another department which would open up the slot for Kite.

"Other factors have been brought into play," said Leary who explained by moving teachers within the system, the administration considered offering Kite a teaching position but without the department chairmanship, which pays an annual stipend of $6,000.



William Kite, at left, listens to student testimonials as his fellow teaches applaud in the background. Kite is being let go after 20 years of teaching because of a reduction in the number of English sections next year, school officials say. (Staff photo/Alan Chapman)

In a telephone interview Wednesday, CTA president Joel Antolini confirmed that discussions with the administration had been held. He said there's an effort by the administration to save money by hiring interns who handle a teachers' duties, a direct violation of "our agreement," he said. Antolini said an art intern is budgeted for next year and there's an English teacher with an art background that could move into that slot.

Antolini said CTA asked Hart if the department chairmanship had not been held by the least senior person would the chairmanship have been eliminated and the administration said no.

"We asked (hypothetically) if the other person would still be department chair and he (Hart) said yes," Antolini said.

Kite said elimination of the chairmanship is unacceptable.

"A week ago there was some movement (about my job)," Kite said. "But I felt the process is so unfair. One job

Selectmen hear revived Deck Point project plans

16.6 acre site, and developer Gary Rothkopf, who is interested in buying it.

Rothkopf is considering building 90 townhouse units in two phases, of 45 units each.

One-third (no more than 27) of the units would be affordable, which means that purchasers would need an income at 80 percent of the average in the state.

She estimated that a household would need an income of between $28,000 to $38,000 a year to purchase a unit.

"This is not low income," she said.

Seventy percent of the apartments would be sold at market rates, Langmaid said.

Although plans currently call for all units to have two-bedrooms, Langmaid said the housing committee will doubtless ask Rothkopf to build some three-bedroom houses for families with several children.

Families will be the targeted market for all units, however, she said.

"It's going to be nice housing," she stated.

Several selectmen said Monday night that they were concerned about traffic and wondered if the site is an appropriate place for children to play in.

"It's a tough spot," said selectman Michael Sullivan.

However, Goedecke said Rothkopf "wouldn't put the units where they won't sell."

She added that although Cohasset needs affordable housing, there is little available land for it. She said ideally the housing would be built within walking distance of the village, but that appropriate sites don't seem to be available in that area.

SCHOOL OVERCROWDING

Conservation commission chairman Roseanne McMorris asked how the schools would handle a sudden increase in enrollment of at least 90 children.

She estimated that 90 units, with two-bedroom each, would create 180 bedrooms, of which half would likely be occupied by children.

"How can the schools possibly handle that?" she asked. "That's a tremendous number."

School superintendent Stephen Hart said Tuesday that if more than ten new students were in the same elementary grade, the development would probably cause overcrowding.

"That would have an impact on the elementary level," he said, pointing out that the high school grades contain fewer students.

He explained that in the elementary level, each grade averages about 100 students, with 102 students in kindergarten, for instance.

"We've run out of space at the Osgood School," Hart said. That school contains kindergarten through grade three.

He said the Deer Hill, which houses grades four through six, is almost at capacity, while there is room at the junior/senior high school.

School enrollment continues to increase slightly each year, the superintendent stated.

CONTROVERSIAL DECK POINT

It has been six years since the proposed Deck Point affordable housing project fell through because of drainage and septic system questions and considerable opposition.

Selectmen were against it for a number of reasons, including its size, location and drainage questions.

The chamber of commerce had opposed it because it would reduce the amount of commercially-zoned land in town.

Even the housing committee opposed it.

Israel Sanchez, chairman of the group at the time, said the location and its proximity to the Cohasset Height Landfill and other businesses, made it a lousy location.

Despite the opposition, Deck Point received the first comprehensive permit ever issued in Cohasset, from the ZBA in January, 1989. That permit called for a reduction in the proposed number of apartments from 128 to 108, and listed 34 conditions.

As soon as the permit was announced, Paul Barry, owner of the Cohasset Heights Landfill, told the Mariner that he was thinking of suing the ZBA over the permit. He did not think the location was appropriate for children.

SEEKS COMPREHENSIVE PERMIT

Although that permit has expired, Rothkopf plans to "pick up on" it, according to Langmaid.

Langmaid told selectmen that the local support is vital because Rothkopf is proposing a development under the Local Initiative Program (LIP). The state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) requires that all LIP projects have the written endorsement of the chief elected official in a community and the endorsement of the local housing committee.

"It is important that Cohasset as a community is receptive to having a LIP development," she stated.

The housing committee would work with the developer to get the best package, she explained, noting that the process offers "one-stop shopping" for the builder, while creating affordable housing. The developer does make a profit, she pointed out.

OPPOSITION EXPECTED

There have not been serious, large-scale affordable housing proposals to come before Cohasset boards since Deck Point and Crystal Woods, a highly-unpopular project slated for the Scituate-Cohasset line were scrapped some five years ago.

Considering the intensity of past opposition and heightened concern over drainage and septic systems, caused in part by the new Title V regulations, it is likely that the new Deck Point project will face an uphill fight.

Mr. Kite. . .

should not be broken into pieces."

In a prepared statement, Kite said Supt. Hart stated he will not be retained "as Department Chairman and English teacher because of a $6,000 shortfall in next year's 1995-96 school budget."

Hart said Kite's statement is incorrect but confirmed the had held preliminary talks with the association to look at "situation as a whole."

The CTA statement handed out by Leary at the rally said the union supports the efforts of the students.

"Both the staff and students recognize that Cohasset is about to lost at 20-year veteran who has been a valuable resource as a teacher and a department chairman.

"We feel that the Cohasset schools should be recognizing and encouraging excellence rather than dismissing it."

School Committee Chairman Ralph Kidder said he was "confused by the position of the CTA which clearly understands the contract.

"The contract requires us to reduce the least senior teacher (if there is no significant difference in performance among the teachers in the English department)," Kidder explained.

Kidder said Kite's teaching ability is not the point.

"It is widely held that Mr. Kite has been a fine English teacher," he said.

Kidder said the CTA may not agree that a reduction in force in the English department is necessary.

"That's a different argument to me than why Kite was chosen to be reduced,"Kidder said.

He said the school committee agreed one position had to be reduced because of enrollment and budgetary issues.

But to the students, the numbers don't add up when it comes to losing a beloved teacher.

"The budget is whacked," junior, Jessica Hurley said. "The most important thing is having good teachers."

Sergio Munoz agreed.

"Quality education equals quality teachers.

"That sounds right to me," he said.

One student said the school committee will soon be in trouble.

"In two years, I'll be 18 and I won't vote for you," she said.

Other issues that have recently stirred students up at the high school are the reduction is school vacations next year, reduction in study halls and elimination of the business department.

Planning board expected to support Shaw's

In addition to Moore, planning board members Jean Simonds and William Good will vote on the Shaw's plan.

Several weeks ago, town counsel Richard Henderson determined that planning board members Robert Sturdy and John O'Toole cannot vote on the issue because they missed several sessions of the public hearing. Shaw's attorney Martin Healy objected to the participation of those who had missed one or more session.

Good also indicated last week that he is in favor of Shaw's. He agreed with Moore that the approval and the conditions must be worded carefully.

In advising against taking a vote last week, Good said the two weeks between meetings would be spent on the wording.

"I think the two weeks will be time well spent," he stated.

At the start of last week's session, Moore allowed veteran planning board member Daniel Cotton to read a prepared statement on Shaw's, even though the public comment portion of the process had passed.

Cotton was generally skeptical about the Shaw's plan, wondering about its affect on the quality of life in town.

He said he hoped that the opinions of "those who have been denied the right to vote (Sturdy and O'Toole)" would be considered by the other members.

Questioning the commitment that large corporations might have to a town like Cohasset, Cotton said big companies can close down their operations and leave town whenever they wish, while a small, family-owned establishment would have more ties to the community.

He said profits in a large company are sent out of town to a corporate headquarters, while money remains in town with locally owned businesses.

"They (large retail chains) will buy out or squeeze out the little guy," he stated.

Cotton also said that Cohasset has allowed greater commercial development along Route 3A than its neighbors.

"Many of us are oblivious to what's happening," he said. "Cohasset is our home and if we don't look after it, who will?"

The planning board also received comments from leading Cohasset businessman Donald Staszko, who developed the Stop & Shop north of the Shaw's site on Rte. 3A.

Staszko presented written comments and computer drawings, which he said portrayed the site when the supermarket was completed.

A press release Staszko distributed at the meeting stated that "Mr. Staszko has expressed serious concerns about added traffic congestion and water runoff that will be generated from the Shaw's site. At present, Route 3A traffic in the northbound lane backs up at peak times from the traffic light at the 3A/Beechwood Street intersection to Mr. Staszko's auto dealership, South Shore Chevrolet. This has hampered access to his property."

The press release reiterated the need for a traffic light at the Rte. 3A entrance to Shaw's, just south of the Beechwood St. traffic light.

"Without a traffic light at the Route 3A entrance to the Shaw's complex, traffic will back up all the way to the Scituate line at peak times.

"This will cause severe grid lock, further damaging the property rights of South Shore Chevrolet and others, and inconveniencing the general public.

"The plan, as proposed, also prohibits southbound traffic from entering Leo's Exxon, Autohaus, South Shore Nissan and Dwyer's Cleaners."

On the subject of drainage, Staszko's release claimed "the potential is significant for the flooding of area businesses," in part because the Shaw's site will be elevated 10 feet, needing a nine-foot retaining wall facing Route 3A.

The release also quoted a letter Staszko sent to the planning board.

"From my reading of the plan, roadway runoff will no longer enter the shopping center and there will be a 1,000-foot section of road where there will be no storm drains or catch basins," the letter said. "This runoff will flow south toward South Shore Chevrolet."

However, Shaw's does plan to install a catch basin at the south end of the shopping center.

Moore read a letter from Gerard F. Mackin, Jr., representing the Hassans, who own a business just south of Shaw's. The letter said that since the supermarket is planning to install a catch basin, an earlier letter to the board citing drainage concerns, should be withdrawn.

Most of the meeting was devoted to a list of proposed modifications to the project presented by consulting engineer John Modzelewski.

Larry Wagner, Shaw's engineer, agreed with most the modifications. "Everything John has said been acceptable," he stated.

During the discussion of the modifications, John O'Toole said that although he wasn't allowed to vote, he wanted to discuss the plan anyway.

Addressing Shaw's attorney, Martin Healy, O'Toole said, "I'm not supposed to vote, but there's nothing wrong for me to comment . . . "

He questioned the ruling that he should not vote, calling the case law on the subject "ambiguous."

He asked a number of questions, insisting that changes agreed to by Shaw's executives be added to the final plans, since those drawings will be followed during construction.

Shaw's representatives said that they would submit a final plan including all changes.

Moore did try to move the discussion along, however, telling O'Toole at one point that while he was welcome to ask questions, "This whole issue has been discussed ad infinitum."

Daytripping

with Laura Ricketson Doherty

If you are in the mood for a quick get-away that offers the feel of a real vacation resort, then Marina Bay in North Quincy is the spot.

The sudden change from the hustle and congestion of the workday world to the harmony and beauty of Marina Bay often takes first time visitors by surprise. Soon after exiting the traffic of Quincy Shore Drive, you begin to notice the wetlands complete with osprey nests and the harbor beyond. The attractive entrance causeway with its carefully-planned landscaping provides an introduction of what is to come.

George O'Malley, one of the owners, notes that Marina Bay draws a great variety of people throughout the year. Its use peaks in the warm weather. And, with slips that accommodate boats up to 200 feet, it appears that almost as many visitors arrive by sea as by land.

In the 1890's, the Old Colony Railroad first acquired the 600 acres on the Squantum Peninsula. From 1905-10, thousands of spectators attended the air shows of the Harvard Aeronautic Society which were, according to O'Malley, significant social events.

In 1917, the federal government took over the property for defense and shipbuilding. It was used as an annex to the General Dynamics Shipyard. The vestiges of the runway used for military sea planes in the '30s and '40s are visible, today. A naval cadet training program was also offered in the last part of the '40s

After acquiring the site in 1958, Boston Edison decided that it would be inappropriate for the power plant it was planning. Its proximity to two existing plants was deemed strategically questionable. At that time, during the cold war, the concern was that an enemy could effectively knock out power for hundreds of thousands of residents.

The property was then leased to Marina Industries, which, in turn, developed a 400 slip-marina and rented out existing buildings for commercial space. After several other owners including the O'Connell Brothers Construction Company of Quincy and various financial reversals, the property was bought by its current owners who, according to O'Malley, are well capitalized and have implemented several rehabilitation and restoration programs.

On my last visit to Marina Bay, despite inclement weather, I could not help but notice these many improvements. The paint glistened. The outdoor cafes along the boardwalk looked inviting. A favorite spot for young and old, alike, is the romantic gazebo with its hanging begonias and window boxes of white petunias and mixed impatiens. A memorial clock tower dedicated to Vietnam veterans stands tall along the storefronts.

O'Malley describes the area as a self-contained city within a city with more than adequate parking. Aesthetic appeal is very high, he continues, with various forms of architecture in a tapestry composed of residential, industrial and commercial space, "It's a pretty wonderful place to come to work," he adds. Indeed, many people like it so much that they have chosen to live, work and keep their boats all in the one place.

Strolling along the harbor area, it's fun just to window shop. Or, you could choose a special painting by watercolorist William Beyer. Perhaps a yacht is your fancy and at Marina Yacht Sales, you may want to compare a 1986 50-foot Med Yacht at $188,000 with a 1980 30 foot Olson Sloop for $19,500 using the photographs helpfully provided in the display case. There's a special shop for sports enthusiasts and another featuring The Scottish Connection.

And, if all this hard work has made you hungry, you may stop at one of the many restaurants featuring food items such as Italian sandwiches, Chinese delicacies, seafood entrees. You could begin with a special frozen drink at Amelia's, follow your main course with cappuccino and end it all with a dream concoction from the ice cream shop.

Different activities and programs are scheduled throughout the year. Professional volleyball tournaments will be televised from The Tent, New England's largest nightclub, according to O'Malley.

This Saturday, at 10 a.m. at the Ocean Terrace, a fashion show and breakfast buffet is scheduled to raise funds for the Lightship Nantucket, which is docked at the marina. This venerable old museum is open Saturdays and Sundays from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. To celebrate the 50th anniversary of World War II and its connection with the property now known as Marina Bay, military displays and a uniformed reenactment is scheduled for the 2nd weekend in August. There are also various regattas with the final one on Columbus Day.

To reach Marina Bay, take Route 3A North to Sea Street. Turn left on to Quincy Shore Drive. Turn right at the lights onto East Squantum Street and follow the signs.

Coastal exploration camp offered

The South Shore Community Center is establishing a summer enrichment program in cooperation with the Hull Lifesaving Museum and Cohasset High School.

The program would offer a summer program providing three two-week camp sessions to accommodate up to 90 children, ages four through 10. A percentage will participate through partial or full scholarship sponsor support.

Professional staffing for the program will be enhanced with high school-aged aides and job opportunities will be available to high school students expressing an interest in marine biology, the environment or early childhood education. The professional staff will provide training sessions for instructors and aides, including first aid, curriculum objectives and early childhood basics.

Consultants have been enlisted through CHS, Hull Lifesaving Museum and the local lobster fishing community. On-site locations include the Lifesaving Museum, CHS marine biology lab, Government Island, Sandy Beach and the SSCC.

For further information call the SSCC at 383-0088.

'Ulysses' at Aisling Gallery

"Bloomsday in Hingham" will be held at the Aisling Gallery, 229 Lincoln St., Rt. 3A, Hingham on Sunday, June 2[illegible]om 2 to 5 p.m., rain or shine. The afternoon will celebrate James Joyce's "Ulysses."

Under the tent beside the gallery, guests will enjoy a garden party and listen to character readings from "Ulysses." Turn-of-the-century period costumes are encouraged and everyone is invited. Admission is $10.

For further information call Jeanette Cavanaugh at 383-2176 or Maureen Connolly at the Gallery, 749-0555.

Marten family celebrates

Jim and Shirley Marten will observe the 30th anniversary of their arrival in American on Sunday, June 25, from 4:30 p.m. to sunset, at Cohasset Harbor's Minot Ledge Lightkeepers' House (Bancroft Hall).

The celebration of the giving, sharing and under standing that they feel characterizes the Americar spirit will feature an elegant buffet and other re freshments. Parking will be in the Ed Young lot behinc the keepers' house, with back-up parking and shuttl service from St. Anthony's Church.

The Martens believe the community effort that re sulted in saving the only remaining ledge keepers residence, while making it available to the public epitomizes the spirit of cooperation and volunteerisn that they enjoy about America.

The Martens have extended an open invitation to al local area residents to attend the gathering. For reser vations call Mrs. Henry G. "Jean" Simonds, 107 Nichol Rd., Cohasset 02025 by June 17.

Donations will go toward reducing the $50,00 keepers' house mortgage and will be matched dollar fo dollar by a $10,000 Cohasset Rotary Club challeng grant. Those interested in attending may donate as a lieutenant ($10), commander ($15), captain ($25), admiral ($50) or lightkeeper ($100 and above).

Victorian tea is set

Members of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset are invited to a Victorian Garden Tea on Tuesday, June 20, at 1 p.m.

The hostess will be Linda Reyer, who should be notified of absence or consulted before bringing a guest.

Museum expands its hours

The Cohasset Historical Society has expanded the hours the Maritime Museum will be open to visitors. Interested citizens have volunteered their time to staff the museum on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon from June 3 through the end of August. Until this year the museum was only open during afternoons.

The museum, located on Elm St. in Cohasset Village, exhibits a Minot Ledge Lighthouse collection and many exhibits documenting Cohasset's distinguished maritime history.

Volunteers include: Bill Malone, Charlie Fink, Deborah Cook, Ray Buckley, Ira Stoughton, Doug Peck, Sarah Pease, Amy Golden, Ruth Nedrow, Sue Grant, Vivian Bobo, Nancy Snowdale, Bob Davenport, Hamilton Tewksbury, John Hartshorne, Osborne Ingram, Gordon Flint, Rita Kirk, Lucia Woods, Dan Cotton, Pat Baird, Jim Mullen, Martha Equi and Toni Finegan.

Maritime Museum hours are: Monday, May 29, Memorial Day, during the parade period and Saturdays, June 3 through Aug. 26 from 9 a.m. to noon. The museum is also open Tuesday through Sunday, June 6 through Sept. 30, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m.

The Cohasset Historical Society also opens the adjacent Captain John Wilson House, built in 1810, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. with the assistance of trained guides. David Wadsworth is the society's curator. This summer the Wilson House will be displayed as a 1910 teahouse, which it was at that time. Green Circle teaches about tolerance and acceptance

By Alison Shyer
Mariner correspondent

Happy to wrap up an afternoon of multiplication tables, Mrs Buckley's second grade class at the Osgood School gathered around Caitlin Connolly and Ryan Sawchuk, two Cohasset High juniors, as they set up their easel, outfitted with felt green circle and assorted colors of felt people. The teens were preparing for their third and last visit to talk to the kids about tolerance, acceptance and the "Green Circle," and the kids had their name tags at the ready.

The teens are part of an awareness program called the Green Circle which is a group of workshops geared towards helping develop self-worth in elementary-aged children and making them aware, tolerant and appreciative of human differences.

The circle itself — represented with the green felt circle on an easel or a green string on the floor — is meant to symbolize the child's circle of "caring and sharing." It's green because ("Like trees and grass"), it grows. It starts with the child ("the most important person") and includes the parents, family, friends and, according to Mrs. Buckley's class, a whole lot of dogs. Into that circle, the program emphasizes, enter only those whom the child chooses. The idea is to get the children to include more and different people into their circles.

Using concepts such as empathy, inclusion, friendship and personal responsibility, the teens are trying to instill in the second-graders a sense of fairness and tolerance for everyone and to get them to expand their green circle to fit more people. The lessons are much more personal than abstract, each student is asked to participate in every activity, from decorating their own name tags to having "secret friends" for whom they do good deeds and (hopefully) bring into their circle.

Most of the time in the classrooms is spent, according to Connolly, "not teaching the kids what to think but how to think."

The kids are also encouraged to talk about their feelings. During one activity, there are discussions about how it would feel to be included ("Happy!") or left our ("Sad!") of someone's circle. There are also discussions about cultural, racial and economic differences. "Is it OK to have someone in your circle who lives in a bigger house than you do?" "How about someone from another state or country?" "Someone of a different religion?" (Yes, yes and yes.)

The program engages the children in activities from which they derive certain simple concepts: In one instance, with what the program calls "people packages," the children are given the choice of three wrapped packages, two of which are beautifully wrapped and one wrapped in newspaper with electrical tape. After the consensus is clear for the prettiest packaging, the gifts are opened and in one is a pair of dirty socks and the other contains carrot sticks. The "ugly" package is opened to reveal a bag of lollipops. The moral, which is not lost on the children, is that you can't judge a person's inside by what you see on the outside.

In another exercise that Connolly thinks is one of the best in the program, the students are asked to compair the color of each other's hands and try to find someone with exactly the same color.

"Did anyone find a perfect match?" Connolly asked.

Those students who thought they had were quickly corrected by their classmates.

"We all seem to be unique, don't we?" Sawchuk asked.

The message, as always, is that if we only allow into our green circle those who are the same as we are, we will be very lonely.

Created in 1957 by Gladys Rawlins, a social worker in the Philadelphia chapter of the Society of Friends, the Green Circle program is now a national program and run in part by the National Conference of Christians and Jews (NCCJ) a non-profit, non-sectarian organization that deals with diversity issues. In most of the country, adult volunteers run the workshops, but in Greater Boston, 30 high school students a year (or 15 groups of two) are trained by the NCCJ. Each of the teams of two spent 12 hours in elementary school classrooms in a six-month period. In Connolly's and Sawchuk's case, this meant three one-hour sessions with all four of the second grade classes at the Osgood School.

According to Susan Musinsky, the executive director of the NCCJ, training 30 new students every year — which takes an entire weekend at a retreat in Sharon — is much more expensive than training adults who generally stay with the program from 3 to 5 years, but worthwhile.

"The program is mutually beneficial," she said, "it develops both the high school students and the elementary school students. The rewards for the teens are so great — it's amazing how much they grow during this program.

Nancy MacKay, the program coordinator, agrees, "This program is a wonderful opportunity for young people to serve and learn at the same time. A perfect example of leadership and mentoring, the young kids love it and the teens love it."

MacKay also added that the program is student driven. "We really want them to figure out ways and strategies to make this happen."

Connolly, who first heard of the Green Circle at an NCCJ leadership workshop and "begged" Sawchuk to do it with her, says that perhaps the best thing to come out of the experience for her is firm belief that she can make a difference.

"I've been trying to deal with many of these issues on a high school level and this program confirmed for me that if we get to the kids when they're young enough, we might really get through."

Sawchuk admits that at the beginning he was a little skeptical but looking back he says the experience has left him with a feeling of hope.

"At first I wondered whether we were getting through to the students, but I was amazed by how much the kids picked up. I really feel like we might have made a difference in the lives of these second-graders.

May police status report

In his May status report to selectmen, Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said as the warm weather approaches, the workload at the police department increases.

He said in May, the department made 19 arrests. Nine were for outstanding court warrants, four were for minors transporting liquor, one for operating under the influence of liquor, one for a sex offense, one for motor vehicle violations, one for shoplifting, and one for protective custody.

There was one reported Breaking and Entering at a business, Noonan said.

Grant for PALS program

"I am happy to report that again this year I was able to secure a $1,000 grant from the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department's DARE Program to help supplement our PALS program," Police Chief Brian Noonan said. "This money will be used for drug and alcohol awareness supplies. Officer Matos continues to work with the schools, utilizing the training she received through the PALS program, and is having a great deal of success."

Firearms certification held

"During the month of May all officers of the Cohasset Police Department, the Harbormaster, and the Animal Control Officer were recertified in the use of firearms. The recertifications were completed by the department's firearms instructor Det. Frederick Grassie," Police Brian Noonan said.

Bike registration set

The police department will hold a free bike registration from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday (June 17) at the police station. Call 383-1055 for more information.

Menis holds pace in heptathlon championships

By Joe Reardon
Mariner staff

One day into the State Heptathlon Championships at Weston High, Cohasset's Faye Menis was pleased with her results in the first four events of the seven event competition.

Her 16-foot leap in the long jump was a full foot better than last year's meet, when she finished 10th overall. Menis' hurdles mark of 16.3 was a second quicker. And in the shot put and 200 meters, her finishing results were on par with those from '95.

But ask Menis what place she's in and she'll be the first to tell you she's in the dark on that topic.

"The competition is good," she said. "It's hard to tell what place you're in because there are three groups and you only see the girls in your group."

With more than 90 athletes competing this year, the girls have been broken down into groups of around 30. Menis guessed she was in about third or fourth place within her own group, but didn't know how that fared with the rest of the field after one day.

Now a junior, Menis has been Cohasset's top female track athlete since she burst on the scene in the seventh grade. She has been the Skippers' top scorer every year since then and still holds the junior high records in the long jump, triple jump, 400 meters, high and low hurdles.

Unlike the State Class D meet where it was sunny and warm, Tuesday's events were held under threatening skies that produced a light drizzle and cool temperatures. The conditions weren't great, but Menis didn't seem to mind.

"It was a little bit rainy and drizzly, but it was cool so it was nice," she said.

With her two strongest events, the hurdles and long jump, behind her, Menis was particularly focused on the javelin. She considers it to be her weakest event and was looking forward to getting off a good throw with the high jump and 800 meters also scheduled.

"I'm hoping to do better in the javelin because I haven't done that well in the past," Menis said.

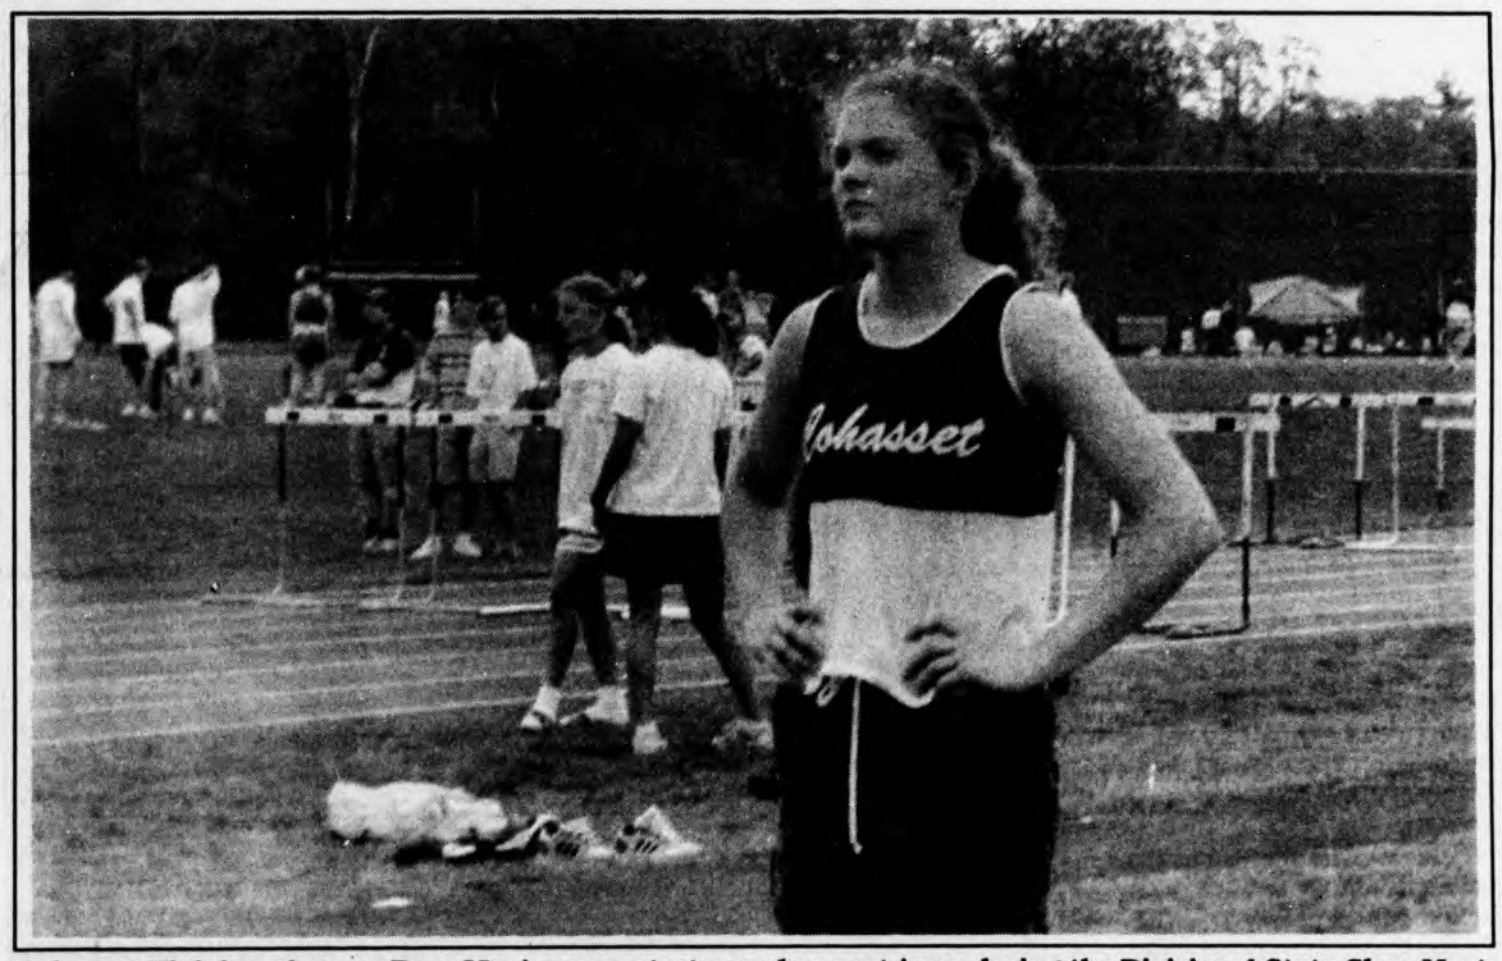
She is far more confident in the high jump and 800 meters. She ran her 800 best last year with a time of 2:44. Menis said she was hoping to run closer to 2:40 on Wednesday in the meet's final event. She has cleared 4'10" in the high jump this spring during a practice, but would be happy if she jumped 4'11" or better.

Menis' training for the meet has been consistent since the Class D competition, though not as well as she hopes it will eventually be next season. Menis has been practicing her throwing events and doing her running on the roads. As for the long jump, she said her first "full-out" jump since the class meet came in the actual competition because of the inadequate long-jump pit which is currently at the high school.

Menis admits not having its own track has hurt the Cohasset track program. She is looking forward to what she believes will be a higher turnout next season when the new all-weather track is completed and the Skippers will no longer have to travel to Scituate for 'home' meets.

"This year I haven't even gone over a full flight of hurdles in practice," Menis said. "Right now I think that's the only thing holding me back from getting a 15-second time.

"It's a lot more work when you don't have the facilities there. It takes more responsibility to do it yourself and a lot of kids don't want to do that."



Cohasset High long-jumper Faye Menis concentrates on her next jump during the Division 4 State Class Meet at Weston High. Menis placed seventh in the event and completed her first day of competition in the State Heptathlon Championships on Tuesday. Menis was scheduled to complete the final three events the following day.

"Could have been's" have always been part of sports.

And this was certainly the case in the state tournament.

For example, the Norwell High baseball team led Archbishop Williams 6-3 in the seventh inning of their second round Division III state tourney game.

But the Bishops rallied for four runs in the seventh and final inning and snatched victory from the jaws of defeat.

Archbishop Williams eventually beat Hanover for the Division III South crown while Norwell went home empty-handed.

This phenomenon can also been seen in boys lacrosse as the Hingham High team reached the state final four for the third straight season.

However, Newton North rained on the Harbormen's parade as North sent Hingham home without a title for the third straight year in the semi-finals.

The Harbormen were ranked among the top team's all season and came together as a club after their bus was pelted with rocks after a match against Weymouth.

With a few breaks, Hingham could have won a few state crowns over the last three years.

But they are without a title and coach John Todd must be shaking his head.

South Shore tennis teams also took it on the chin this year in the state tourney thanks to match-ups with teams from the Bay State League.

The Hingham High boys' team was bounced at home in the first round at the hands of Needham.

The South Shore League champion Norwell High boys' team was dumped by Wellesley in a first round match at NHS.

The South Shore League girls' tennis champions, Scituate High, was also bounced by Wellesley. The match was played at SHS and was the Lady Sailors only loss all season.

And the Hingham High girls' tennis team was wiped out by Brookline 5-0 in the second round. This time Hingham was the visiting team and pretty much knew there was little chance of winning.

What can you say? The South Shore has dominated high school soccer over the last few years. And hockey, softball, basketball and baseball teams have done well. But aside from Duxbury, the tennis wins just haven't been there in the later rounds of the state tourney.

As one area tennis coach put it: "Those (Bay State League) towns really focus on tennis from a young age and it is really hard to pull an upset. Maybe you'll get lucky and win one match but then you still have to win two more to get to three and that is very tough to do. In other sports, like soccer or basketball, underdog winners are more prevalent. A team can play way over its head and with a fluke goal or someone getting in foul trouble, they can find a way to win. But you really don't see that in tennis. Talent is the key and the best teams almost always win."

Reader miffed at lacrosse comment letter

To the Editor:

In an otherwise outstanding article on the Cohasset Little League (June 8), a comment was made and published that demands rebuttal. Noting that a large number of former Little Leaguers participate in the Cohasset High School lacrosse program, former Little League president John Carr says, "Lacrosse players are players afraid to get hit by a baseball."

As a Little League parent and someone who's been involved in Cohasset lacrosse from its inception, I find this observation to be both absurd and gratuitously insulting. Anyone who's had the pleasure of watching our boys more than hold their own over the past few years against Boston College High, or Xaverian, or Falmouth, or Waltham, or any of the other Division 1 and 2 powers we schedule, understands that our courage isn't lacking. Numbers, or depth, perhaps. But not bravery.

Indeed, the excitement of the action, and the challenge of having to constantly be thinking and aware of what's going on are what have brought — and will continue to bring — so many Cohasset kids to lacrosse.

Little League baseball is a fine institution — for the players. But for the high school athlete who wants a sport he can continue in college, baseball may not be as opportune. In 1994, all three Cohasset senior lacrosse players went on to make their college varsities as freshmen. In 1995, that pattern apparently will repeat itself.

In short, the Cohasset High School lacrosse program produces student-athletes who achieve both on and off the field at a high level, are accepted into top schools, and are recruited by those schools' coaches. That's an example you'd think a baseball coach would want to emulate, not trash.

The 'Lady Bugs' give 110 percent

By Alan Genovese
Special to the Mariner

The excitement level of this team couldn't be higher, if it was professional baseball. The effort these girls give to a game makes it worthwhile to coach.

Starting the year off, Emilie Sullivan caught a pop up that set the tone. Enthusiasm and surprises each and every game: Rachel Doyle going after the ball, Molly Flanagan covering first base, Jennifer Buckley scooping the ball and throwing it while she's in the air, and Sera Genovese not allowing anything to pass her when she plays the mound. Kelly Holway has a throw that makes even the coaches' hands sting when catching it. Enthusiasm again marks Libby Meikleham's fielding, Callie Speed's cheering, Kim Ulmer's desire to play at any position, and the "If I don' t succeed the first time try, try again," attitude in the eagerness of Shelly Carter, Jenna Lowe and Jessica O'Connell. The team cheering the base running of Alexis Bugley from second to home gave us the winning run in one game.

And, our girls can hit, too. All our games were high scoring, due to everybody getting hits. Whether it be Anna Jane Murphy's home run, or Sera's two triples, or just the race to make it to first after a power hit never made it past the mound, it was equally exciting. Remember, girls, "bat to ball, bat to ball. "

Recognition goes to our coaches, Denny Meikleham and Dave Holway, for feeling worse than the batter does when she strikes out at their pitch. Third base coach, Cheryl Bugley, no longer advises "maybe you shouldn't go," but rather now, "Go for it" to the player rounding third and heading home. The first base coach, Judithann Murphy's encouragement to "run, run, run, run!" has gotten the girls on base every time.

So, again, enthusiasm and surprises has been the season of the Lady Bugs so far, and as a coach and team sponsor, I'm very proud to be part.

Angels are off to a great start

By Judy Flint and Susan Carter
Special to the Mariner

As their opponents have come to realize, Charlie's Angels are not only in the outfield — they're everywhere! They can field, they can pitch and they can hit!

Catcher Amanda Cellucci is dynamic behind the plate and equally effective when she steps up to bat. Teammates Courtney Anton, Ashley Ulmer and Siobhan Cullinan have also stepped in to catch, as well as provide some very well-timed hits. Betsy Anderson has also caught, but it is her finesse with the infield and her red-hot bat that have really made a difference this season.

Sarah Kidder, along with Emily Coyne and Stephanie Cook, have proven to be invaluable on the mound. Not only can they pitch, but their outstanding fielding has saved many a run, to say nothing of their awesome hitting!

Kara Gaughen has turned out to be an incredible asset at first base, making one great play after another. She shares the first base duties with spunky Jen Meehan, and both have had great success at the plate as well.

Carlie Carter, Caitlin Flint, and Kerry McCarthy have proven they can wear many hats. Carlie at third, Caitlin at shortstop, and Kerry at second have proven to be an unbeatable combination. But they can also be thrown in the outfield at a moment's notice and come through with a great play. And, can these three girls hit!

The wonderful sense of teamwork displayed by Charlie's Angels, the team sponsored by Bridge-Wey Tailors and Charlie Flint, has led to a 4-1 record. More importantly, their wonderful sense of humor has led to many hours of fun!

Lacrosse holds breakup dinner; elects 1996 captains

Cohasset High School's varsity and JV lacrosse players, coaches and parents held their annual break-up dinner Wednesday, June 7, with head coach Ken Ekberg praising outgoing captains Chris Adams and Ben Redfield for their leadership. Ekberg announced the election of juniors Ken Leahy and Chris McKenna as the 1996 squad's captains.

The Skippers, who finished at 8-8 with their third consecutive trip to the state championship tournament, were saluted by Ekberg for their 11-10 overtime win against Falmouth, one of the state's top teams, and their 9-8 loss to Weymouth in the tournament. "These were two of the greatest games a Cohasset lacrosse team has played," Ekberg told the group.

Chris Adams, noted Ekberg, set a Cohasset career scoring record despite missing four games with a badly sprained ankle, and Ben Redfield also broke the century mark to move into fourth place on the all-time list. Adams will attend Division 3 national power Connecticut College as a top attack recruit, and Redfield has been recruited to play midfield for Rhode Island's Roger Williams College, two-time champions of New England's Pilgrim Conference.

Introducing next years captains, Ekberg pointed out that attackman Ken Leahy was the team's 1995 season scoring leader with 49 points. Midfielder Chris McKenna, Ekberg said, has developed one of the hardest shots in the state.

The breakup dinner also saluted the junior varsity squad, coached by Boston Blazer career high scorer Tom Carmean and former University of Michigan goalie Chuck Jaffe. The JV finished at 10-3-1, with upset wins over Boston College, Xaverian and Duxbury. Carmean singled out captains Adam Donovan and Jamie Buick, both freshmen, for praise. Buick, with 53 points, was the team's high scorer, and earned a varsity letter along with another freshman, defenseman John Kascmeyer. The junior varsity, it was noted, has been invited to postseason play, too, and will appear at the second annual statewide Massachusetts Bay Youth Lacrosse Jamboree, scheduled for Sunday, June 18, at Lincoln-Sudbury High School.

In recapping the varsity season, Ekberg said he was looking forward to even better results in 1996. "Our sophomores on defense, Matt Belson, Doug Cameron and goalie Ely Kahn, were as good as anyone their age in the state," he said. "We will be very tough to score on next year."

Graceful on the court

Cohasset High's No. 1 singles player, Heather Conte, keeps a steady eye on her opponent during a match against Scituate. The Skippers got a second chance in the tournament after Canton disqualified itself for using an ineligible player.

Lacrose skill development clinics for grades 4, 5 and 6

The Cohasset recreation department will accept telephone registrations at their office, at 383-6791, for an evening lacrosse skill development program, designed for youngsters who will enter grades 4, 5 and 6 in Sept., 1995.

Lacrosse clinics are designed to teach fundamental skills and concepts of lacrosse and will meet Tuesday and Thursday evenings, 6:30 to 8 p.m., at Osgood School Field, beginning Tuesday, June 13, through Thursday, June 29.

This specialized developmental program will be instructed by local college and high school lacrosse players and the fee will be $26 per person for the six sessions. Participants will need a helmet and lacrosse stick to enroll. Other equipment will be unnecessary as no contact scrimmages will be held.

APPLICATIONS FOR SOUTH SHORE SOCCER CAMP — 1995

Registrations for South Shore Soccer Camp have begun for boys and girls ages 8-18. This is South Shore Soccer Camp's fifth year of operation in Cohasset. If you are interested in registering for South Shore Soccer Camp, it is suggested that you write to the Cohasset Recreation Department, first floor, Cohasset Town Hall, or call 383-6791 in the near future, to be assured enrollment.

South Shore Soccer Camp will be offered to both girls and boys during the weeks of Monday to Friday, July 31 to Aug. 4, and Aug. 7 to Aug. 11. Should a camper wish to attend both camp weeks, this will now be possible. In order to choose the week of camp you desire, early registration is advised as both camp weeks must be restricted in number.

Camp meets daily, Mondays to Fridays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The cost for camp is $165 per week and discounts for multiple weeks and subsequent children are available. South Shore Soccer Camp represents top-flight training, delivered by top college and high school coaches and players from the New England area.

VIP SOCCER CAMP REGISTRATIONS

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for VIP Soccer Camp, for children ages 4 to 7 years.

VIP Soccer Camp offers two programs for boys and girls, ages 4 to 7. ABC Soccer is especially designed for 4- and 5-year-olds and meets 8 to 9:30 a.m., Monday to Friday, July 17 to 21. The cost is $40 for the week.

Also offered by VIP is a three-hour per day program, meeting from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Monday to Friday, July 17 to 21, for 6- and 7-year-olds. The cost is $70 for the week.

Both VIP programs will be held this year at the front field of Cohasset High School.

BASEBALL CAMP

The Cohasset recreation department is accepting registrations for a week-long baseball camp for youngsters ages 5 to 12 years at the recreation office, first floor, Cohasset town hall.

The South Shore Baseball Club has been contracted again this year to provide baseball camp, which will be held the week of Monday, June 26, at Miliken Field.

Two camps are available to youngsters as follows: Full day, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., camp for ages 7 and over and a half day, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. camp is available for 5- and 6-year-olds.

The week long camp costs $120 per child for the full-day program, and $70 per child for the half-day program. Camp ends Friday, June 30.

The South Shore Baseball Club, located at the South Shore Sports Center, Hingham, operates year round baseball instruction and has baseball camp for Cohasset Recreation for five years.

Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for baseball camp on a space available basis and registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, first floor of Cohasset town hall.

A weekend of baseball

CYBA, the Cohasset Youth Baseball Association invites one and all to attend this weekend's youth baseball games. Come out to cheer for your favorite teams and see some of the very best young baseball talent on the South Shore.

There are playoff, exhibition, and regular season games for your enjoyment at all age levels, including the National League Championship game (8 years old) and two All-Star games (9-12 yrs.). There are also many regularly scheduled games at all age levels, including the undefeated Senior Little League team (14-15 yrs.) and the powerful Cohasset Land Sharks (16-18 yrs.).

Families of players are reminded that the weekend gets off to a gala beginning with the Annual Little League Family Picnic, which will be held at 5 p.m. tomorrow just prior to the Major League All-Star game.

when you hit the big city for some fun with your friends.

Last Friday night, I was sitting in the Comedy Connection at Faneuil Hall waiting for Richard "The Platypus Man" Jeni to start when Patriots quarterback Drew Bledsoe ambled in.

Drew was accompanied by a huge unrecognizable Patriot and Sports Illustrated writer Peter King. (King is the guy who does the half-time shows on Monday Night football and looks like Norm from 'Cheers'.)

Anyway, Drew had a killer tan and was decked out in a T-shirt and shorts. He had a pitcher of beer with his teammate and King and munched on some appetizers.

Bledsoe is taller and lankier than he appears on TV and also appears to enjoy a bit of dip between his cheek and gum (during the show Drew was seen spitting into a plastic cup every so often.) I used to chew tobacco when I played baseball and I thought I looked cool. But that was until I swallowed some tobacco juice once and turned a whiter shade of pale and tossed my cookies.

Bledsoe also laughed heartily during the show, especially at the parts when "The Platypus Man" made fun of McDonald's and the NFL. (Bledsoe does commercials for McDonald's.)

Three weeks ago I saw Boston Bruin superstar Adam Oates at Clarke's in Faneuil Hall. (No I don't live in Faneuil Hall. I only go there to heckle the tourists.)

"Oatsie" (Hockey players always take a guy's last name and add "sie" at the end for an instant nickname. So I'm "McKeesie") was decked out in black jeans, white T-shirt, black vest and some nasty Cowboy boots. He also had a killer tan.

"Oatsie" was quietly drinking with a couple non-hockey player friends.

After about an hour, "Oatsie" nodded his head toward one of his friends and suddenly all four guys put their drinks down and headed out the door with "Oatsie."

It would be great to have an entourage like that. I have a tough enough time getting the attention of a waiter.

Well, that all the sports celebrity news for now. I'll let you know when I finally get to hang with Jose.

Ryan Baker had a great showing for the Hanover Indians in the baseball tourney, but the work of Christian Frattasio behind the plate and at bat for Hanover shouldn't be overlooked. Frattasio, who along with Baker will be missed next year, filled in for Chris Carr whose injured hand prevented him from catching.

Frattasio, who bats left-handed, has got to have one of the sweetest swings on the South Shore. A line-drive hitter, he makes good contact and can hit to all fields with equal power. The only comparison of his swing I can make is that of the Texas Rangers' Will Clark.
